INTRODUCTION

Ī

Two periods of our early history promise most for the future of English literature—the end of the seventh with the eighth century; the end of the twelfth century with the thirteenth.

In the first a flourishing vernacular poetry is secondary in importance to the intellectual accomplishment of men like Bede and Alcuin (to name only the greatest and the last of a line of scholars and teachers) who, drawing their inspiration from Ireland and still more from Italy direct, made all the knowledge of the time their own, and learned to move easily in the disciplined forms of Latin prose.

During the second the impulse again came from without. In twelfth-century France the creative imagination was set free. In England, which from the beginning of the tenth century had depended more and more on France for guidance, the nobles, clergy, and entertainers, in whose hands lay the fortunes of literature, had a community of interest with their French compeers that has never since been approached. So England shared early in the break with tradition; and during the thirteenth century the native stock is almost hidden by the brilliant growth of a new graft.

Every activity of the mind was quickened. A luxuriant invention of forms distinguished the Gothic style in architecture. All the decorative arts showed a parallel enrichment. Oxford (at least to insular eyes) was beginning to rival Paris in learning, and to contribute to the over-production of clerks which at first extended the province of the Church, and finally, by breaking the bounds set between ecclesiastics and laymen, played an important part in the secularization of letters. The friars, whose foundation was the last great reform of the mediaeval Church, were at the height of their good fame; and one of them, the Franciscan Roger Bacon, by his work in philosophy, criticism, and physical science, raised the name of English thinkers to an eminence unattained since Bede. If among the older monastic orders feverish and sometimes extravagant reforms are symptoms of decline, the richness of Latin chronicles like those of Matthew Paris of St. Albans is evidence that in some of the great abbeys the monks were still learned and eloquent. Nor was Latin the only medium in which educated Englishmen were at home. They wrote French familiarly, and to some extent repaid their debt to France by transcribing and preserving Continental compositions that would else have perished.

Apart from all these activities, the manifestations of a new spirit in English vernacular works are so important, and the break with the past is so sharp, that the late twelfth century and the thirteenth would be chosen with more justice than Chaucer's time as the starting-point for a study of modern literature.

Then romance was established in English, whether we use the word to mean the imaginative searching of dark places, or in the more general sense of story-telling unhampered by a too strict regard for facts. Nothing is more remarkable in pre-Conquest works than the Anglo-Saxon's dislike of exaggeration and his devotion to plain matter of fact. Here is the account of the whales in the far North that King Alfred received from Ohthere (a Norseman, of course, but it is indifferent):—'they are eight and forty ells long, and the biggest fifty ells long'. Compare with this parsimony the full-blooded description of the griffins in Mandeville:—'But o griffoun hath the body more gret, and is more strong, panne eight lyouns, of suche lyouns as ben o this half; and more gret and strongere pan an hundred egles suche as we han amonges vs, &c.', and you have a rough measure of the progress of fiction.

To take pleasure in stories is not a privilege reserved for favoured generations: but special conditions had transformed this pleasure into a passion. When Edward I became King in 1272, Western Europe had enjoyed a long period of internal peace, during which national hatreds burnt low. The breaking down of barriers between Bretons and French, Welsh and English, brought into the main stream of European literature the Celtic vein of idealism and delicate fancy. At the universities, in the Crusades, in the pilgrimages to Rome or Compostella, the nations mingled, each bringing from home some contribution to the common stock of stories; each gaining new experiences of the outside world, fusing them, and repeating them with embellishments. To those who stayed at home came the minstrels in the heyday of their craft—they were freemen of every Christian land who reported whatever was marvellous or amusing-and at second hand the colours of the rediscovered world seemed no less brave. It was an age greedy for entertainment that fed a rich sense of comedy on the jostling life around it; and to serve its ideals called up the great men of the past-Orpheus opening the way to fairyland, the heroes of the Trojan war, Alexander: Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table and Merlin the enchanter; Charlemagne with his peers-or won back from the shadows not Eurydice alone, but Helen and Criseyde, Guinevere and Ysolde, Rymenhild and Blauncheflour.

While she still claimed to direct public taste, the Church could not be indifferent to the spread of romance. A policy of uniform repression was no longer possible. Her real power to suppress books was ineffective to bind busy tongues and minds; popular movements were assured of a measure of practical tolerance when order competed with order and church with church for the goodwill of the people; and even if the problem had been well defined, a disciplined attitude unvarying throughout all the divisions of the Church was not to be expected when her mantle covered clerks ranging in character from the strictest ascetic to that older Falstaff who passed under the name of Golias and found his own Muse in the tavern,—

Tales versus facio quale vinum bibo; Nihil possum scribere nisi sumpto cibo; Nihil valet penitus quod ieiunus scribo,— Nasonem post calices carmine praeibo!

So it came about that while some of the clergy denounced all minstrels as 'ministers of Satan', others made a truce with the more honest among them, and helped them to add to their repertories the lives of saints. Officially 'trifles and trotevales' were still censured: but it seemed good to mould the chansons de geste to pious uses, and to purify the court of King Arthur, which popularity had led into dissolute ways, by introducing the quest of the Graal. And if Rolle preached sound doctrine when he ranked among the Sins of the Mouth 'to syng seculere sanges and lufe pam', their style and music were not despised as baits to catch the ears of the frivolous: when a singer began the lover of secular songs would be tempted to listen; but he would stay to hear a song of the Joys of the Virgin, to whose cult the period owes its best devotional poetry.

Ase y me rod pis ender dai By grene wode to seche play, Mid herte y pohte al on a may, Suetest of alle pinge,—

The power of the Church to mould the early growth of vernacular literature is so often manifested that there is a risk of underestimating the compromises and surrenders which are the signs of its wane. The figures of romance invaded the churches themselves, creeping into the carvings of the portals, along the choir-stalls, and into the historiated margins of the service books. Ecclesiastics collected and multiplied stories to adorn their sermons or illustrate their manuals of vices and virtues. In the lives of saints marvels accumulated until the word 'legend' became a synonym for an untrue tale. Though there are moments in the fourteenth century when the preponderance of the clerical over the secular element in literature seems as great as ever, by the end of the Middle Ages the trend of the conflict is plain. It is the Church that draws back to attend to her own defences, which the domestic growth of pious fictions has made everywhere vulnerable. But imaginative literature, growing always stronger and more confident, wins full secular liberty.

Emancipation from the bondage of fact, and to some extent from ecclesiastical censorship, coincided with the acquisition of a new freedom in the form of English poetry. Old English had a single metre—the long alliterative line without rime. It was best suited to narrative; it was unmusical in the sense that it could not be sung; it had marked proclivities towards rant and noise; and like blank verse it degenerated easily into mongrel prose.

Degeneration was far advanced in the eleventh century; and about the end of the twelfth some large-scale experiments show that writers were no longer content with the old medium. In Layamon, the last great poem in this metre before the fourteenth century, internal rime and assonance are common. Orm adopted the unrimed septenarius from Latin, but counted his syllables so faithfully as to produce an intolerable monotony. Then French influence turned the scale swiftly and decisively in favour of rime, so that in the extant poetry of the thirteenth century alliteration is a secondary principle or a casual ornament, but never takes the place of rime.

The sudden and complete eclipse of a measure so firmly rooted in tradition is surprising enough; but the wealth and elaborateness of the new forms that replaced it are still more matter for wonder. It is natural to think of the poets before Chaucer as children learning their art slowly and painfully, and often stumbling on the way. Yet in this one point of metrical technique they seem to reach mastery at a bound.

That the development of verse forms took place outside of English is part of the explanation. Rimed verse had its origin in Church Latin. In the monastic schools the theory of classical and post-classical metres was a principal study; and the practical art of chant was indispensable for the proper conduct of the services. Under these favourable conditions technical development was rapid, so that in such an early example of the rimed stanza as the following, taken from a poem that Godescale wrote in exile about the year 845,— Magis mihi, miserule, Flere libet, puerule,

Plus plorare quam cantare
Carmen tale iubes quale, Amor care.
O, cur iubes canere?

the arrangement of longer and shorter lines, the management of rime or assonance, and the studied grouping of consonant sounds, give rather the impression of too much than too little artifice.

Poetae Latini Aevi Carolini, vol. iii (ed. L. Traube), p. 731.

From Church Latin rime passed into French, and with the twelfth century entered on a new course of development at the hands of the trouvères and the minstrels. The trouvères, or 'makers', studied versification and music as a profession, and competed in the weaving of ingenious patterns. Since their living depended on pleasing their audience, those minstrels who were not themselves composers spared no pains to sing or recite well the compositions of others; and good execution encouraged poets to try more difficult forms.

The varied results obtained in two such excellent schools of experience were offered to the English poets of the thirteenth century in exchange for the monotony of the long line; and their choice was unhesitating. In an age of lyrical poetry they learned to sing where before they could only declaim: and because the great age of crastsmanship had begun, the most intricate patterns pleased them best. Chaucer was perhaps not yet born when the over-elaboration of riming metres in English drew a protest from Robert Mannyng:1 and when, after a period of hesitancy, rimed verse regained its prestige in Chaucer's prime, nameless writers again chose or invented complex stanza forms and sustained them throughout long poems. If The Pearl stood alone it might be accounted a literary tour de force: the York and Towneley plays compel the conclusion that a high standard of metrical workmanship was appreciated by the common people.

Thus far, by way of generalization and without the caveats proper to a literary history, I have indicated some aspects of the preceding period that are important for an understanding

If it were made in ryme couwee,
Or in strangere, or enterlace,
Pat rede Inglis it ere inowe of the fourteenth century. But it would be misleading to pass on without a word of reservation. There is reason to suppose that the extant texts from the thirteenth century give a truer reflection of the tastes of the upper classes, who were in closest contact with the French, than of the tastes of the people. But however this may be, they do not authorize us to speak for every part of the country. All the significant texts come from the East or the South—especially the western districts of the South, where an exceptional activity is perhaps to be connected with the old preference of the court for Winchester. In the North and the North-West a silence of five centuries is hardly broken.

II

Judged by what survives, the literary output of the first half of the fourteenth century was small in quantity; though it must be remembered that, unlike the thirteenth and sixteenth centuries which made a fresh start and depended almost entirely on their own production, the fourteenth inherited and enjoyed a good stock of verse, to which the new compositions are a supplement.

Our first impression of this new material is negative and disappointing. The production of rimed romances falls off: their plots become increasingly absurd and mechanical; the action, so swift in the early forms, moves sluggishly through a maze of decorative descriptions; and their style at its best has the pretty inanity of Sir Thopas. The succession of merry tales—such as Dame Siriz, or The Fox and the Wolf 1 where Reynard, Isengrim, and Chauntecleer make their first bow in English—is broken until the appearance of the Canterbury Tales themselves. To find secular lyrics we must turn to the very beginning or the very end of the century, and Chaucer himself does not recover the fresh gaiety of the earlier time.

The decline of these characteristic thirteenth-century types becomes less surprising when we notice that literature has changed camps. The South, more especially the South-West, is now almost silent: the North and the North-West reach their literary period. Minot and Rolle are Northerners, Wiclif is a Yorkshireman by birth, the York and Towneley Miracle cycles are both from the North, and with Barbour the literature of the Scots dialect begins: Robert Mannyng belongs to the North-East Midlands; while Sir Gawayne, The Pearl, and The Destruction of Troy represent the North-This predominance in the present volume rests on no mere chance of selection, since the Northern (Egerton) version of Mandeville might have been preferred to the Cotton: and if the number of extracts were to be increased, the texts that first come to mind-Cursor Mundi (about 1300). 1 Prick of Conscience (about 1340), Morte Arthure (about 1360), the Chester Plays-are Northern and North-Western.

It is impossible to give more than a partial explanation of the change in the area of production. But as the kinds of poetry that declined early in the fourteenth century are those that owed most to French influence, it is reasonable to assume that in the South the impulse that produced them had spent its force. The same pause is observable at the same time in France, where it coincides with the transition from oral poetry to more reflective compositions written for the eye of a reader. It is the pause between the passing of the minstrels and the coming of men of letters.

Ъ

Such changes were felt first in the centres of government, learning, and commerce, whence ideas and fashions spread very slowly to the country districts. At this time the North, and above all the North-West, was the backward quarter of England, thinly populated and in great part uncultivated. An industrial age had not yet dotted it with inland cities; and while America was still unknown the western havens were neglected. In these old-fashioned parts the age of minstrel poetry was prolonged, and the wave of inspiration from France, though it came late, stirred the North and North-West after the South had relapsed into mediocrity or silence.

So, about the middle of the century, imaginative poetry found a new home in the West-Midlands. As before, poets turned to French for their subjects, and often contented themselves with free adaptation of French romances. They accepted such literary conventions as the Vision, which was borrowed from the Roman de la Rose to be the frame of Wynnere and Wastoure (1352)² and The Parlement of the Thre Ages,³ before it was used in Piers Plowman and The Pearl and by Chaucer. But time and distance had weakened the French influence, and the new school of poets did not catch, as the Southern poets did, the form and spirit of their models.

They preferred the unrimed alliterative verse, which from pre-Conquest days must have lived on in the remote Western counties without a written record; and for a generation rime is overshadowed. The suddenness and importance of this revival in a time otherwise barren of poetry will appear from a list of the principal alliterative poems that are commonly assigned to the third quarter of the century:—Wynnere and ^{&#}x27; See p. 150.

^{*} Ed. Gollancz, Oxford 1915.

Wastoure, The Parlement of the Thre Ages, Joseph of Arimathie (the first English Graal romance), William of Palerne, Piers Plowman (A-text), Patience, Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight, The Destruction of Troy, Morte Arthure.

At the time alliterative verse was fitted to become the medium of popular literature. Prose would not serve, because its literary life depends on books and readers. Up to the end of the century (if we exclude sermons and religious or technical treatises, where practical considerations reinforced a Latin tradition) the function of prose in English literature is to translate Latin or French prose; and even this narrow province is sometimes invaded by verse. Yet it was not easy to write verse that depended on number of syllables, quantity, or rime. The fall of inflexions brought confusion on syllabic metres; there were great changes in the quantity and quality of vowels; and these disturbances affected the dialects unevenly.⁵ It must have been hard enough for a poet to make rules for himself: but popularity involved the recital of his work by all kinds of men in all kinds of English. when the rimes would be broken and the rhythm lost. It is perhaps unfair to call Michael of Northgate's doggetel (p. 33) to witness the misfortunes of rimed metres. But the text of Sir Orfee from the Auchinleck manuscript shows how often Englishmen who were nearly contemporary with the composer had lost the tune of his verses. The more fortunate makers of alliterative poems, whose work depended on the stable yet elastic frame of stress and initial consonants, possessed a master-key to the dialects.

Adaptability made easier the diffusion of alliterative verse: but its revival was not due to a deliberate choice on practical grounds. It was a phase of a larger movement, which may be described as a weakening of foreign and learned influences, and a recovery of the native stock. And the metrical form is only the most obvious of the old-fashioned elements that reappeared. In spirit, too, the authors of the alliterative school have many points of kinship with the Old English They are more moderate than enthusiastic. Left to themselves, their imaginations move most easily among sombre shapes and in sombre tones. They have not the intellectual brilliance and the wit of the French poets; and when they laugh-which is not often-the lightness of the thirteenth century is rarer than the rough note of the comic scenes in the Towneley plays. It is hard to say how much the associations and aptitudes of the verse react on its content: but Sumer is icumen in, which is the essence of thirteenth-century poetry, is barely conceivable in Old English, where even the cuckoo's note sounded melancholy; and it would come oddly from the poets of the middle fourteenth century, who have learned from the French trouvères the convention of spring, with sunshine, flowers, and singing birds, but seem unable to put away completely the memory of winter and rough weather.

³ See the Appendix.

In the last quarter of the century the tide of foreign influence runs strong again; and the work of Gower and Chaucer discloses radical changes in the conditions of literature which are the more important because they are permanent. The literary centre swings back to the capital—London now instead of Winchester—which henceforth provides the models for authors of any pretensions throughout England and across the Scottish border. In Chaucer we have for the first time a layman, writing in English for secular purposes, who from the range and quality of his work may fairly claim to be ranked among men of letters. The strictly clerical writers had been content to follow the Scriptures, the Fathers and commentators, the service books and legendaries; and Chaucer does not neglect their tradition. The minstrels had exploited a popular taste for merry tales 'that sownen into synne'; and he borrowed so gladly from them that many have doubted his repentance.² But his models are men of letters:—the Latin poets headed by Ovid, who was Gower's favourite too; French writers, from the satirical Jean de Meung to makers of studied 'balades, roundels, virelayes' like Machaut and Deschamps; and the greater Italian group-Boccaccio, Petrarch, and Dante. Keeping such company, he was bound to reject the rusticity of the alliterative school, and the middle way followed by those who added a tag of rime at the end of a rimeless series (as in Sir Gawayne), or invented stanzas in which alliteration remains, but is subservient to rime (as in The Pearl and the York plays). After his day, even for Northerners who wish to write well, there will be no more 'rum-ram-ruf by lettre '."

Ш

In outlining the main movements of the century, I have mentioned incidentally the fortunes of certain kinds of composition,—the restriction of the lyrical form to devotional uses; the long dearth in the records of humorous tales; the decadence of romances in rime, and the flourishing of alliterative romances. The popular taste for stories was still unsatisfied, and guided authors, from Robert Mannyng to Chaucer,

And for to speke of other holynesse,
He hath in prose translated Boece,
And of the Wrechede Engendrynge of Mankynde
As man may in pope Innocent ifynde,
And made the Lyfe also of Seynt Cecile;
He made also, gon ys a grete while,
Origenes upon the Maudeleyne.

(Legend of Good Women, Prologue A, Il. 424 ff.)

Parson's Tale, at the end.

Prologue to Parson's Tale, 1. 43.

The early references point to the representation of single plays or small groups of connected scenes; and such isolated pieces survive as long as there are Miracles: Hull, for instance, specialized on a play of Noah's Ship. But now we have to record the appearance of series or cycles of plays, covering in chronological order the whole span of sacred history. Complete cycles were framed on the Continent as early as the end of the thirteenth century. In England they are represented by the York, Towneley (Wakefield), and Chester plays, and the so-called Ludus Coventriae. There are also records or fragments of cycles from Beverley, Coventry, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and Norwich. The presentation of the cycle sometimes occupied a day (York), sometimes two or three successive days (Chester), and sometimes a part was carried over to the next year's festival (Ludus Coventriae).

The production of a long series of scenes in the open requires fine weather, and once the close connexion with the church services had been broken, there was a tendency to throw forward the presentation into May or June. The Chester plays were given in Whitsun-week—at least in later times. But normally the day chosen in fourteenth-century England was the Feast of Corpus Christi (the first Thursday after Trinity Sunday), which was made universal throughout the Church in 1311. So the Miracles get the generic name of 'Corpus Christi Plays'.

The feature of the Corpus Christi festival was its procession. As a result either of inclusion in this procession or of imitation, the cycles came to be played processionally: each play had its stage on wheels which halted at fixed stations in the streets, and at each station the play was reenacted. This was the usage at York, Wakefield, Chester, Coventry, and Beverley. The older practice of presentation on fixed stages was followed in the Ludus Coventriae.

Our last records from the end of the thirteenth century indicated that the open-air Miracle had been disowned by the Church from which it sprang. Yet a century later processional performances appear on a scale that postulates strong and competent management. In the interim the control of the great cycles had passed from the clergy to the municipalities, who laid upon each guild of craftsmen within their jurisdiction the duty of presenting a play. Ecclesiastics still wrote Miracles, and occasionally performed them; but when Canterbury, London, Salisbury, Winchester, Oxford, which have no extant texts and few records of popular performances, are named against York, Wakefield, Chester, Coventry, Beverley, it is obvious that official Church influences were no longer the chief factor in the development of Miracles. their growth and survival in England the cycles depended on the interest of powerful corporations, willing to undertake the financial responsibility of their production, and able to maintain them against the attacks of the Lollards, or change of policy in the orthodox Church, or the fickleness of fashion in entertainment.

The steps by which the English guilds assumed the guardianship of the plays cannot now be retraced. We must be content to note that the undertaking called for just that combination of religious duty, civic patriotism, and pride of craft that inspired the work of the guilds in their best days. And the clergy had every reason to welcome the disciplining by secular authority of a wayward offspring that had grown beyond their own control The York texts, which bring us nearest to the time when the corporations and guilds first took charge of the Miracles, are very creditable to the taste of the city, and must represent a reform on the irresponsible productions that scandalized the thirteenth century. The vein of coarseness in some of the comic scenes of the Towneley group seems to be due to a later recrudescence of incongruous elements.

The last great change to be noted was inevitable when the plays became popular: they were spoken in English and in rimed verse, with only an occasional tag or stage direction or hymn in Latin to show their origin. The variety of the texts, and of the modes and purposes of their representation, make it impossible to assign a date to the transition that would be generally applicable; and its course was not always the same. There is an example of direct translation from Latin in the Shrewsbury fragments,1 which contain one actor's cues and parts in three plays: first the Latin foundation is given in verse or prose, and then its expansion in English alternate rime. That translations were sometimes made from the French is proved by the oldest known manuscript of a Miracle in English—an early fourteenth-century fragment of a Nativity play, consisting of a speech in French followed by its rendering in the same stanza form.² But there is no reason to doubt that as English gained ground and secularization became more complete, original composition appeared side by side with translation.

² See The Times Literary Supplement of May 26 and June 2, 1921. The fragment comes from Bury St. Edmunds. The dialect is E. Midland.

⁸ On the production of Miracle plays see L. Toulmin Smith, Introduction to York Plays, Oxford 1885; and A. F. Leach in An English Miscellany presented to Dr. Furnivall, pp. 205 ff.

For one other kind of writing the fourteenth century is notable—its longer commentaries on contemporary life and the art of living. In the twelfth century England had an important group of satirical poets who wrote in Latin; and in the thirteenth there are many French and a few English satires. Their usual topic was the corruption of the religious orders, varied by an occasional attack on some detail of private folly, such as extravagance in dress or the pride of serving-men. These pieces are mostly in the early French manner, where so much wit tempers the indignation that one doubts whether the satirist would be really happy if he succeeded in destroying the butts of his ridicule.

This is not the spirit of the fourteenth century, when a darker side of life is turned up and reported by men whose eyes are not quick to catch brightness. The number of short occasional satires in English increases, but they are seldom gay. The greater writers-Rolle, Wiclif, Langland, Gower-were obsessed by the troubles of their time, and are less satirists than moralists. Certainly the events of the century gave little cause for optimism. The wane of enthusiasm throughout Europe and the revival of national jealousies are evident very early in the failure of all attempts to organize an effective Crusade after 1291, when the Turks conquered the last Christian outposts in Palestine. There was no peace, for the harassing wars with Scotland were followed by the long series of campaigns against France that sapped the strength of both countries for generations. The social and economic organization was shaken by the severest famines (1315-21) and the greatest pestilence (1340) in English history, and both famine and plague came back more than once before the century was done. The conflict of popes and anti-popes divided the Western Church, while England faced the domestic problem of Lollardry. There was civil revolt in 1381; and the century closed with the deposition of Richard II. A modern historian balances the account with the growth of parliamentary institutions, the improving status of the labouring classes, and the progress of trade: but in so far as these developments were observable at all by contemporary writers, they were probably interpreted as signs of general decay.

In such an atmosphere the serene temper with which Robert Mannyng handles the sins and follies of his generation did not last long. Rolle tried to associate with men in order to improve their way of life: but his intensely personal attitude towards every problem, and the low value he set on the quality of reasonableness, made success impossible; and after a few querulous outbursts against his surroundings, he found his genius by withdrawing into pure idealism.

Wiclif was the one writer who was also a practical reformer. Having made up his mind that social evils could be remedied only through the Church, and that the first step was a thorough reform of the government, doctrine, and ministers of the Church, he acted with characteristic logic. The vices and follies of the people he regarded as secondary, and refused to dissipate his controversial energies upon them. His strength was reserved for a grim, ordered battle against ecclesiastical abuses; and while he pulled down, he did not neglect to lay foundations that outlasted his own defeat.

Piers Plowman gives a full picture of the times and their bewildering effect on the mind of a sincere and moderate man. Its author belonged to the loosely organized secular clergy who, by reason of their middle position, served as a kind of cement in a ramshackle society. He has no new system and no practical schemes of reform to expound—only perplexing dreams of a simple Christian who, with Conscience and Reason as his guides, faces in turn the changing shapes of evil. He attacks them bravely enough, and still they seem to evade him; because he shrinks from destroying their roots when he finds them too closely entwined with things to which his habits or affections cling. In the end he cannot find a sure temporal foothold: yet he has no vision of a Utopia to come in which society will be reorganized by men's efforts. That idea brought no comfort to his generation who, standing on the threshold of a new order, looked longingly backward.

Passing over Gower, whose direct studies of contemporary conditions were written in Latin and French, we come round again to Chaucer. He has not Rolle's idealism, or Wiclif's fighting spirit, or Langland's earnestness—in fact, he has no great share of moral enthusiasm. A man of the world with keen eyes and the breadth of outlook and sympathy that Gower lacked, he is at home in a topsy-turvy medley of things half-dead with things half-grown, and the thousand disguises of convention and propriety through which the new life peeped to mock at its puzzled and despairing repressors were to him a never-ending entertainment. Ubique iam abundat turpitudo terrena, says Rolle in an alliterative flight, vilissima voluptas in viris vacillat; ... bellant ut bestiae; breviantur beati; nullus est nimirum qui nemini non nocet. That was one side, but it was not the side that interested Chaucer. He had the spirit of the thirteenth-century poets grown up, with more experience, more reflection, and a mellower humour, but not less good temper and capacity for enjoyment. He no longer laughs on the slightest occasion for sheer joy of living: but he would look elvishly at Richard Rolle-a hermit who made it a personal grievance that people left him solitary, a fugitive from his fellows who unconsciously satisfied a very human and pleasing love for companionship and admiration by becoming the centre of a coterie of women recluses. A world that afforded such infinite amusement to a quiet observer was after all not a bad place to live in.

IV

Chaucer, who suffers when read in extracts, is not represented in this book, although without him fourteenth-century literature is a body without a head. But in the choice of literary forms and subjects, I have aimed at illustrating the variety of interest that is to be found in the writings of lesser men.

It may be asked whether the choice of specimens gives a true idea of the taste and accomplishment of the age. This issue is raised by Professor Carleton Brown's Afterword in the second volume of his Register of Middle English Religious and Didactic Verse, a book that will be to generations of investigators a model of unselfish research. There he emphasizes the popularity of long poems, and especially of long didactic poems, as evidenced by the relatively great number of manuscript copies that survive. The Prick of Conscience leads with ninety-nine manuscripts, against sixty-nine of The Canterbury Tales, and forty-seven of Piers Plowman. What is to be said of a book that, impoverished by the exclusion of Chaucer, passes by also the most popular poem of his century?

I would rest an apology on the conditions under which manuscript copies came into being and survived; and begin with Michael of Northgate as he brings his Ayenbyte to an end in the October of 1340, before the short days and the numbing cold should come to make writing a pain. The book has no elegance that would commend it to special care, for Dan Michael is a dry practical man, as indifferent to the graces of style as to the luxury of silky vellum and miniatures stiff with gold and colour. But from his cell it goes into the library of his monastery—a library well ordered and well catalogued, and (as if to guarantee security) boasting the continuous possession of books that Gregory the Great gave to the first missionaries. We know its place exactly—the fourth shelf of press XVI. And there it remained safe until the days of intelligent private collectors, passing finally with the Arundel library to the British Museum. The course was not often so smooth, for of two dozen manuscripts left by Michael to St. Augustine's, Dr. James, in the year 1903, could identify only four survivors in as many different libraries. But the example is enough to illustrate a proposition that will not easily be refuted:—the chances of an English mediaeval manuscript surviving greatly depend on its eligibility for a place in the library of a religious house, since these are the chief sources of the manuscripts that have come down to us.

The attitude of the Church towards the vernacular literature of the later Middle Ages did not differ materially from her attitude towards the classics in earlier times, though the classics had always the greater dignity. Literary composition as a pure art was not encouraged. Entertainment for its own sake was discountenanced. The religious houses were to be centres of piety and learning; and if English were admitted at all in the strongholds of Latin and French, a work of unadorned edification like The Prick of Conscience would make very suitable reading for those who craved relaxation from severer studies. There were, of course, individuals among the professed religious who indulged a taste for more worldly literature; but the surviving catalogues of libraries that were formed under the eye of authority show a marked discrimination in favour of didactic works.

In England the private libraries of fourteenth-century laymen were relatively insignificant. But Guy, Earl of Warwick, in 1315 left an exceptionally rich collection to the Abbey of Bordesley, which failed to conserve the legacy. The list was first printed in Todd's Illustrations of Gower and Chaucer (1810), and (among devotional works and lives of saints that merge into religious romances like Joseph of Arimathea and the Graal, Titus and Vespasian, and Constantine) it includes most of the famous names of popular history:—Lancelot, Arthur and Modred; Charlemagne, Doon of Mayence, Aimery of Narbonne, Girard de Vienne, William of Orange, Thibaut of Arraby, Doon of Nanteuil, Guy of Nanteuil, William Longespée, Fierebras; with two Alexander romances, a Troy Book, a Brut; the love story of Amadas e Idoine; the romance de Guy e de la Reygne 'tut enterement'; a book of physic and surgery; and a misscellany—un petit rouge livere en lequel sount contenuz mous diverses choses. Yet even a patron so well disposed to secular poems did little to perpetuate the manuscripts of English verse. His education enabled him to draw from the fountain head, and most of his books were French.

Neither in the libraries of the monasteries, nor in the libraries of the great nobles, should we expect to find a true mirror of popular taste. The majority of the people knew no language but English; and the relative scarcity of books of every kind, which even among the educated classes made the hearers far outnumber the readers, was at once a cause and a symptom of illiteracy: the majority of the people could not read. This leads to a generalization that is cardinal for every branch of criticism:—up to Chaucer's day, the greater the popularity of an English poem, the less important becomes the manuscript as a means of early transmission. The text, which would have been comparatively safe in the keeping of scribe, book, and reader, passes to the uncertain guardianship of memorizer, reciter, and listener; so that sometimes it is wholly lost, and sometimes it suffers as much change in a generation as would a classical text in a thousand years. Already Robert Mannyng laments the mutilation of Sir Tristrem by the 'sayers' (who could hardly be expected to avoid faults of improvisation and omission in the recitation of so long a poem from memory); and his regret would have been keener if he could have looked ahead another hundred years to see how the texts of the verse romances paid the price of popularity by the loss of crisp phrases and fresh images, and the intrusion of every mode of triteness.

Of course manuscripts of the longer secular poems were made and used,-mean, stunted copies from which the travelling entertainer could refresh his memory or add to his stock of tales; fair closet copies that would enable well-todo admirers to renew their pleasure when no skilled minstrel was by; and, occasionally, compact libraries of romance, like the Auchinleck manuscript, which must have been the treasure of some great household that enjoyed 'romanz-reding on he bok'-the pastime that encouraged the rise of prose romances in the late Middle Ages. But as a means of circulation for popular verse, distinguished from learned verse and from prose, the book was of secondary importance in its own time, and was always subject to exceptional risks. The fates of three stories in different kinds, all demonstrably favourites in the fourteenth century, will be sufficient illustration: of Floris and Blauncheflour, one of the best of the early romances in the courtly style.

I see in song, in sedgeyng tale
Of Erceldoun and of Kendale,
Non þam says as þai þam wroght,
And in þer sayng it semes noght.
Þat may þou here in Sir Tristrem—Ouer gestes it has þe steem, Ouer alle þat is or was,
If men it sayd as made Thomas:
But I here it no man so say,
Þat of som copple som is away.

(Chronicle, Prologue, 11, 93 ff.)

Robert blames the vanity of the reciters more than their memories, on the excellence of which Petrarch remarks in his account of the minstrels: Sunt homines non magni ingenii, magnae vero memoriae, magnaeque diligentiae (to Boccaccio, Rerum Senilium, Bk. V, ep. ii). several manuscripts survive, but when all are assembled the beginning of the story is still wanting; of Havelok, typical of the homely style, one imperfect copy and a few charred fragments of another are extant; of the Tale of Wade, that was dear to 'olde wydwes', and yet considered worthy to entertain the noble Criseyde, no text has come down. Evidently, to determine the relative popularity of the longer tales in verse we need not so much a catalogue of extant manuscripts, as a census, that cannot now be taken, of the repertories of the entertainers.

If the manuscript life of the longer secular poems was precarious, the chances of the short pieces—songs, ballads, jests, comic dialogues, lampoons—were still worse. Since they were composed for the day without thought of the future, and were no great charge on the ordinary memory, the chief motives for writing them down were absent; and no doubt the professional minstrel found that to secure his proprietary rights against competitors, he must be chary of giving copies of his best things. Many would never be put into writing; some were jotted down on perishable wax; but parchment, always too expensive for ephemeral verse, was reserved for special occasions. In France, in the thirteenth century, Henri d'Andeli adds a touch of dignity to his poem celebrating the memory of a distinguished patron by inscribing it on parchment instead of the wax tablets he used for lighter verses.

In England in 1305, a West-Country swashbuckler, whom fear of the statute against Trailebastouns kept in the greenwood, relieves his offended dignity by composing a poem half apologetic, half minatory, and chooses as the safest way of publication to write it on parchment and throw it in the high road:—

Cest rym fust fet al bois desous vn lorer, La chaunte merle, russinole, e crye l'esperuer. Escrit estoit en parchemyn pur mout remenbrer, Et gitté en haut chemyn, qu vm le dust trouer.

These loose sheets or tiny rolls rarely survive, and the preservation of their contents, as of pieces launched still more carelessly on the world, depends on the happy chance of inclusion in a miscellany; quotation in a larger work; or entry on a fly-leaf, margin, or similar space left blank in a book already written.

Most productive, though not very common in the fourteenth century, are the miscellanies of short pieces—volumes like Earl Guy's 'little red book containing many divers things'—in which early collectors noted down the scraps that interested

- ² A rare example of a roll made small for convenience of carrying is the British Museum Additional MS. 23986. It is about three inches wide and, in its imperfect state, twenty-two inches long, so that when rolled up it is not much bigger than one's finger. On the inside it contains a thirteenth-century Song of the Barons in French (T. Wright, Political Songs, 1839, pp. 59 ff.); on the outside, two scenes from a Middle English farce called Interludium de Clerico et Puella (Chambers, Mediaeval Stage, vol. ii, pp. 324 ff.) which, like so many happy experiments of the earlier time, appears to have no successor in the fourteenth century.

them. A codex of West-Country origin, MS. Harley 2253 in the British Museum, preserves among French poems such as the complaint of the Trailebastoun, a group of English songs that includes Lenten is Come and Alysoun. Most of its numbers are unique, and the loss of this one volume would have swept away the best part of our knowledge of the early Middle English secular lyrics.

Of survival by quotation there is an example in the history of the Letter of Theodric, which lies behind Mannyng's tale of the Dancers of Colbek; and the circumstances are worth lingering over both for the number of by-paths they open to speculation, and for the glimpse they give of Wilton in a century from which there are few records of the nunnery outside the grim, tax-gatherer's entries of Domesday.

A few years before the Conquest, Theodric the foreigner, still racked by the curse that was laid on Bovo's company, made his way from the court of Edward the Confessor to the shrine of St. Edith. As he walked through the quiet valley to Wilton in the spring of the year, we may be sure the thought came to him that here at last was the spot where a man wearied with wandering from land to land, from shrine to shrine, might hope to be cured and to set up his rest, From the moment he reaches the abbey it is impossible not to admire his feeling for dramatic effect. By a paroxysm of quaking he terrifies the peasants; but to the weeping nuns he tells his story discreetly; and, lest a doubt should remain, produces from his scrip a letter in which St. Bruno, the great Pope Leo IX, vouches for all. It is notable that at this stage the convent appear to have taken no steps to record a story so marvellous and so well authenticated; and had Theodric continued his restless wandering we should know of him as little as is known of three others from the band of carollers, who had preceded him at Wilton with a similar story. But when he obtains leave to sleep beside the shrine of St. Edith, and in the morning of the great feast of Lady Day wakes up healed, exalting the fame of their patron saint who had lifted the curse where all the saints of Europe had failed, then, and then only, the convent order that an official record should be made, and the letter copied: Hec in presencia Brichtive ipsius loci abbatisse declarata et patriis litteris 1 sunt mandata. Henceforth it exists only as a chapter in the Acts of St. Edith, and as such it lay before Robert of Brunne. Of the other communities or private persons visited by Theodric (who, whether saint or faitour, certainly did not produce his letter for the first and last time at Wilton) none have preserved his memory. It would be hard to find a better example of the power of the clergy in early times to control the keys to posterity, or of the practical considerations which, quite apart from merit or curiosity, governed the preservation of legends.

But it is the verses casually jotted down in unrelated books that bring home most vividly the slenderness of the thread of transmission. A student has committed Now Springs the Spray to solitary imprisonment between the joyless leaves of an old law book. The song of the Irish Dancer and The Maid of the Moor were scribbled, with some others from a minstrel's stock, on the fly-leaf of a manuscript now in the Bodleian. On a blank page of another a prudent man (who used vile ink, long since faded) has written the verses that banish rats, much as a modern householder might treasure up some annihilating prescription. To these waifs the chance of survival did not come twice, and to a number incalculable it never came.

It has been the purpose of this digression to bring the extant literature into perspective: not to raise useless regrets for what is lost, since we can learn only from what remains: nor to contest the value of statistics of surviving copies as a proof of circulation, provided the works compared are similar in length and kind, and are represented in enough manuscripts to make figures significant; nor yet to deny that didactic verse bulks large in the output of the fourteenth century: it could not be otherwise in an anxious age, when the scarcity of remains gives everything written in English a place in literary history, and when for almost everything verse was preferred to prose. And it seemed better to redress the balance of chance by stealing from the end of the thirteenth century a few fragments that following generations would not forget, than to lend colour to the suggestion that ninety-nine of the men of Chaucer's century enjoyed The Prick of Conscience for every one that caught up the refrain of Now Springs the Spray, or danced through The Maid of the Moor, or sang the praises of Alison.

However much a maker of excerpts may stretch his commission to give variety, it is in vain if the reader will not do his part; for it lies with him to find interest. Really no effective attack can be made on a crust of such diversified hardness until the reader looks at his text as a means of winning back something of the life of the past, and feels a pleasure in the battle against vagueness.

The first step is to find out the verbal meaning. Strange words, that force themselves on the attention and are easily found in dictionaries and glossaries, try a careful reader less than groups of common words—such lines as

Pe fairest leuedi, for he nones, Pat mizt gon on bodi and bones 11 53-4 which, if literally transposed into modern English, are nonsense. Those who think it is beneath the dignity of an intelligent reader to weigh such gossamer should turn to Zupitza's commentary on the Fifteenth Century Version of Guy of Warwick,¹ and see how a master among editors of Middle English relishes every phrase, missing nothing, and yet avoiding the opposite fault of pressing anything too hard. For these tags, more or less emptied of meaning through common use, and ridiculous by modern standards, have their importance in the economy of spoken verse, where a good voice carried them off. They helped out the composer in need of a rime; the reciter on his feet, compelled to improvise; and the audience who, lacking the reader's privilege to linger over close-packed lines, welcomed familiar turns that by diluting the sense made it easier to receive.

Repeated reading will bring out clearly the formal elements of style—the management of rime and alliteration in verse, the grouping and linking of clauses in prose, the cadences in both verse and prose: and before the value of a word or phrase can be settled it is often necessary to inquire how far its use was dictated by technical conditions, compliance with which is sometimes ingenuous to the point of crudity. Where a prose writer would be content with Mathew sayth, an alliterative poet elaborates (VIII a 234) into:

Mathew with mannes face mouthed bise wordis and in such a context mouthed cannot be pressed. The frequent oaths in the speeches in Piers Plowman are no more than counters in the alliteration: being meaningless they are selected to prop up the verse, just as the barrenest phrases in the poem On the Death of Edward III owe their inclusion to the requirements of rime. Again, it will be easier to acquiesce in a forced sense of bende in when it is observed that rime and alliteration so limit the poet's choice that no apter word could be used. Conversely, in the absence of disturbing technical conditions, a reader who finds nonsense should suspect his understanding of the text, or the soundness of the text, before blaming the author.

On bent much baret bende v 47

When the sense expressed and the methods of expression have been studied, it remains to examine the implications of the words—an endless task and perhaps the most entertaining of all. Take as a routine example the place where the Green Knight, preparing a third time to deliver his blow, says to Gawayne—

Halde he now he hyze hode hat Arhur he razt, And kepe hy kanel at his kest, zif hit keuer may v 229 f.

'but yet thy hood up-pick,

A recent translator renders very freely:

(1 111 ff).

Haply 'twill cover thy neck when I the buffet strike'—though the etiquette of decapitation, and the delicacy of the stroke that the Green Knight has in mind, require just the opposite interpretation:—Gawayne's hood has become disarranged since he bared his neck (v 188), and the Green Knight wants a clear view to make sure of his aim. An observation of Gaston Paris on the Latin story of the Dancers of Colbek will show how much an alert mind enriches the reading of a text with precise detail. From the incident of Ave's arm he concludes that the dancers did not form a closed ring, but a line with Bovo leading (1 55) and Ave, as the last comer (1 43-54), at its end, so that she had one arm free which her brother seized in his attempt to drag her away

Intensive reading should be combined with discursive. Intensive reading cultivates the habit of noticing detail; and it is a sound rule of textual criticism to interpret a composition first in the light of the evidence contained within itself. For instance, the slight flicker in the verse

Sche most wip him no lenger abide II 330 should recall as surely as a cross-reference the earlier line and raise the question whether in both places in the original work the comparative had not the older form leng. sive reading is a safeguard against the dangers of a narrow experience, and especially against the assumption that details of phrase, style, or thought are peculiar to an author or composition, when in fact they are common to a period or a kind. A course of both will enable the reader to cope with a school of critics who rely on superficial resemblances to strip the mask from anonymous authors and attach their works to some favoured name. Whether Sir Gawayne and The Destruction of Troy are from the same hand is still seriously debated. Both are alliterative poems; but it is impossible to read ten lines from each aloud without realizing the wide gap that divides their rhythms. The differences of spirit are more radical still. The facility of the author of The Destruction is attained at the cost of surrender to the metre. Given pens, ink, vellum, and a good original, he could go on turning out respectable verses while human strength endured. And because his meaning is all on the surface, the work does not improve on better acquaintance. The author of Sir Gawayne is an artist who never ceases to struggle with a harsh He has the rare gift of visualizing every scene in his story: image succeeds image, each so sharply drawn as to suggest that he had his training in one of the schools of miniature-painting for which early England was famous. is this gift of the painter that, more than likeness of dialect or juxtaposition in the manuscript, links Sir Gawayne with The Pearl.

No durst wip hir no leng abide 11 84

It cannot be too strongly urged that the purpose of a worker in Middle English should be nothing less than to read sensitively, with the fullest possible understanding. Of such a purpose many curricula give no hint. Nor could it be deduced readily from the latest activities of research, where the tendency is more and more to leave the main road (which should be crowded if the study is to thrive) for sidetracks and by-paths of side-tracks in which the sense of direction and proportion is easily lost.

That much may be accomplished by specialists following a single line of approach has been demonstrated by the philologists, who have burrowed tirelessly to present new materials to a world which seldom rewards their happiest elucidations with so much as a 'Well said, old mole!' The student of literature (in the narrower modern sense of the word) brings a new range of interests. He will be disappointed if he expects to find a finished art, poised and sustained, in an age singularly afflicted with growing pains; but there are compensations for any one who is content to catch glimpses of promise, and-looking back and forward, and aside to France—to take pleasure in tracing the rise and development of literary forms and subjects. It is still not enough. The specialist in language as a science, or in literature as an art, may find the Sixth Passus of Piers Plowman (VIII a) or the Wiclifite sermon (XI b) of secondary interest. Yet both are primary documents, the one for the history of society, the other for the history of religion.

There is no escape from a counsel of perfection:—whoever enters on a course of mediaeval studies must reckon as a defect his lack of interest in any side of the life of the Middle Ages; and must be deaf to those who, like the fox in Aesop that had lost its tail, proclaim the benefits of truncation. The range of knowledge and experience was then more than in later times within the compass of a single mind and life. And so much that is necessary to a full understanding has been lost that no possible source of information should be shut out willingly. It is an exercise in humility to call up in all its details some scene of early English life (better a domestic scene than one of pageantry) and note how much is blurred.

Every blur is a challer ge. There are few familiar subjects in which a beginner can sooner reach the limits of recorded knowledge. The great scholars have found time to chart only a fraction of their discoveries; and the greatest could not hope or wish for a day when the number of quests worth the making would be appreciably less.

This book had its origin in a very different project. Professor Napier had asked me to join him in producing for the use of language students a volume of specimens from the Middle English dialects, with an apparatus strictly linguistic. The work had not advanced beyond the choice of texts when his death and my transfer to duties in which learning had no part brought it to an end. When later the call came for a book that would introduce newcomers to the fourteenth century, I was able to bring into the changed plan his favourite passage from Sir Gawayne, and to draw upon the notes of his lectures for its interpretation. It is a small part of my debt to the generous and modest scholar whose mastery of exact methods was an inspiration to his pupils.

I am obliged to the Early English Text Society and to the Clarendon Press for permission to use extracts from certain of their publications; to the librarians who have made their manuscripts available, or have helped me to obtain facsimiles; to Mr. J. R. R. Tolkien who has undertaken the preparation of the Glossary, the most exacting part of the apparatus; and to Mr Nichol Smith who has watched over the book from its beginnings.

ROBERT MANNYNG OF BRUNNE'S HANDLYNG SYNNE

A.D. 1303

What is known of Robert Mannyng of Brunne is derived from his own works. In the Prologue to Handlyng Synne he writes:

To alle Crystyn men vndir sunne,
And to gode men of Brunne,
And speciali, alle be name,
De felaushepe of Symprynghame,
Roberd of Brunne greteb 30w
In al godenesse bat may to prow;
Of Brunne wake yn Kesteuene, Syxe myle besyde Sympryngham euene,
Y dwelled yn be pryorye
Fyftene 3ere yn cumpanye....

And in the Introduction to his Chronicle:

Of Brunne I am; if any me blame, Robert Mannyng is my name; Blissed be he of God of heuene pat me Robert with gude wille neuene! In pe third Edwardes tyme was I, When I wrote alle pis story, In pe hous of Sixille I was a throwe; Dan; Robert of Malton, pat 3e know, Did it wryte for felawes sake When pai wild solace make.

From these passages it appears that he was born in Brunne, the modern Bourn, in Lincolnshire; and that he belonged to the Gilbertine Order. Sempringham was the head-quarters of the Order, and the dependent priory of Sixhill was near by. It has been suggested, without much evidence, that he was a lay brother, and not a full canon.

I. ROBERT MANNYNG OF BRUNNE

His Chronicle of England was completed in 1338. It falls into two parts, distinguished by a change of metre and source. The first, edited by Furnivall in the Rolls Series (2 vols. 1887), extends from the Flood to A.D. 689, and is based on Wace's Brut, the French source of Layamon's Brut. The second part, edited by Hearne, 2 vols., Oxford 1725, extends from A.D. 689 to the death of Edward I, and is based on the French Chronicle of a contemporary, who is sometimes called Pierre de Langtoft, sometimes Piers of Bridlington, because he was a native of Langtoft in Yorkshire, and a canon of the Austin priory at Bridlington in the same county. Mannyng's Chronicle has no great historical value, and its chief literary interest lies in the references to current traditions and popular stories.

Handlyng Synne is a much more valuable work. It was begun in 1303:

Dane Felyp was mayster pat tyme pat y began pys Englyssh ryme; pe zeres of grace fyl pan to be A pousynd and pre hundred and pre. In pat tyme turnede y pys On Englyssh tunge out of Frankys Of a boke as y fonde ynne, Men clepyn pe boke 'Handlyng Synne'.

The source was again a French work written by a contemporary Northerner—William of Wadington's Manuel de Pechiez. The popularity of such treatises on the Sins may be judged from the number of works modelled upon them: e. g. the Ayenbyte of Inwyt, Gower's Confessio Amantis, and Chaucer's Parson's Tale. Their purpose was, as Robert explains, to enable a reader to examine his conscience systematically and constantly, and so to guard himself against vice.

Two complete MSS. of Handlyng Synne are known: British Museum MS. Harley 1701 (about 1350-75), and MS. Bodley 415, of a slightly later date. An important fragment is in the library of Dulwich College. The whole text, with the French source, has been edited by Furnivall for the Roxburghe Club, and later for the Early English Text Society. It treats, with the usual wealth of classification, of the Commandments, the Sins, the Sacraments, the Requisites and Graces of Shrift. But such a bald summary gives no idea of the richness and variety of its content. For Mannyng, anticipating Gower, saw the opportunities that the illustrative stories offered to his special gifts, and spared no pains in their telling. A few examples are added from his own knowledge. More often he expands Wadington's outlines, as in the tale of the Dancers of Colbek. Here the French source is brief and colourless. But the English translator had found a fuller Latin version-clearly the same as that printed from Bodleian MS, Rawlinson C 938 in the preface to Furnivall's Roxburghe Club edition-and from it he produced the wellrounded and lively rendering given below.

Robert knew that a work designed to turn 'lewde men' from the ale-house to the contemplation of their sins must grip their attention; and in the art of linking good teaching with entertainment he is a master. He has the gift of conveying to his audience his own enjoyment of a good story. His loose-knit conversational style would stand the test of reading aloud to simple folk, and he allows no literary affectations, no forced metres or verbiage, to darken his meaning:

> Haf I alle in myn Inglis layd In symple speche as I couthe, Dat is lightest in mannes mouthe. I mad noght for no disours, Ne for no seggers, no harpours. But for be luf of symple men Dat strange Inglis can not ken; For many it ere pat strange Inglis In ryme wate neuer what it is, And bot bai wist what it mente. Ellis me thoght it were alle schente.

(Chronicle, 11, 72 ff.)

The simple form reflects the writer's frankness and directness. He points a moral fearlessly, but without harshness or selfrighteousness. And the range of his sympathies and interests makes Handlyng Synne the best picture of English life before Langland and Chaucer.

SIR ORFEO

Sir Orfeo is found in three MSS.: (1) the Auchinleck MS. (1325-1350), a famous Middle English miscellany now in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; (2) British Museum MS. Harley 3810 (fifteenth century); (3) Bodleian MS. Ashmole 61 (fifteenth century). Our text follows the Auchinleck MS., with II. 1-24 and II. 33-46 supplied from the Harleian MS. A. J. Bliss, Sir Orfeo, Oxford 1954, prints all the texts.

The story appears to have been translated from a French source into South-Western English at the beginning of the four-teenth century. It belongs to a group of 'lays' which claim to derive from Brittany, e.g. Lai le Freine, which has the same opening lines (1-22); Emaré; and Chaucer's Franklin's Tale.

The story of Orpheus and Eurydice was known to the Middle Ages chiefly from Ovid (Metamorphoses x) and from Virgil (Georgies iv). King Alfred's rendering of it in his Boethius is one of his best prose passages, despite the crude moralizing which makes Orpheus's backward glance at Eurydice before she is safe from Hades a symbol of the backslider's longing for his old sins. The Middle English poet has a lighter and daintier touch. The Greek myth is almost lost in a tale of fairyland, the earliest English romance of the kind; and to provide the appropriate happy ending, Sir Orfeo is made successful in his attempt to rescue Heurodis. The adaptation of the classical subject to a mediaeval setting is thorough. An amusing instance is the attempt in the Auchinleck MS. to give the poem an English interest by the unconvincing assurance that Traciens (which from 'Thracian' had come to mean 'Thrace') was the old name of Winchester (Il. 49-50). Probably we have in this MS. a copy of the rendering given by some minstrel at Winchester.

MICHAEL OF NORTHGATE'S AYENBYTE OF INWYT

A.D. 1340.

Michael of Northgate was a monk of St. Augustine's, Canterbury. From a library catalogue of the monastery it appears that he was a lover of books, for he is named as the donor of twenty-five MSS., a considerable collection for those days. Their titles show a taste not merely for religious works, but for science—mathematics, chemistry, medicine, as they were known at the time. Four of these MSS. have been traced, and one of them, British Museum MS. Arundel 57, is Michael's autograph copy of the Ayenbyte. On folio 2 of the MS. are the words: Pis boc is Dan Michaelis of Northgate, ywrite an Englis of his ofene band, bet batte 'Ayenbyte of Inwyt'; and is of the boc-bouse of Saynt Austines of Canterberi, mid be lettres .CC. 'CC.' is the press-mark given in the catalogue. A note at the end of the text shows that it was finished on October 27, 1340:

Ymende het his boc is volucld ine he eue of he holy apostles Symon an Iudas [i.e. Oct. 27] of ane broher of the cloystre of Sauynt Austin of Canterberi, in the yeare of oure Lbordes beringe 1340.

The Ayenbyte has been edited for the Early English Text Society by R. Morris. The title means literally 'Remorse of Conscience', but from the contents of the work it would appear that the writer meant rather 'Stimulus to the Conscience', or 'Prick of Conscience'. It is in fact a translation from the French Somme des Vices et des Vertues, compiled by Friar Lorens in 1279 for King Philip le Hardi, and long held to be the main source of Chaucer's Parson's Tale. Caxton rendered the Somme into English prose as The Royal Book. It treats of the Commandments, the Creed, the Seven Deadly Sins, the Seven Petitions of the Paternoster, and the Seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Nou ich wille þet ye ywyte
Hou hit is ywent
Pet þis boc is ywrite
Mid Engliss of Kent.
Pis boc is ymad uor lewede men,
Vor uader, and uor moder, and uor oþer ken,
Ham uor to berze uram alle manyere zen,
Pet ine hare inwytte ne bleue no uoul wen.

His translation is inaccurate, and sometimes unintelligible, and the treatment is so barren of interest that the work seems to have fallen flat even in its own day, when the popular appetite for edification was keen and unspoiled. But if its literary merit is slight, linguistically it is one of the most important works in Middle English. It provides a long prose text, exactly dated and exactly localized; we have the author's autograph copy to work from; and the dialect is well distinguished. These circumstances, unique in Middle English, make it possible to study the Kentish dialect of the mid-fourteenth century under ideal conditions.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE

D. 1349.

Richard Rolle was born at Thornton-le-Dale, near Pickering, in Yorkshire. He was sent to Oxford, already a formidable rival to the University of Paris; but the severer studies were evidently uncongenial to his impulsive temperament. He returned home without taking orders, improvised for himself a hermit's dress, and fled into solitude. His piety attracted the favour of Sir John and Lady Dalton, who gave him a cell on their estate. Here, in meditation, he developed his mystical religion. He did not immure himself, or cut himself off from human companionship. For a time he lived near Anderby, where was the cell of the recluse Margaret Kirkby, to whom he addressed his Form of Perfeet Living. Another important work, Ego Dormio et Cor Meum Vigilat, was written for a nun of Yedingham (Yorks.). Towards the end of his life he lived in close friendship with the nuns of Hampole, and for one of them he wrote his Commandment of Love to God. At Hampole he died in 1349, the year of the Black Death. By the devout he was regarded as a saint, and had his commemoration day, his office, and his miracles; but he was never canonized.

He wrote both in Latin and in English, and it is not always easy to distinguish his work from that of his many followers and imitators. The writings attributed to him are edited by C. Horstmann, Yorksbire Writers, 2 vols., London 1895-6. Besides the prose works noted above, he wrote, at the request of Margaret Kirkby, a Commentary on the Psalms (ed. Bramley, Oxford 1884), based on the Latin of Peter Lombard. A long didactic poem in Northern English, the Prick of Conscience, has been attributed to him from Lydgate's time onwards; but his authorship has recently been questioned, chiefly on the ground that the poem is without a spark of inspiration. It is not certain that he wrote Love is Life, which is included here because it expresses in characteristic language his central belief in the personal bond, the burning love, between God and man. The first prose selection shows that he did not disdain the examples from natural history that were so popular in the sermons of the time. The second is chapter xi of the Form of Perfect Living, which is found as a separate extract from an early date.

With Rolle began a movement of devotional piety, which, as might be expected from its strong appeal to the emotions, was taken up first among religious women; and signs of a striving for effect in his style suggest that the hermit was not indifferent to the admiration of his followers. He brings to his teaching more heart than mind. He escapes the problems of the world, which seemed so insistent to his contemporaries, by denying the world's claims. His ideas and temperament are diametrically opposed to those of the other great figure in the religious life of fourteenth-century England—Wiclif, the schoolman, politician, reformer, controversialist. Yet they have in common a sincerity and directness of belief that brushes aside conventions, and an enthusiasm that made them leaders in an age when the Church as a whole suffered from apathy.

If pou luf in all pi thoght, and hate pe fylth of syn,
And gyf Hym pi sawle pat it boght, pat He pe dwell within,
Als Crist pi sawle hase soght, and perof walde noght blyn, Sa pou sal to blys be broght, and heuen won within.

De kynd of luf es pis, par it es trayst and trew, To stand styll in stabylnes, and chaunge it for na new. De lyfe pat lufe myght fynd, or euer in hert it knew, Fra kare it tornes pat kyend, and lendes in myrth and glew.

For now, lufe pow, I rede, Cryste, as I pe tell,

And with aungels take pi stede: pat ioy loke pou noght sell!

In erth pow hate, I rede, all pat pi lufe may fell,

For luf es stalworth as pe dede, luf es hard as hell.

Luf es a lyght byrthen; lufe gladdes 30ng and alde; Lufe es withowten pyne, as lofers hase me talde; Lufe es a gastly wyne, þat makes men bygge and balde; Of lufe sal he na thyng tyne þat hit in hert will halde.

Luse es pe swettest thyng pat man in erth hase tane; Luse es Goddes derlyng; luse byndes blode and bane. In luse be owre lykyng, I ne wate na better wane, For me and my lusyng luse makes bath be ane.

40 IV. RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE

(I) sygh and sob, bath day and nyght, for ane sa fayre of hew! Par es na thyng my hert mai light, bot lufe pat es ay new. 70 Wha sa had Hym in his syght, or in his hert Hym knew, His mournyng turned til ioy ful bryght, his sang intil glew.

In myrth he lyfes, nyght and day, pat lufes pat swete chylde; It es Iesu, forsoth I say, of al mekest and mylde.

Wreth fra hym walde al away, pof he wer neuer sa wylde, 75

He pat in hert lufed Hym pat day fra euel He wil hym schylde.

Of Iesu mast lyst me speke, hat al my bale may bete; Me thynk my hert may al tobreke when I thynk on hat swete; In lufe lacyd He hase my thoght, hat I sal neuer forgete. 79 Ful dere me thynk He hase me boght with blodi hende and fete. For luf my hert es bowne to brest, when I hat faire behalde;

SIR GAWAYNE AND THE GRENE KNIGHT

ABOUT 1350-75.

Sir Gawayne has been admirably edited by Sir F. Madden for the Bannatyne Club, 1839; by R. Morris for the Early English Text Society; and in a useful students' edition by E. V. Gordon and J. R. R. Tolkien, Oxford 1925. It is found in British Museum MS. Nero A X, together with three other alliterative poems, named from their first words Pearl, Patience, and Cleanness. Pearl supplies the next specimen; Patience exemplifies the virtue by the trials of Jonah; Cleanness teaches purity of life from Scriptural stories. All these poems are in the same handwriting; all are in a West-Midland dialect; all appear to be of the same age; and none is without literary merit. For these reasons, which are good but not conclusive, they are assumed to be by the same author. Attempts to identify this author have been unsuccessful.

The story runs as follows:

King Arthur is making his Christmas feast with his court at Camelot. On New Year's Day he declares that he will not eat until he has seen or heard some marvel. The first course of the feast is barely served when a tall knight, clad all in green, with green hair, and a green horse to match, rides into the hall. He carries a holly bough and a huge axe, and tauntingly invites any knight to strike him a blow with the axe, on condition that he will stand return blow on the same day a year hence. Gawayne accepts the challenge and strikes off the Green Knight's head. The Green Knight gathers up his head, gives Gawayne an appointment for next New Year's Day at the Green Chapel, and rides off.

The year passes, and Gawayne, despite the fears of the court, sets out in quest of the Green Chapel. On Christmas Eve he arrives at a splendid castle, and finding that the Green Chapel is close at hand, accepts an invitation to stay and rest until New Year's Day. On each of three days the knight of the castle goes hunting, and persuades Gawayne to rest at home. They make an agreement that each shall give the other whatever he gets. The lady of the castle makes love to Gawayne, and kisses him once on the first day, twice on the second day, thrice on the third day; and on the third day she gives him her girdle, which he accepts because it has the magic power of preserving the wearer from wounds. Each evening he duly gives the kisses to the knight, and receives in return the spoils of the hunting of deer and boar and fox. But he conceals the girdle.

The extract begins with Gawayne preparing on New Year's morning to stand the return blow at the Green Chapel.

The poem ends by the Green Knight revealing that he is himself the lord of the castle; that he went to Arthur's court at the suggestion of Morgan la Fay; that he had urged his wife to make love to Gawayne and try his virtue; and that he would not have harmed him at all, if he had not committed the slight fault of concealing the girdle. Gawayne returns to the court, bearing the girdle as a sign of his shame, and tells his story. The knights of the court agree in future to wear a bright green belt for Gawayne's sake.

Sir Gawayne is admittedly the best of the alliterative romances. It must have come down to us practically as it was written by the poet, for it is free from the flatness and conventional phrasing which is characteristic of romances that have passed through many popular recensions. The descriptions of nature, of armour and dresses, the hunting scenes, and the love making, are all excellently done; and the poet shows the same richness of imagination and skill in producing pictorial effects that are so noticeable in Pearl. He has too a quiet humour that recalls Chaucer in some of his moods.

THE PEARL

ABOUT 1375.

The facts leading to the presumption that Pearl and Sir Gawayne are by the same author have been mentioned in the prefatory note to Sir Gawayne. But the poems are markedly different in subject and tone. Pearl, like Chaucer's Death of Blanche the Duchess, is an elegy cast in the vision form made popular by the Roman de la Rose. The subject is a little girl, who died before she was two years old, and the treatment is deeply religious. Her death is symbolized as the loss of a pearl without spot, that slipped from its owner's hand through the grass into the earth.

On a festival day in August, the poet, while mourning his loss, falls asleep on his child's grave. His spirit passes to a land of flowers and rich fruits, where birds of flaming hues sing incomparably, where the cliffs are of crystal and beryl, and a river runs in a bed of gleaming jewels. On the other side of the river, which is lovelier still, sits a maiden dressed all in white, with coronet and ornaments of pearl. The poet recognizes his lost child, but cannot call to her for wonder and dread, until she rises and salutes him. He complains that since her loss he has been a joyless jeweller. She rebukes him gently; she is not lost, but made safe and beautiful for ever, Overjoyed, he says he will cross the river and live with her in this paradise; but she warns him against such presumption, for since Adam's fall the river may be crossed only by the way of death. He is in despair to think that now that his Pearl is found, he must still live joyless, apart from her; but he is bidden to resign himself to God's will and mercy, because rebellion will avail him nothing.

At this point begins the argument on salvation by grace or salvation by works which is here reprinted.

The maiden then continues the discussion, explaining that 'the innocent are ay safe by right', and that only those who come as little children can win the bliss sought by the man who sold his all for a matchless pearl.

Next the poet asks whence her beauty comes, and what her office is. She replies that she is one of the brides of Christ, whom St. John in the Apocalypse saw arrayed for the bridal in the New Ierusalem. He asks to see their mansions, and by special grace is allowed to view the holy city from without. He sees it as St. John saw it, gleaming with gold, with its pillars of precious stone, its gates of pearl; its streets lighted by a divine radiance, so that there is no need of moon or sun. church or chapel or temple there: God himself is the minister, and Christ is the sacrifice. Mortal eye could not bear the splendour, and he stood 'as stylle as dased quayle'. At evening came the procession of the virgin brides of Christ, each bearing on her breast the pearl of perfect happiness. The Lamb leads them, in pearl-white robes, his side bleeding, his face rapt; while elders make obeisance, and angels sing songs of joy as He nears the throne of God.

Suddenly the poet sees his Pearl among her companions. Overcome with longing and delight, he tries to cross the river, only to wake in the garden where he fell asleep. Henceforth he is resigned to the pleasure of the Prince of Heaven.

The reader will be able to judge the author's poetical gift from the selection, which has been chosen as one of the less ornate passages. Even here the form distracts attention from the matter by its elaborateness. A difficult rime scheme is superimposed on the alliterative line; stanza is interlinked with stanza; each group of five stanzas is distinguished by a similar refrain, and bound to the preceding and following groups by repetition in the first and last lines. So too the close of the poem echoes the beginning. With such intricacy of plan, it is not surprising that the rime is sometimes forced, and the sense strained or obscure. It is rather a matter for wonder that, in so long a work, the author was able to maintain his marvellous technique without completely sacrificing poetry to metrical gymnastics.

The highly wrought, almost overwrought, effect is heightened when the poem is read as a whole. If Piers Plowman gives a realistic picture of the drabness of mediaeval life, Pearl, more especially in the early stanzas, shows a richness of imagery and a luxuriance in light and colour that seem scarcely English. Yet they have their parallels in the decorative art of the time—the elaborate carving in wood and stone; the rich colouring of tapestries, of illuminated books and painted glass; the designs of the jewellers, goldsmiths, and silversmiths, which even the notaries who made the old inventories cannot pass without a word of admiration. The Pearl reminds us of the tribute due to the artists and craftsmen of the fourteenth century.

The edition by E. V. Gordon, Oxford 1953, is handy. The minor edition by Sir I. Gollancz, 1921, includes a translation.

THE GEST HYSTORIALE OF THE DESTRUCTION OF TROY

ABOUT 1375.

The Fall of Troy was one of the most popular subjects of mediaeval story. Lydgate wrote a Troy Book about 1420; fragments of another are attributed to 'Barbour', whose identity with the author of The Bruce has been questioned; a third version, anonymous, is known as the Laud Troy Book; and Caxton chose as the first work to be printed in English the Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye (about 1474). More famous than any of these full histories are two single stories detached from the cycle: Jason's Quest of the Golden Fleece, which is admirably told by Gower in the fifth book of his Confessio Amantis; and the Love of Troilus and Cressida, which gave a theme both to Chaucer and to Shakespeare.

The Gest Hystoriate of the Destruction of Troy, from which our extracts are taken, is a free rendering of the prose Historia Troiana finished in 1287 by Guido de Columna (most probably the modern Terranova in Sicily). The translation, which appears to have been made in the North or North-West Midlands in the second half of the fourteenth century, is preserved only in an imperfect fifteenth-century MS. at the Hunterian Museum, Glasgow. In the Early English Text Society's print, edited by Panton and Donaldson, the text extends to over 14,000 lines.

The table of contents prefixed to the MS. promises 'the nome of the knight hat causet it [sc. the story] to be made, and the nome of hym that translatid it out of Latyn into Englysshe'; but the extant MS. does not fulfil the promise. The execution suggests a set task and a journeyman poet. Phrases are repeated carelessly; there is a great deal of padding; the versification is monotonous; and the writer is too often at the mercy of the alliteration to maintain a serious level. Yet he is not a slavish or a dull translator. The more romantic elements of the story, such as the matter of the Odyssey, had already been whittled away in his original, and he shows little desire or capacity to restore them. But he knew as well as the Old English poets the forcefulness of alliterative verse in scenes of violence, and describes with unflagging zest and vigour the interminable battles of the siege, and storms such as that which wrecked the fleet of Ajax.

The Prologue is a curious example of the pseudo-critical attitude of the Middle Ages. Homer is despised as a teller of impossible tales, and a partisan of the Greeks,-for Hector is the popular hero of the mediaeval versions. The narratives of Dares Phrygius and Dictys Cretensis, products of the taste for fictitious history that spread westward from Greek-speaking lands in the fourth and following centuries, are accepted as reliable documents: and Guido de Columna as their authoritative literary interpreter. No mention is made of Benoît de Sainte-Maure, whose Roman de Troie, written in French about 1184, served as source to Guido, and, directly or indirectly, as inspiration to the whole body of Western writers who dealt with the 'Matter of Troy'. For these lapses the English translator need not be held responsible. On the merits of Homer, Dares, Dictys, and Guido de Columna, he probably accepted without question the word of his master Guido.

THE XXXI BOKE: OF THE PASSAGE OF THE GREKYS FRO TROY (II. 12463-12547).

Hyt fell thus, by fortune, be fairest of be yere Was past to the point of the pale wintur. 100 Heruest, with the heite and the high sun, Was comyn into colde, with a course low.

THE DESTRUCTION OF TROY	73
Trees, thurgh tempestes, tynde hade pere leues,
And briddes abatid of hor brem songe;
The wynde of the west wackenet aboue,	105
Blowyng full bremly o the brode ythes;	Ū
The clere aire ouercast with cloudys full thicke,
With mystes full merke mynget with showres.
Flodes were felle thurgh fallyng of rayne,
And wintur vp wacknet with his wete aire.	110
The gret nauy of the Grekes and the gay kynges
Were put in a purpos to pas fro the toune.
Sore longit be lordis her londys to se,
And dissiret full depely, doutyng no wedur.
pai counted no course of the cold stormys,	115
Ne the perellis to passe of the pale windes.	_
Hit happit hom full hard in a hondqwile,
And mony of bo mighty to misse of hor purpos.
Thus the lordes in her longyng laghton be watur,
Shotton into ship mony shene knightes,	120
With the tresowre of be toune bai token before, Relikes full rife, and miche ranke godes.
Clere was the course of the cold flodis,
And the firmament faire, as fell for the wintur.
Thai past on the pale se, puld vp hor sailes,	125
Hadyn bir at bere backe, and the bonke leuyt.
Foure dayes bydene, and hor du nyghtis,
Ful soundly pai sailed with seasonable windes.
The fyft day fuersly fell at the none,
Sodonly the softe winde vnsoberly blew;	130
A myste and a merkenes myngit togedur;	_
A thonder and a thicke rayne prublet in the skewes,
With an ugsom noise, noy for to here;
All flasshet in a fire the firmament ouer;
Was no light but a laite pat launchit aboue:	135
Hit skirmyt in the skewes with a skyre low,

Thurgh the claterand clowdes clos to the heuvn. As the welkyn shuld walt for wodenes of hete; With blastes full bigge of the breme wyndes. Walt vp the waghes vpon wan hilles. 140 Stith was the storme, stird all the shippes, Hoppit on hegh with heste of the flodes. The sea was vnsober, sondrit the nauy, Walt ouer waghes, and no way held. Depertid the pepull, pyne to behold, 145 In costes vnkowthe; cut down bere sailes, Ropis al torochit, rent vp the hacches, Topcastell ouerturnyt, takelles were lost. The night come onone, noye was the more! All the company cleane of the kyng Telamon. 150 With pere shippes full shene, and be shire godis, Were brent in the bre with the breme lowe Of the leymonde laite bat launchit fro heuyn, And euyn drownet in the depe, dukes and other ! Oelius Aiax, as aunter befelle, 155 Was stad in the storme with the stith windes. With his shippes full shene and the shire godes. Thrifty and briuaund, thretty and two There were brent on the buerne with the breme low. And all the freikes in the flode floterand aboue. 160 Hymseluyn in the sea sonkyn belyue, Swalprit and swam with swyngyng of armys. zet he launchet to lond, and his lyf hade, Bare of his body, bretfull of water, In the slober and the slicche slongyn to londe; 165 There he lay, if hym list, the long night ouer, Till the derke was done, and the day sprang; pare sum of his sort, bat soght were to lond And than wonen of waghes, with wo as pai might,

PIERS PLOWMAN

(1362-1400)

By WILLIAM LANGLAND

Recent criticism of Piers Plowman has done more to weaken the hold of opinions once generally accepted than to replace them by others better founded. It is still most probable that 'Long Will', who is more than once mentioned in the text as the poet, was William Langland. The earliest external evidence of his home and parentage is given in a fifteenth-century note in MS. Dublin D 4. 1, of which both the matter and the vile Latinity bear the stamp of genuineness: 'Memorandum quod Stacy de Rokayle, pater Willielmi de Langlond, qui Stacius fuit generosus, et morabatur in Schiptone under Whicwode, tenens domini le Spenser in comitatu Oxon., qui praedictus Willielmus fecit librum qui vocatur Perys Ploughman.' Shipton-under-Wychwood is near Burford in Oxfordshire. The poem shows familiarity with the Malvern Hills and the streets of London; but it is hard to say how much is fact and how much is fiction in the references to Long Will in the text itself, more especially the description of his London life added as the Sixth Passus in Version C, and reproduced here as the second extract.

Since Skeat's edition for the Early English Text Society, the many manuscripts have been grouped into three main types. The shortest, or A-text, appears from internal evidence to have been written about 1362. The B-text (about 1377) has the most compact manuscript tradition. It is distinguished by considerable additions throughout, and by the reconstruction and expansion of the visions of Dowel, Dobet, Dobest, which make up the second half of the poem. The C-text, the latest and fullest form, appears to have been completed in the last decade of the fourteenth century.

Until recently it has been assumed that these three versions represent progressive revisions by the author. But Professor Manly has found considerable support for his view that more than one writer—perhaps as many as five—had a share in the work. For the present, judgement on this question, and on the intricate problem of the relations of the different versions, is suspended until the results of a complete re-examination of all the MSS, are available. It would not be surprising to find that even when this necessary work is done differences of opinion on the larger questions remain as acute as ever.

It is impossible in short space to give an outline of the whole work, which describes no less than eleven visions. The structure is loose, and allegory is developed or dropped with disconcerting abruptness, for the writer does not curb his vigorous imagination in the interests of formal correctness.

The first part is the best known. On a May morning the poet falls asleep on the Malvern Hills and sees a 'Field full of Folk', where all classes of men are busy about their occupations, more particularly the nefarious occupations that engage the attention of the moralist. Holy Church explains that a high tower in the Field is the home of Truth; and that a 'deep dale' is the Castle of Care, where Wrong dwells with the wicked. She points out Falseness, who is about to marry Lady Meed (i.e. Reward, whether deserved reward or bribe). Lady Meed and her company are haled before the King, who, with Reason and Conscience as his guides, decides her case, and upholds the plea of Peace against Wrong.

The second vision is prefaced (in the C-text only) by the passage printed as the second selection. The poet falls asleep again, and sees Conscience preaching to the people in the Field. Representatives of the Seven Deadly Sins are vividly described. They are brought to penitence, and all set out in search of Truth. But no one knows the way. A palmer who wears the trophies of many pilgrimages to distant saints is puzzled by their inquiries, for he has never heard of pilgrims seeking Truth. Then Peter the Plowman comes forward and explains the way in allegorical terms. Here the first extract begins. The second vision closes with a general pardon given by Truth to Piers Plowman in this simple form:

Do wel, and haue wel, and God shal haue bi sowle; And do yuel, and haue yuel, hope bow non other But after bi ded-day be Deuel shal haue bi sowle.

The several visions of the second part make up the lives of Dowel, Dobet, and Dobest. Piers Plowman is there identified with Christ, and the poem ends with Conscience, almost overcome by sin, setting out resolutely in search of Piers.

First impressions of mediaeval life are usually coloured by the courtly romances of Malory and his later refiners. Chaucer brings us down to reality, but his people belong to a prosperous middle-class world, on holiday and in holiday mood. Piers Plowman stands alone as a revelation of the ignorance and misery of the lower classes, whose multiplied grievances came to a head in the Peasants' Revolt of 1381. It must not be supposed that Langland idealized the labourers. Their indolence and improvidence are exposed as unsparingly as the vices of the rich; and Piers himself is not so much a representative of the English workman in the fourteenth century as a character drawn straight from the Gospels. Still, such an eager plea for humbleness, simplicity, and honest labour, could not fail to encourage the political hopes of the poor, and we see in John Ball's letter (p. 160) that 'Piers Plowman' had become a catchword among them. poet himself rather deprecates political action. His satire is directed against the general slackening of the bonds of duty that marked the last years of an outworn system of society. For the remedy of abuses he appeals not to one class but to all: king, nobles, clergy, and workers must model their lives on the pattern of the Gospels.

A. FROM THE B-TEXT, PASSUS VI. Bodleian MS. Laud 581 (about 1400).

'This were a wikked way, but whoso hadde a gyde

That wolde folwen vs eche a fote: ' pus pis folke hem pe nedy and pe naked, nymmeth hede how hii liggeth,

And casteth hem clothes, for so comaundeth Treuthe.
For I shal lene hem lyflode, but 3if pe londe faille, Flesshe and bred, bothe to riche and to pore,
As longe as I lyue, for pe Lordes loue of heuene.
And alle manere of men pat porw mete and drynke lybbeth,

Helpith hym to worche wiztliche bat wynneth zowre fode.'

'Bi Crist!' quod a knyste po, 'he kenneth vs pe best; Ac on pe teme trewly tauste was I neuere.

Ac kenne me,' quod pe knyste, 'and, bi Cryst! I wil assaye.'

'Bi seynt Poule!' quod Perkyn, '3e profre 30w so faire, 25 pat I shal swynke, and swete, and sowe for vs bothe, And oper laboures do for pi loue al my lyf tyme, In couenaunt pat pow kepe Holi Kirke and myselue Fro wastoures and fro wykked men pat pis worlde struyeth; And go hunte hardiliche to hares and to foxes, 30 To bores and to brockes pat breketh adown myne hegges, And go affaite pe faucones wilde foules to kille, For suche cometh to my croft, and croppeth my whete.'

6 woldel wil MS.

Curteislich be knyste banne comsed bise wordes:

'By my power, Pieres,' quod he, 'I pliste be my trenthe
To fulfille bis forward, bows I fiste sholde;
Als longe as I lyue, I shal be mayntene.'

'3e, and sit a poynt,' quod Pieres, 'I preye sow of more;
Loke se tene no tenaunt, but Treuthe wil assent.

And bowgh se mowe amercy hem, late Mercy be taxoure,
And Mekenesse bi mayster, maugré Medes chekes;
And bowgh pore men profre sow presentis and siftis,

For it ben be deueles disoures, I do be to vnderstande.'

'I assente, bi Seynt Iame!' seyde pe knizte panne,
'Forto worche bi pi wordes pe while my lyf dureth.'

'And I shal apparaille me,' quod Perkyn, 'in pilgrimes wise, бα

And wende with 30w I wil til we fynde Treuthe, And cast on me my clothes, yclouted and hole, My cokeres and my coffes, for colde of my nailles, And hange myn hoper at myn hals, in stede of a scrippe.

A busshel of bredcorne brynge me perinne,

For I wil sowe it myself; and sitthenes wil I wende

To pylgrymage, as palmers don, pardoun forto haue.

Ac whoso helpeth me to erie or sowen here, ar I wende,

Shal haue leue, bi owre Lorde, to lese here in heruest,

And make hem mery peremydde, maugré whoso bigruccheth it.

And alkyn crafty men, þat konne lyuen in treuthe,
I shal fynden hem fode, þat feithfulliche libbeth.'..
(Dame 'Worche-whan-tyme-is' Pieres wyf histe;
His douster histe 'Do-riste-so- or-þi-dame-shal-þe-bete';
His sone histe 'Suffre-þi-souereynes- to-hauen-her-wille-, Deme-hem-nouste-, for-, if-þow-doste-, þow-shalt-it-dere-abugge.')

75

'Late God yworth with al, for so His worde techeth;

For now I am olde and hore, and haue of myn owen,

To penaunce and to pilgrimage I wil passe with bise other.

Forpi I wil, or I wende, do wryte my biqueste.

In Dei nomine, amen, I make it myseluen.

He shal haue my soule pat best hath yserued it,

And fro pe fende it defende, for so I bileue,

Til I come to His acountes, as my Credo me telleth,

To haue a relees and a remissioun on pat rental I leue.

Pe kirke shal haue my caroigne and kepe my bones,

For of my corne and catel he craued pe tythe;

I payed it hym prestly, for peril of my soule,

Forthy is he holden, I hope, to haue me in his masse,

And mengen in his memorye amonge alle Crystene.

My wyf shal haue of þat I wan with treuthe, and nomore, And dele amonge my douztres and my dere children; 91 For þowgh I deye todaye, my dettes ar quitte; I bare home þat I borwed, ar I to bedde zede.

And with he residue and he remenaunte, bi he rode of Lukes!

I wil worschip berwith Treuthe bi my lyue,

And ben his pilgryme atte plow, for pore mennes sake.

My plow-fote shal be my pyk-staf, and picche atwo be rotes,

And helpe my culter to kerue, and clense be forwes.'

Now is Perkyn and his pilgrymes to be plowe faren;

To erie bis halue-acre holpyn hym manye.

Dikeres and delueres digged vp be balkes;

perewith was Perkyn apayed, and preysed hem faste. Other werkemen bere were bat wrougten ful gerne;

Eche man in his manere made hymself to done,

And some, to plese Perkyn, piked vp be wedes.

At heighe pryme Peres lete pe plowe stonde, To ouersen hem hymself, and whoso best wrougte He shulde be huyred perafter whan heruest-tyme come.

And panne seten somme and songen atte nale,
And hulpen erie his half-acre with 'how! trollilolli!'

'Now, bi be peril of my soule!' quod Pieres, al in pure tene,

'But 3e arise be rather, and rape 30w to worche, Shal no greyne bat groweth glade 30w at nede; And bough 3e deye for dole, be deuel haue bat reccheth!'

Tho were faitoures aferde, and feyned hem blynde;
Somme leyde here legges aliri, as suche loseles conneth,
And made her mone to Pieres, and preyde hym of grace:
'For we have no lymes to laboure with, lorde, ygraced be 3e!
Ac we preye for 30w, Pieres, and for 30wre plow bothe,
Dat God of His grace 30wre grayne multiplye, Dat God of His grace 30wre almesse pat 3e 3iue vs here;
For we may nouste swynke ne swete, suche sikenesse vs eyleth.'

'If it be soth,' quod Pieres, 'pat 3e seyne, I shal it sone asspye.

3e ben wastoures, I wote wel, and Treuthe wote be sothe,
And I am his olde hyne, and higte hym to warne

And panne gan a Wastoure to wrath hym, and wolde haue viouste.

yfouste,

And to Pieres be plowman he profered his gloue;

A Brytonere, a braggere, abosted Pieres als:—
'Wiltow or neltow, we wil haue owre wille

Of pi flowre and of pi flessche, feeche whan vs liketh,

And make vs myrie permyde, maugré pi chekes!

Curteisly be knyzte banne, as his kynde wolde, Warned Wastoure, and wissed hym bettere,

'Or pow shalt abugge by pe lawe, by pe ordre pat I bere!'

'I was nougt wont to worche,' quod Wastour, 'and now wil I nougt bigynne',

And lete liste of pe lawe, and lasse of pe knyste,

And sette Pieres at a pees, and his plow bothe,

And manaced Pieres and his men 3if bei mette eftsone.

'Now, by be peril of my soule!' quod Pieres, 'I shal apeyre 30w alle!'

And houped after Hunger, pat herd hym atte firste: 165
'Awreke me of pise wastoures,' quod he 'pat pis worlde schendeth!'

Hunger in haste po hent Wastour bi pe mawe, And wronge hym so bi pe wombe pat bothe his eyen wattered.

He buffeted pe Britoner aboute pe chekes, pat he loked like a lanterne al his lyf after.

He bette hem so bothe, he barste nere here guttes;

Ne hadde Pieres with a pese-lof preyed Hunger to cesse,

They hadde ben doluen bothe, ne deme pow non other.

'Suffre hem lyue,' he seyde 'and lete hem ete with hogges,

Or elles benes and bren ybaken togideres,

Or elles melke and mene ale;' pus preyed Pieres for hem.

Faitoures for fere herof flowen into bernes,

And flapten on with flayles fram morwe til euen,

That Hunger was nougt so hardy on hem for to loke,

For a potful of peses pat Peres hadde ymaked.

An heep of heremites henten hem spades,
And ketten here copes, and courtpies hem made,
And wenten as werkemen with spades and with schoueles,
And doluen and dykeden to dryue aweye Hunger.

Blynde and bedreden were botened a pousande, pat seten to begge syluer; sone were pei heled.
For pat was bake for Bayarde was bote for many hungry,
And many a beggere for benes buxome was to swynke,
And eche a pore man wel apayed to haue pesen for his huyre,

And what Pieres preyed hem to do as prest as a sperhauke. And pereof was Peres proude, and put hem to werke,

And 3af hem mete as he myste aforth, and mesurable huyre.

panne hadde Peres pité, and preyed Hunger to wende Home into his owne erde, and holden hym pere:
'For I am wel awroke now of wastoures, porw pi myste. 195
Ac I preye pe, ar pow passe,' quod Pieres to Hunger,
'Of beggeres and of bidderes what best be (to) done?
For I wote wel, be pow went, pei wil worche ful ille;
For myschief it maketh pei beth so meke nouthe,
And for defaute of her fode pis folke is at my wille. 200
Pey are my blody bretheren,' quod Pieres, 'for God bouste vs alle;

Treuthe tauste me ones to louye hem vehone,
And to helpen hem of alle pinge ay as hem nedeth.
And now wolde I witen of he what were he best,
An how I myste amaistrien hem, and make hem to worche.

'Here now,' quod Hunger 'and holde it for a wisdome:
Bolde beggeres and bigge, hat mowe her bred biswynke,
With houndes bred and hors bred holde vp her hertis,
Abate hem with benes for bollyng of her wombe;
And 3if he gomes grucche, bidde hem go swynke,
And he shal soupe swettere whan he it hath deseruid.

And if pow fynde any freke, pat fortune hath appeyred Or any maner fals men, fonde pow suche to cnowe; Conforte hym with pi catel, for Crystes loue of heuene; Loue hem and lene hem, so lawe of God techeth:

Alter alterius onera portate.

And alle maner of men pat pow myste asspye
That nedy ben and nausty, helpe hem with pi godis;
Loue hem, and lakke hem nouste; late God take pe veniaunce;
Theigh bei done yuel, late bow God aworthe:—

Theigh pei done yuel, late pow God aworthe:—

Michi vindictam, et ego retribuam.

And if pow wil be graciouse to God, do as pe Gospel techeth,

And bilow be amonges low men; so shaltow lacche grace:—

Facite vobis amicos de mamona iniquitatis.'

"I wolde noust greue God,' quod Piers, 'for al pe good on grounde;

Miste I synnelees do as pow seist?' seyde Pieres panne.

'3e, I bihote þe,' quod Hunger, 'or ellis þe Bible lieth;

Go to Genesis be gyaunt, be engendroure of vs alle:—

"In sudore and swynke pow shalt pi mete tilye,

MANDEVILLE'S TRAVELS

Mandeville's Travels were originally written in French, perhaps in 1356 or 1357. Their popularity was immediate, and Latin and English translations soon appeared. The English texts published show three forms. The first, imperfect, is the text of the early prints. The second, from Cotton MS. Titus C xvi (about 1400-25), was first printed in 1725, and is followed in the editions by Halliwell, 1839 and 1866, and by Hamelius, 1919. The third, from Egerton MS. 1982 (about 1400-25), has been edited for the Roxburghe Club by G. F. Warner, with the French text, and an excellent apparatus. Our selections follow the Cotton MS.

The Travels fall into two parts: (i) a description of the routes to the Holy Land, and an account of the Holy Places; (ii) a narrative of travel in the more distant parts of Asia. Throughout the author poses as an eyewitness. But in fact the book is a compilation, made without much regard to time or place. For the first part William de Boldensele, who wrote in 1336 an account of a visit to the Holy Land, is the main source. The second part follows the description of an Eastern voyage written by Friar Odoric of Pordenone in 1330. Other materials from the mediaeval encyclopaedists are woven in, and there is so little trace of original observation that it is doubtful whether the author travelled far beyond his library.

In the preface he claims to be Sir John Mandeville, an Englishman born at St. Albans. The people of St. Albans were driven to desperate shifts to explain the absence of his tomb from their abbey; but until 1798 it was actually to be seen at the church of the Guillemins, Liège, with this inscription:

'Hic iacet vir nobilis Dom Ioannes de Mandeville, alias dictus

ad Barbam, Miles, Dominus de Campdi, natus de Anglia, medicinae professor, devotissimus orator, et bonorum suorum largissimus pauperibus erogator, qui, toto quasi orbe lustrato, Leodii diem vitae suae clausit extremum A.D. MCCCLXXII, mensis Nov. die xvii.'

A Liège chronicler, Jean d'Outremeuse (d. 1399), who claims the invidious position of his confidant and literary executor, gives further details: Mandeville was 'chevalier de Montfort en Angleterre'; he was obliged to leave England because he had slain a nobleman; he came to Liège in 1343; and was content to be known as 'Jean de Bourgogne dit à la Barbe'.

Now Jean de Bourgogne, with whom Sir John Mandeville is identified by d'Outremeuse, is known as the writer of a tract on the Plague, written at Liège in 1365. Further, the Latin text of the Travels mentions that the author met at Liège a certain 'Johannes ad Barbam', recognized him as a former physician at the court of the Sultan of Egypt, and took his advice and help in the writing of the Travels.

Again, in 1322, the year in which Sir John Mandeville claims to have left England, a Johan de Burgoyne was given good reason to flee the country, because a pardon, granted to him the previous year for his actions against the Despensers, was then withdrawn. Curiously enough, a John Mandeville was also of the party opposed to the Despensers.

Nothing has come of the attempts to attach the clues—St. Albans, Montfort, Campdi, the arms on the tomb at Liège—to the English family of Mandeville. It seems likely that 'Sir John Mandeville' was an alias adopted by Jean de Bourgogne, unless both names cover Jean d'Outremeuse. The Epilogue to the Cotton version shows how early the plausible fictions of the text had infected the history of its composition.

It is clear that the English versions do not come from the hand of the writer of the Travels, who could not have been guilty of such absurdities as the translation of montaignes by 'pe hille of Aygnes' in the Cotton MS. But whoever the author was, he shows a courtesy and modesty worthy of a knight, begging those with more recent experience to correct the lapses of his memory, and remembering always the interests of later travellers, who might wish to glean some marvels still untold. He might well have pleaded in the fourteenth century that the time had not come when prose fiction could afford to throw off the disguise of truth.

[THE VOIAGE AND TRAVAILE OF SIR IOHN MAUNDEVILE, KT.]

British Museum MS. Cotton Titus C xvi (about 1400-25).

From chap. xiv (xviii), f. 65 b.

ETHIOPE is departed in two princypall parties; and þat is in the Est partie, and in the Meridionall partie, the whiche partie meridionall is clept Moretane. And the folk of þat contree ben blake ynow, and more blake þan in the toþer 5 partie; and þei ben clept Mowres. In þat partie is a well, þat in the day it is so cold þat no man may drynke þereoffe; and in the nyght it is so hoot þat no man may suffre hys hond þerein. And bezonde þat partie, toward the South, to passe by the See Occean, is a gret lond and a gret contrey. But 10 men may not duell þere, for the feruent brennynge of the sonne, so is it passynge hoot in þat contrey.

In Ethiope all the ryueres and all the watres ben trouble, and bei ben somdell salte, for the gret hete bat is bere. And the folk of bat contree ben lyghtly dronken, and han but litill 15 appetyt to mete...

In Ethiope ben many dyuerse folk, and Ethiope is clept 'Cusis.' In pat contree ben folk pat han but o foot; and pei gon so blyue pat it is meruaylle; and the foot is so large pat it schadeweth all the body agen the sonne, whanne pei wole lye and reste hem.

In Ethiope, whan the children ben 30nge and lytill, bei ben all 3alowe; and whan bat bei wexen of age, bat 3alownesse turneth to ben all blak. In Ethiope is the cytee of Saba.

and the lond of the whiche on of the pre Kynges, pat presented oure Lord in Bethleem, was kyng offe.

Fro Ethiope men gon into Ynde be manye dyuerse contreyes. And men clepen the high Ynde 'Emlak'. And Ynde is devyded in pre princypall parties; pat is: the more, pat is a full hoot contree; and Ynde the lesse, pat is a full atempree contrey, pat streccheth to the lond of Medé; and the pridde 30 part, toward the Septentrion, is full cold, so pat for pure cold and contynuell frost the water becometh cristall.

And vpon the roches of cristall growen the gode dyamandes, pat ben of trouble colour. 3alow cristall draweth (to) colour lyke oylle. And bei ben so harde pat no man may pollysch 35 hem; and men clepen hem 'dyamandes' in pat contree, and 'hamese' in anoper contree. Othere dyamandes men fynden in Arabye, pat ben not so gode; and pei ben more broun and more tendre. And oper dyamandes also men fynden in the Ile of Cipre, pat ben 3it more tendre; and hem men may wel 40 pollische. And in the lond of Macedoyne men fynden dyamaundes also. But the beste and the moste precyiouse ben in Ynde.

And men fynden many tyme harde dyamandes in a masse, pat cometh out of gold, whan men puren it and fynen it out 45 of the myne, whan men breken pat masse in smale peces. And sum tyme it happeneth pat men fynden summe as grete as a pese, and summe lasse; and pei ben als harde as po of Ynde.

And all be it pat men fynden gode dyamandes in Ynde, 50 git natheles men fynden hem more comounly vpon the roches in the see, and vpon hilles where the myne of gold is. And pei growen many togedre, on lytill, another gret. And per ben summe of the gretnesse of a bene, and summe als grete as an hasell-note. And pei ben square and poynted of here owne 55 kynde, bope abouen and benethen, withouten worchinge of mannes hond.

And bei growen togedre, male and femele. And bei ben norysscht with the dew of heuene. And bei engendren 60 comounly, and bryngen forth smale children, bat multiplyen and growen all the 3eer. I haue often tymes assayed bat 3if a man kepe hem with a lityll of the roche, and wete hem with May dew oftesithes, bei schull growe eueryche 3eer; and the smale wole wexen grete. For right as the fyn perl congeleth 65 and wexeth gret of the dew of heuene, right so doth the verray dyamand; and right as the perl, of his owne kynde, taketh roundnesse, right so the dyamand, be vertu of God, taketh squarenesse.

And 3if 3ou lyke to knowe the vertues of be dyamand, as 75 men may fynden in be Lapidarye, bat many men knowen noght, I schall telle 3ou, as bei be3onde the see seyn and affermen, of whom all science and all philosophie cometh from.

He pat bereth the dyamand vpon him, it zeueth him hardyso nesse and manhode, and it kepeth the lemes of his body hole.
It zeueth him victorye of his enemyes, in plee and in werre, zif his cause be rightfull; and it kepeth him pat bereth it in gode wytt; and it kepeth him fro strif and ryot, fro euyll sweuenes, from sorwes, and from enchauntementes, and from fantasyes so and illusiouns of wykked spirites. And zif ony cursed wycche or enchauntour wolde bewycche him pat bereth the dyamand, all pat sorwe and myschance schall turne to himself, porgh vertue of pat ston. And also no wylde best dar assaylle the man pat bereth it on him. Also the dyamand scholde ben so zouen frely, withouten coueytynge, and withouten byggynge; and pan it is of grettere vertue. And it maketh a man more strong and more sad azenst his enemyes. And it heleth him pat is lunatyk, and hem pat the fend pursueth or trauayleth. And zif venym or poysoun be brought in presence of the dyamand, anon it begynneth to wexe moyst, and for to 95 swete.

pere ben also dyamandes in Ynde pat ben clept 'violastres',—for here colour is liche vyolet, or more browne pan the violettes,—pat ben full harde and full precyous. But git sum men loue not hem so wel as the opere. But in soth to 100 me, I wolde louen hem als moche as pe opere; for I haue seen hem assayed. Also pere is anoper maner of dyamandes pat ben als white as cristall, but pei ben a lityll more trouble; and pei ben gode and of gret vertue, and all pei ben square and poynted of here owne kynde. And summe 105 ben six squared, summe four squared, and summe pre, as nature schapeth hem.

And perfore whan grete lordes and knyghtes gon to seche worschipe in armes, bei beren gladly the dyamaund vpon hem. I schal speke a litill more of the dyamandes, allbough tro I tarve my matere for a tyme, to bat ende bat bei bat knowen hem not be not disceyued be gabberes bat gon be the contree. bat sellen hem. For whoso wil bye the dyamand, it is nedefull to him bat he knowe hem, because bat men counterfeten hem often of cristall pat is 3 alow; and of saphires of cytryne 115 colour, bat is 3 alow also; and of the saphire loupe; and of many ober stones. But, I tell you, theise contrefetes ben not so harde; and also the poyntes wil breken lightly; and men may esily pollissche hem. But summe werkmen, for malice, wil not pollische hem, to bat entent to maken men beleue bat bei may 120 not ben pollisscht. But men may assaye hem in this manere: First schere with hem, or write with hem, in saphires, in cristall, or in oper precious stones. After pat men taken the ademand, bat is the schipmannes ston, bat draweth the nedle to him, and men leyn the dyamand vpon the ademand, and leyn the nedle 125 before the ademand; and sif the dyamand be gode and vertuous, the ademand draweth not the nedle to him, whils the dyamand is here present. And this is the preef hat hei besonde the see maken. Natheles it befalleth often tyme hat the gode dyamand laso leseth his vertue, be synne and for incontynence of him hat bereth it. And hanne is it nedfull to make it to recourse his vertue agen, or ell it is of litill value.

Chap. xxvi (xxx), f. 112 a.

Now schall I seye you sewyngly of contrees and yles bat 135 ben bezonde the contrees pat I haue spoken of. Wherfore I seye you, in passynge be the lond of Cathaye toward the high Ynde, and toward Bacharye, men passen be a kyngdom pat men clepen 'Caldilhe', pat is a full fair contré. And bere groweth a maner of fruyt, as bough it weren gowrdes; 140 and whan bei ben rype, men kutten hem ato, and men synden withinne a lytyll best, in flesch, in bon, and blode as bough it were a lytill lomb, withouten wolle. And men eten bothe the frut and the best: and bat is a gret merueylle. Of bat frute I have eten, allbough it were wondirfull: but bat I knowe wel, 145 bat God is merueyllous in his werkes. And natheles I tolde hem of als gret a merueyle to hem, bat is amonges vs: and bat was of the Bernakes. For I tolde hem bat in oure contree weren trees bat baren a fruyt bat becomen briddes fleeynge; and bo bat fellen in the water lyuen; and bei bat fallen on the erthe 150 dyen anon; and bei ben right gode to mannes mete. And hereof had bei als gret meruaylle bat summe of hem trowed it were an inpossible thing to be. In pat contré ben longe apples of gode sauour, whereof ben mo ban an hundred in a clustre. and als manye in another: and bei han grete longe leves and 155 large, of two fote long or more. And in pat contree, and in ober contrees bere abouten, growen many trees, bat beren clowe gylofres, and notemuges, and grete notes of Ynde, and of canell, and of many oper spices. And pere ben vynes bat beren so grete grapes bat a strong man scholde haue ynow to done for to bere o clustre with all the grapes. In 160 bat same regioun ben the mountaynes of Caspye bat men clepen 'Vber' in the contree. Betwene bo mountaynes the Iewes of ten lynages ben enclosed, bat men clepen Goth and Magoth; and bei mowe not gon out on no syde. Pere weren enclosed twenty two kynges with hire peple, bat dwelleden 165 betwene the mountaynes of Sythye. Pere Kyng Alisandre chacede hem betwene bo mountaynes; and bere he thoughte for to enclose hem borgh werk of his men. But whan he saugh bat he myghte not don it, ne bryng it to an ende, he preved to God of Nature bat He wolde parforme bat bat he 170 had begonne. And all were it so bat he was a payneme, and not worthi to ben herd, zit God of His grace closed the mountaynes togydre; so þat þei dwellen þere, all faste ylokked and enclosed with high mountaynes alle aboute, saf only on o syde; and on bat syde is the See of Caspye. Now 175 may sum men asken: sith bat the see is on bat o syde, wherfore go bei not out on the see syde, for to go where bat hem lyketh? But to this questioun I schal answere: pat See of Caspye goth out be londe, vnder the mountaynes, and renneth be the desert at o syde of the contree; and after it stretcheth vnto the endes 180 of Persie. And allbough it be clept a see, it is no see, ne it toucheth to non oper see; but it is a lake, the grettest of the world. And bough bei wolden putten hem into bat see, bei ne wysten neuer where bat bei scholde arryuen. And also bei conen no langage but only hire owne, bat no man 185 knoweth but bei: and berfore mowe bei not gon out. And also see schull vnderstonde bat the Iewes han no propre lond of hire owne, for to dwellen inne, in all the world, but only bat lond betwene the mountaynes. And zit bei zelden tribute for hat lond to the queen of Amazoine, the whiche hat 190 maketh hem to ben kept in cloos full diligently, bat bei schull not gon out on no syde, but be the cost of hire lond. For hire lond marcheth to bo mountaynes. And often it hath befallen bat summe of be Iewes han gon vp the mountaynes, 95 and avaled down to the valeyes: but gret nombre of folk ne may not do so. For the mountaynes ben so hye, and so streght vp, bat bei moste abyde bere, maugree hire myght. For bei mowe not gon out, but be a litill issue bat was made be strengthe of men; and it lasteth wel a four grete 200 myle. And after is pere zit a lond all desert, where men may fynde no water, ne for dyggynge, ne for non other bing: wherfore men may not dwellen in pat place. So is it full of dragounes, of serpentes, and of oper venymous bestes, bat no man dar not passe, but sif it be be strong wynter. And pat 205 streyt passage men clepen in bat contree 'Clyron'. And bat is the passage bat the Queen of Amazoine maketh to ben kept. And bogh it happene sum of hem, be fortune, to gon out, bei conen no maner of langage but Ebrew, so bat bei can not speke to the peple. And sit natheles, men seyn bei schull 210 gon out in the tyme of Antecrist, and bat bei schull maken gret slaughter of Cristene men. And perfore all the Iewes bat dwellen in all londes lernen allweys to speken Ebrew, in hope bat whan the ober Iewes schull gon out, bat bei may vnderstonden hire speche, and to leden hem into Cristendom, 215 for to destroye the Cristene peple. For the Iewes seyn bat bei knowen wel be hire prophecyes bat bei of Caspye schull gon out and spreden borghout all the world; and bat the Cristene men schull ben vnder hire subieccioun als longe as bei han ben in subieccioun of hem. And zif bat zee wil wyte 220 how bat bei schull fynden hire weye, after bat I haue herd seve, I schall tell 3ou. In the tyme of Antecrist, a fox schall make bere his ttraynet, and mynen an hole, where Kyng Alisandre leet make the rates: and so longe he schall mynen and percen the erthe, til þat he schall passe þorgh 225 towardes bat folk. And whan bei seen the fox, they schull haue gret merueylle of him, because bat bei saugh neuer such a best. For of all obere bestes bei han enclosed amonges hem, saf only the fox. And panne pei schulle chacen him and pursuen him so streyte, till pat he come to the same place pat he cam fro. And panne pei schulle 230 dyggen and mynen so strongly, till pat pei fynden the 3ates pat King Alisandre leet make of grete stones and passynge huge, wel symented and made stronge for the maystrie. And po 3ates pei schull breken, and so gon out, be fyndynge of pat issue.

Fro bat lond gon men toward the lond of Bacharie, where ben full yuele folk and full cruell. In hat lond ben trees hat beren wolle, as bogh it were of scheep; whereof men maken clothes, and all bing bat may ben made of wolle. In bat contree ben many ipotaynes, bat dwellen som tyme in the 240 water, and somtyme on the lond: and bei ben half man and half hors, as I have seyd before; and bei eten men, whan bei may take hem. And here ben ryueres and watres hat ben fulle byttere, bree sithes more ban is the water of the see. In bat contré ben many griffounes, more plentee ban in ony 245 other contree. Sum men seyn bat bei han the body vpward as an egle, and benethe as a lyoun: and treuly bei seyn soth bat bei ben of bat schapp. But o griffoun hath the body more gret, and is more strong, banne eight lyouns, of suche lyouns as ben o this half; and more gret and strongere ban an 250 hundred egles, suche as we han amonges vs. For o griffoun bere wil bere fleynge to his nest a gret hors, aif he may fynde him at the poynt, or two oxen zoked togidere, as bei gon at the plough. For he hath his talouns so longe and so large and grete vpon his feet, as bough bei weren hornes of grete oxen, or of 255 bugles, or of kyan; so bat men maken cuppes of hem, to drynken of. And of hire ribbes, and of the pennes of hire wenges, men maken bowes full stronge, to schote with arwes and quarell.

From pens gon men be many iourneyes porgh the lond of Prestre lohn, the grete emperour of Ynde. And men clepen 260 his roisime the Yle of Pentexoire.

EPILOGUE.

Dere ben manye ober dyuerse contrees and manye ober merueyles bezonde, bat I have not seen: wherfore of hem I can not speke propurly, to tell you the manere of hem. 265 And also in the contrees where I have ben, ben manye mo dyuersitees of many wondirfull thinges panne I make mencioun of, for it were to longe thing to deuyse 30u the manere. And perfore bat bat I have deuysed you of certeyn contrees, bat I have spoken of before, I beseche zoure worthi 270 and excellent noblesse bat it suffise to 30u at this tyme. For aif pat I deuysed you all pat is beyonde the see, another man peraunter, bat wolde peynen him and trauaylle his body for to go into bo marches for to encerche bo contrees, myghte ben blamed be my wordes, in rehercynge manye straunge 275 thinges; for he myghte not seve no thing of newe, in the whiche the hereres myghten hauen outer solace or desport or lust or lykyng in the herynge. For men seyn allweys bat newe thinges and newe tydynges ben plesant to here. Wherfore I wole holde me stille, withouten ony more rehercyng 280 of dyuersiteez or of meruaylles pat ben bezonde, to pat entent and ende bat whoso wil gon into bo contrees, he schall fynde ynowe to speke of, þat I haue not touched of in no wyse.

And 3ee schull vndirstonde, 3if it lyke 30u, bat at myn 285 hom comynge I cam to Rome, and schewed my lif to oure holy fadir the Pope, and was assoylled of all bat lay in my conscience, of many a dyuerse greuous poynt, as men mosten nedes bat ben in company, dwellyng amonges so many a dyuerse folk of dyuerse secte and of beleeve, as I haue ben.

290 And amonges all, I schewed hym this tretys, bat I had made after informacioun of men bat knewen of thinges bat I had not seen myself; and also of merueyles and customes bat I hadde seen myself, as fer as God wolde 3eue me grace:

and besoughte his holy fadirhode þat my boke myghte ben examyned and corrected be avys of his wyse and discreet 295 conseill. And oure holy fader, of his special grace, remytted my boke to ben examyned and preued be the avys of his sevd conseill. Be the whiche my boke was preeued for trewe; in so moche þat þei schewed me a boke, þat my boke was examynde by, þat comprehended full moche more be an 300 hundred part; be the whiche the Mappa Mundi was made after. And so my boke (all be it þat many men ne list not to 3eue credence to no þing, but to þat þat þei seen with hire eye, ne be the auctour ne the persone neuer so trewe) is affermed and preued be oure holy fader, in maner and forme 305 as I haue seyd.

And I Iohn Maundevyll knyght aboueseyd, (allbough I be vnworthi) bat departed from oure contrees and passed the see the seer of grace 1322, bat have passed many londes and manye yles and contrees, and cerched manye full 310 strange places, and haue ben in many a full gode honourable companye, and at many a faire dede of armes, all be it bat I dide none myself, for myn vnable insuffisance; and now I am comen hom, mawgree myself, to reste, for gowtes artetykes pat me distreynen, pat diffynen the ende of my labour, azenst 315 my will, God knoweth. And bus takynge solace in my wrechched reste, recordynge the tyme passed, I have fulfilled beise thinges and putte hem wryten in this boke, as it wolde come into my mynde, the seer of grace 1356 in the 34th seer bat I departede from oure contrees. Wherfore I preve to all 320 the rederes and hereres of this boke, zif it plese hem, bat bei wolde preyen to God for me, and I schall preye for hem. And alle bo bat seyn for me a Paternoster, with an Aue Maria, pat God forzeue me my synnes, I make hem parteneres and graunte hem part of all the gode pilgrymages, 325 and of all the gode dedes bat I have don, aif ony ben to his plesance; and noght only of bo, but of all bat euere I schall do vnto my lyfes ende. And I beseche Almyghty God, fro whom all godenesse and grace cometh fro, þat He 330 vouchesaf of His excellent mercy and habundant grace to fullfylle hire soules with inspiracioun of the Holy Gost, in makynge defence of all hire gostly enemyes here in erthe, to hire saluacioun, bothe of body and soule; to worschipe and thankynge of Him þat is þree and on, withouten begynnynge 335 and withouten endyng; þat is withouten qualitee good, withouten quantytee gret; þat in alle places is present, and all thinges conteynynge; the whiche þat no goodnesse may amende, ne non euell empeyre; þat in perfyte Trynytee lyueth and regneth God, be alle worldes and be all tymes. 340 Amen, Amen, Amen, Amen.

THE BRUCE

WRITTEN IN 1375 BY JOHN BARBOUR.

John Barbour was archdeacon of Aberdeen, an auditor of the Scottish exchequer, and a royal pensioner. Consequently a number of isolated records of his activities have been preserved. In 1364 he was granted a safe-conduct to travel with four students to Oxford. In 1365 and 1368 he had permission to travel through England so that he might study in France. The notices of his journeys, his offices, and his rewards point to a busy and successful life. He died in 1395.

According to Wyntoun, Barbour's works were (1) The Bruce; (2) The Stewartis Oryginalle (or Pedigree of the Stewarts), now lost; (3) a Brut, which some have identified with extant fragments of a Troy Book (see the prefatory note to No. VII), and others with (2) The Stewartis Oryginalle.

The Bruce is found in two late MSS., both copied by John Ramsay; the first, St. John's College, Cambridge, MS. G 23, in the year 1487; the second, now at the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, in 1489. It has been edited by Skeat for the Early English Text Society, and for the Scottish Text Society. The poem is valuable for the history, more especially the traditional history, of the period 1304-33. Barbour speaks of it as a romance, and the freedom and vividness of the narrative, with its hero-worship of Robert Bruce and Douglas, place it well above the ordinary chronicle. But far from disclaiming historical accuracy, Barbour prides himself that truth well told should have a double claim to popularity:

Storys to rede ar delitabill Suppos that that be nocht bot fabill: Than suld storys that suthfast wer, And that war said on gud maner, Hawe doubill plesance in heryng: The fyrst plesance is the carpyng, And the tothir the suthfastnes, That schawys the thing rycht as it wes

He did not misjudge the taste of his country, and The Bruce, with which the Scottish contribution to English literature begins, long held its place as the national epic of Scotland.

The specimen describes an incident in the unsuccessful siege of Berwick, 1319, after five quiet days.

JOHN WICLIF

D. 1384.

Like Richard Rolle, Wiclif was a Yorkshireman by birth. Of his career at Oxford little is known until 1360, when he is described as 'master of Balliol'. From Balliol he was presented to the living of Fillingham, and, after a series of preferments, he accepted in 1374 the rectory of Lutterworth, which he held till his death in 1384.

Wiclif's life was stormy. His acknowledged pre-eminence as a theologian and doctor in the University did not satisfy his active and combative mind. 'False peace', he said, 'is grounded in rest with our enemies, when we assent to them without withstanding; and sword against such peace came Christ to send.' He lacked neither enemies nor the moral courage to withstand them.

At first, under the powerful patronage of John of Gaunt, he entered into controversies primarily political, opposing the right of the Pope to make levies on England, which was already overburdened with war-taxation, and to appoint foreigners to English benefices. On these questions popular opinion was on his side.

He proceeded to attack the whole system of Church government, urging disendowment; rejecting the papal authority, which had been weakened in 1378 by the fierce rivalry of Urban VI and Clement VII; attacking episcopal privileges, the established religious orders, and the abuse of indulgences, pardons, and sanctuary. Still his opinions found a good deal of popular and political support.

Then in 1380 he publicly announced his rejection of the doctrine of transubstantiation. From the results of such a heresy his friends could no longer protect him. Moderate opinion became alarmed and conservative after the Peasants' Revolt of 1381. Richard II was no friend of heretics. John of Gaunt, himself unpopular by this time, commanded silence. And in 1382 the secular party in Oxford were compelled, after a struggle, to condemn and expel their favourite preacher and his followers. Wiclif retired to Lutterworth, and continued, until struck down by paralysis in the last days of 1384, to inspire his 'poor preachers'—the founders of the Lollard sect which lived on to join forces with Lutheranism in the sixteenth century—and to develop in a series of Latin and English works the doctrines that later came to be associated with Puritanism.

His authorship is often doubtful. In the interests of orthodoxy the early MSS. of his writings were ruthlessly destroyed, as in the famous bonfire of his works at Carfax, Oxford, in 1411. And his followers included not only the simple folk from whom later the poor priests' were recruited, but able University men, trained in his new doctrines, bred in the same traditions, and eager to emulate their master in controversy. So his share in the famous Wiclif Bible (ed. Forshall and Madden, Oxford 1850) is still uncertain. Part of the translation seems to have been made by Nicholas of Hereford, and a later recension is claimed for another Oxford disciple, John Purvey. But Wiclif probably inspired the undertaking, for to him, as to the later Puritans, the word of the Bible was the test by which all matters of belief, ritual, and Church government must be tried; and he was particularly anxious, in opposition to the established clergy and the friars, that lavmen should read it in their own language. Contemporaries, friend and foe, ascribe the actual translation to him. John Huss, the Bohemian reformer, who was martyred in 1416 for teaching Wiclif's doctrines, states that Wiclif 'translated all the Bible into English'. Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury, is equally positive when he writes to the Pope in 1412 that 'the son of the Old Serpent filled up the cup of his malice against Holy Church by the device of a new translation of the Scriptures into his native tongue'.

The first selection, chapter xv of the De Officio Pastorali (ed. Matthew, pp. 429 f.), states the case for translation: see Workman's Wyclif, ii. p. 329. In the second (ed. Matthew, pp. 188 ff.) some essential points of Wiclif's teaching are explained.

In abuse of his opponents he maintains the sturdy tradition of controversy that still survives in Milton's prose. The style is rugged and vigorous; the thought logical and packed close. And it is easy to see the source of his strength. In an age whose evils were patent to all, many reproved this or that particular abuse, but the system as a whole passed unchallenged. Wiclif, almost alone in his generation, had the reasoning power to go to the root of the matter, and the moral courage not only to state fearlessly what, rightly or wrongly, he found to be the source of cvil, but to insist on basic reform. It is difficult nowadays, when modern curiosity has made familiar the practice of mining among the foundations of beliefs, society, and government, to realize the force of authority that was ranged against unorthodox reformers in the fourteenth century. If the popular support he received indicates that this force was already weakening, Wiclif must still be reckoned among the greatest of those who broke the way for the modern world.

A. THE TRANSLATION OF THE BIBLE.

De Officio Pastorali, chap. xv.

MS. Ashburnham XXVII (15th century).

Ant heere be freris wip ber fautours seyn hat it is heresye to write hus Goddis lawe in English, and make it knowun to lewid men. And fourty signes hat hey bringen for to shewe an heretik ben not worby to reherse, for nougt groundih hem but nygromansye.

It semph first bat be wit of Goddis lawe shulde be tau;t in bat tunge bat is more knowun, for bis wit is Goddis word. Whanne Crist seib in be Gospel bat bobe heuene and erbe shulen passe, but His wordis shulen not passe, He vndirstondith bit His woordis His wit. And bus Goddis wit is Hooly Writ, to bat may on no maner be fals. Also be Hooly Gost 3 af to apostlis wit at Wit Sunday for to knowe al maner langagis, to teche be puple Goddis lawe perby; and so God wolde bat be puple were tau;t Goddis lawe in dyuerse tungis. But what man, on Goddis half, shulde reuerse Goddis ordenaunse and 15 His wille?

And for his cause Seynt Ierom trauelide and translatide he Bible fro dyuerse tungis into Lateyn, hat it myste he aftir translatid to ohere tungis. And hus Crist and His aposilis tausten he puple in hat tunge hat was moost known to he puple. Why shulden not men do nou so?

And herfore autours of pe newe law, pat weren apostlis of Iesu Crist, writen per Gospels in dyuerse tungis pat weren more knowun to pe puple.

Also be worpy reume of Fraunse, notwipstondinge alle lettingis, hap translated be Bible and be Gospels, wip opere trewe sentensis of doctours, out of Lateyn into Freynsch. Why shulden not Englizschemen do so? As lordis of Englond han be Bible in Freynsch, so it were not azenus resoun bat bey hadden be same sentense in Englizsch; for bus Goddis lawe wolde be betere knowun, and more trowid, for onehed of wit, and more acord be bitwixe reumes.

And herfore freris han tauzt in Englond be Paternoster in Englizsch tunge, as men seyen in be pley of zork, and in 35 many obere cuntreys. Siben be Paternoster is part of Matheus Gospel, as clerkis knowen, why may not al be turnyd to Englizsch trewely, as is bis part? Specialy siben alle Cristen men, lerid and lewid, bat shulen be sauyd, moten algatis sue Crist, and knowe His lore and His lif. But be comyns of 40 Englizschmen knowen it best in ber modir tunge; and bus it were al oon to lette siche knowing of be Gospel and to lette Englizschmen to sue Crist and come to heuene.

Wel y woot defaute may be in vntrewe translating, as mysten haue be many defautis in turnyng fro Ebreu into 45 Greu, and fro Greu into Lateyn, and from o langage into anoper. But lyue men good lif, and studie many persones Goddis lawe, and whanne chaungyng of wit is foundun, amende bey it as resoun wole.

Sum men seyn hat freris trauelen, and her fautours, in his so cause for her chesouns, hat y wole not aferme, but God woot wher bey ben sobe. First bey wolden be seun so nedeful to be Englisschmen of oure reume bat singulerly in her wit lays be wit of Goddis lawe, to telle be puple Goddis lawe on what maner euere bey wolden. And be secound cause herof is seyd to stonde in his sentense: freris wolden lede he puple in 55 techinge hem Goddis lawe, and bus bei wolden teche sum, and sum hide, and docke sum. For panne defautis in per lif shulden be lesse knowun to be puple, and Goddis lawe shulde be vntreweliere knowun bobe bi clerkis and bi comyns. Pe bridde cause bat men aspien stondib in bis, as bey seyn: alle 60 bes newe ordris dreden hem bat ber synne shulde be knowun, and hou bei ben not groundid in God to come into be chirche; and bus bey wolden not for drede bat Goddis lawe were knowun in Englizsch; but bey myzen putte heresye on men 3if Englizsch toolde not what bey seyden. 65

God moue lordis and bischops to stonde for knowing of His lawe!

B. OF FEIGNED CONTEMPLATIVE LIFE.

Corpus Christi College (Cambridge) MS. 296 (1375-1400), p. 165.

Or feyned contemplatif lif, of song, of pe Ordynal of Salisbury, and of bodely almes and worldly bysynesse of prestis; hou bi pes foure pe fend lettip hem fro prechynge of pe Gospel.—

First, whanne trewe men techen bi Goddis lawe wit and 5 reson, pat eche prest owip to do his myzt, his wit, and his wille to preche Cristis Gospel, be fend blyndip ypocritis to excuse hem by feyned contemplatif lif, and to seie pat, sip it is be beste, and bei may not do bobe togidre, bei ben nedid for charité of God to leue be prechynge of be Gospel, and 10 lyuen in contemplacion.

See nowe be ypocrisie of his false seignge. Crist taust and dide he beste lif for prestis, as oure feih techih, sih He was God and myste not erre. But Crist preched he Gospel, and to charged alle His apostlis and disciplis to goo and preche he Gospel to alle men. han it is he beste lif for prestis in his world to preche he Gospel.

Also God in be olde lawe techib bat be office of a prophete is to schewe to be peple here foule synnys. But eche prest so is a prophete bi his ordre, as Gregory seyb vpon be Gospellis. Danne it is be office of eche prest to preche and telle be synnys of be peple; and in his manere schal eche prest be an aungel of God, as Holy Writt seib.

Also Crist and Ion Baptist lesten desert and precheden be 25 Gospel to here dep perfore; and bis was most charité; for ellis bei weren out of charité, or peierid in charité, bat myzte not be in hem bobe, sib be ton was God, and no man after Crist was holyere ban Baptist, and he synned not for bis prechynge.

Also be holy prophete Ieromye, halwid in his moder so wombe, mystle not be excused fro prechynge bi his contemplacion, but chargid of God to preche be synnes of be peple, and suffre peyne perfore, and so weren alle be prophetis of God.

A Lord! sip Crist and Ion Baptist and alle pe prophetis of 35 God weren nedid bi charité to come out of desert to preche to pe peple, and leue here sol(it)arie preiere, hou dore we fonnyd heretikys seie pat it is betre to be stille, and preie oure owen fonnyd ordynaunce, pan to preche Cristis Gospel?

Lord! what cursed spirit of lesyngis stirib prestis to close to hem in stonys or wallis for al here lif, sib Crist comaundib to alle His apostlis and prestis to goo into alle be world and preche be Gospel. Certis bei ben opyn foolis, and don pleynly azenst Cristis Gospel; and, zif bei meyntenen bis errour, bei ben cursed of (God), and ben perilous ypocritis and the heretikis also. And sib men ben holden heretikis bat done azenst þe popis lawe, (and þe beste part of þe popis lawe) seip pleynly þat eche þat comeþ to presthod takiþ þe office of a bedele, or criere, to goo bifore Domesday to crie to þe peple here synnes and vengaunce of God, whi ben not þo prestis heretikis þat leuen to preche Cristis Gospel, and 50 compelle oþere treue men to leue prechynge of þe Gospel? Siþ þis lawe is Seynt Gregoryes lawe, groundid opynly in Goddis lawe and reson and charité; and oþere lawes of þe peple ben contrarie to Holy Writt and reson and charité, for to meyntene pride and coueitise of Anticristis worldly clerkis. 55

But ypocritis allegen be Gospel,—bat Magdaleyne chees to hereself be beste part whanne she saat bisiden Cristis feet and herde His word. Sob it is bat his meke sittynge and deuout herynge of Cristis wordis was best to Magdeleyne, for sche hadde not office of prechynge as prestis han, sih sche was 60 a womman, hat hadde not auctorité of Goddis lawe to teche and preche opynly. But what is his dede to prestis, hat han expresse he comaundement of God and men to preche he Gospel? Where hei wolen alle he wommen in ydelnesse, and suen not Iesu Crist in lif and prechynge he Gospel, hat 65 He comandih Hymself bohe in he olde lawe and newe?

Also pis pesible herynge of Cristis word and brennynge loue pat Magdeleyne hadde was pe beste part, for it schal be ende in heuene of good lif in pis world. But in pis world pe beste lif for prestis is holy lif in kepynge Goddis hestis, and 70 trewe prechynge of pe Gospel, as Crist dide, and chargid alle His prestis to do (pe same). And pes ypocritis wenen pat here dremys and fantasies of hemself ben contemplacion, and pat prechynge of pe Gospel be actif lif; and so pei menen pat Crist tok pe worse lif for pis world, and nedid alle His prestis 75 to leue pe betre and take pe worse lif; and pus pes fonnyd ypocritis putten errour in Iesu Crist. But who ben more heretikis?

Also pes blynde ypocritis alleggen pat Crist biddip vs preie so euermore, and Poul biddip pat we preie wipoute lettynge and pan we prestis may not preche, as pei feynen falsly. But here pes ypocritis schullen wite pat Crist and Poul vnderstonden of preiere of holy lif, pat eche man dop as longe as he dwellip in charité; and not of babelynge of lippis, pat no so man may euere do wipouten cessynge; for ellis no man in pis world myste fulfille pe comaundement of Crist; and pis techip Austyn and opere seyntis.

And sip men pat fulfillen not Goddis lawe, and ben out of charité, ben not acceptid in here preiynge of lippis,—for here 90 preiere in lippis is abhomynable, as Holy Writt seip bi Salomon,—pes prestis pat prechen not pe Gospel, as Crist biddip, ben not able to prefe (God) for mercy, but disceyuen hemself and pe peple, and dispisen God, and stiren Hym to wrappe and vengaunce, as Austyn and Gregory and opere 95 seyntis techen.

And principaly bes ypocritis bat han rentes, and worldly lordischipes, and parische chirchis approprid to hem, azenst Holy Writt bobe old and newe, by symonye and lesyngis on Crist and His apostelis, for stynkynge gronyngys and abite of 100 holynesse, and for distroiynge of Goddis ordynaunce, and for singuler profession maade to foolis and, in cas, to fendis of helle,—bes foolis schullen lerne what is actif lif and contemplatif bi Goddis lawe, and panne pei myztten wite pat pei han neiber be ton ne be toiber, sib bei chargen more veyn 105 statutis of synful men, and, in cas, (of) deuelys, pan pei chargen be heste of God, and werkis of mercy, and poyntis of charité. And be fende blyndib hem so moche, bat bei seyn indede bat bei moten neuere preie to plesynge of God, sib bei vnablen hemself to do be office of prestis bi Goddis lawe, and 110 purposen to ende in here feyned deuocion, pat is blasphemye to God.

Also bi song be fend lettip men to studie and preche be Gospel; for sip mannys wittis ben of certeyn mesure and my3t, be more bat bei ben occupied aboute siche mannus song, be lesse moten bei be sette aboute Goddis lawe. For 115 bis stirib men to pride, and iolité, and obere synnys, and so vnableb hem many gatis to vnderstonde and kepe Holy Writt, bat techeb mekenesse, mornynge for oure synnys and obere mennus, and stable lif, and charité. And 3it God in all be lawe of grace chargib not siche song, but deuocion in 120 herte, trewe techynge, and holy spekynge in tonge, and goode werkis, and holy lastynge in charité and mekenesse. But mannus foly and pride stieb vp euere more and more in bis veyn nouelrie.

First men ordeyned songe of mornynge whanne bei weren 125 in prison, for techynge of be Gospel, as Ambrose, as men seyn, to putte awey ydelnesse, and to be not vnoccupied in goode manere for be tyme. And bat songe and our (e) acordib not, for oure stirib to iolité and pride, and here stirib to mornynge, and to dwelle lenger in wordis of Goddis lawe. 130 pan were matynys, and masse, and euensong, placebo and dirige, and comendacion, and matynes of Oure Lady, ordeyned of synful men to be songen wib heize criynge, to lette men fro be sentence and vnderstondynge of bat bat was bus songen, and to maken men wery, and vndisposid to studie 135 Goddis lawe for akyng of hedis. And of schort tyme panne (weren) more veyn iapis founden: deschaunt, countre note, and orgon, and smale brekynge, bat stirib veyn men to daunsynge more ban (to) mornynge; and herefore ben many proude lorelis founden and dowid wib temperal and worldly 140 lordischipis and gret cost. But bes foolis schulden drede be scharpe wordis of Austyn, þat seiþ: 'As oft as þe song likiþ me more ban dob be sentence bat is songen, so oft I confesse bat I synne greuously.'

126 as (2nd)] and MS.

146 And 3if bes knackeris excusen hem bi song in be olde lawe, seie bat Crist, bat best kepte be olde lawe as it schulde be aftirward, tau3t not ne chargid vs wib sich bodely song, ne ony of His apostlis, but wib deuocion in herte, and holy lif, and trewe prechynge, and bat is ynowb3 and be beste. But who 150 schulde banne charge vs wib more, oure be fredom and li3tnesse of Cristis lawe?

And 3if bei seyn bat angelis heryen God bi song in heuene, seie bat we kunnen not bat song; but bei ben in ful victorie of here enemys, and we ben in perilous bataile, and in be 155 valeye of wepynge and mornynge; and oure song lettib vs fro betre occupacion, and stirib vs to many grete synnes, and to forgete vs self.

But oure flecshly peple hap more lykynge in here bodely eris in sich knackynge and taterynge, þan in herynge of 160 Goddis lawe, and spekynge of þe blisse of heuene; for þei wolen hire proude prestis and oþere lorelis þus to knacke notis for many markis and poundis. But þei wolen not 3eue here almes to prestis and children to lerne and teche Goddis lawe. And þus, bi þis nouelrie of song, is Goddis 165 lawe vnstudied and not kepte, and pride and oþere grete synnys meyntenyd.

And bes fonnyd lordis and peple gessen to haue more bank of God, and (to) worschipe Hym more, in haldynge vp of here owen nouelries wib grete cost, ban in lernynge, and 170 techynge, and meyntenynge of his lawe, and his seruauntis, and his ordynaunce. But where is more disceit in feib, hope and charité? For whanne ber ben fourty or fysty in a queer, bre or source proude lorellis schullen knacke be most deuout seruyce bat no man schal here be sentence, and alle obere 175 schullen be doumbe, and loken on hem as foolis. And banne strumpatis and beuys preisen Sire Iacke, or Hobbe, and Williem be proude clerk, hou smale bei knacken here notis; and seyn hat hei seruen wel God and Holy Chirche, whanne hei dispisen God in His face, and letten ohere Cristene men of here deuocion and compunction, and stiren hem to worldly 180 vanyté. And hus trewe seruyce of God is lettid, and his veyn knackynge for oure iolité and pride is preised abouen he mone.

Also be Ordynalle of Salisbury lettib moche prechynge of be Gospel; for folis chargen bat more ban be maundementis of God, and to studie and teche Cristis Gospel. For 3if 185 a man faile in his Ordynale, men holden bat grete synne, and reprouen hym berof faste; but 3if a preste breke be hestis of God, men chargen bat litel or noust. And so 3if prestis seyn here matynes, masse, and euensong aftir Salisbury vsse, bei hemself and obere men demen it is ynow3, boub bei neiber 190 preche ne teche be hestis of God and be Gospel. And bus bei wenen bat it is ynow3 to fulfille synful mennus ordynaunce, and to leue be ristfulleste ordynaunce of God, bat He chargid prestis to performe.

But, Lord! what was prestis office ordeyned bi God bifore 195 bat Salisbury vss was maad of proude prestis, coueitous and dronkelewe? Where God, bat dampneb alle ydelnesse, chargid hem not at be ful wib be beste occupacion for hemself and obere men? Hou doren synful folis chargen Cristis prestis wib so moche nouelrie, and euermore cloute more to, 200 bat bei may not frely do Goddis ordynaunce? For be Iewis in be olde lawe haden not so manye serymonyes of sacrifices ordeyned bi God as prestis han now rightis and reulis maade of synful men And git be olde lawe in bes charious customes mosten nedes cesse for fredom of Cristis Gospel. But bis 205 fredom is more don awei bi bis nouelrie ban bi customes of be olde lawe. And bus many grete axen where a prest may, wibouten dedly synne, seie his masse wibouten matynys; and bei demen it dedly synne a prest to fulfille be ordynaunce of God in his fredom, wiboute nouelrie of synful men, bat lettib 210 prestis fro pe betre occupacion; as 3if pei demen it dedly synne to leue pe worse ping, and take pe betre, whanne pei may not do bope togidre.

And pus, Lord! pin owen ordynaunce pat pou madist for 215 pi prestis is holden errour, and distroied for pe fonnyd nouelrie of synful foolis, and, in cas, of fendis in helle.

But here men moste be war pat vnder colour of pis fredom pei ben betre occupied in pe lawe of God to studie it and teche it, and not slou; ne ydel in ouermoche sleep, and vanyté, and 220 oper synnes, for pat is pe fendis panter.

See now be blyndnesse of bes foolis. Dei seyn bat a prest may be excused fro seignge of masse, bat God comaundid Himself to be substance perof, so bat he here on. But he schal not be excused but 3 if he seie matynes and euensong 225 himself, bat synful men han ordeyned; and bus bei chargen more here owene fyndynge ban Cristis comaundement.

A Lord! zif alle pe studie and traueile pat men han now abowte Salisbury vss, wip multitude of newe costy portos, antifeners, graielis, and alle opere bokis, weren turned into makynge of biblis, and in studiynge and techynge perof, hou moche schulde Goddis lawe be forpered, and knowen, and kept, and now in so moche it is hyndrid, vnstudied, and vnkept. Lord! hou schulden riche men ben excused pat costen so moche in grete schapellis, and costy bokis of mannus ordynaunce, for fame and nobleie of pe world, and wolen not spende so moche aboute bokis of Goddis lawe, and for to studie hem and teche hem: sip pis were wipoute comparison betre on alle siddis, and lyzttere, and sykerere?

But zit men hat knowen he fredom of Goddis ordynaunce 240 for prestis to be he beste, wih grete sorow of herte seyn here matynes, masse, and euensong, whanne hei schulden ellis he betre occupied, last hei sclaundren he sike conscience of here breheren, hat zit knowen not Goddis lawe. God brynge hes prestis to be fredom to studie Holy Writt, and lyue berafter, and teche it oper men frely, and to preie as long and as 245 moche as God meueb hem berto, and ellis turne to obere medeful werkis, as Crist and His apostlis diden; and bat bei ben not constreyned to blabre alle day wib tonge and grete criynge, as pies and iaies, bing bat bei knowen not, and to peiere here owen soule for defaute of wis deuocion and charité! 250

Also bysynesse of worldly occupacion of prestis lettip prechynge of be Gospel, for bei ben so besy (ber) aboute, and namely in herte, bat bei benken litel on Goddis lawe, and han no sauour berto. And seyn bat bei don bus for hospitalité, and to releue pore men wib dedis of charité. But, hou euere 255 men speken, it his for here owen couetise, and lustful lif in mete and drynk and precious clopis, and for name of be world in fedynge of riche men; and litel or noust comeb frely to pore men bat han most nede.

But pes prestis schulden sue Crist in manere of lif and 260 trewe techynge. But Crist lefte sich occupacion, and His apostlis also, and weren betre occupied in holy preiere and trewe techynge of pe Gospel. And pis determinacion and ful sentence was 30uen of alle pe apostlis togidre, whanne pei hadden rescevued pe plenteuous 3iftis of pe Holy Gost. Lord! 265 where pes worldly prestis (ben) wisere pan ben alle pe apostlis of Crist? It semeth pat pei ben, or ellis (pei ben) fooles.

Also Crist wolde not take be kyngdom whan be puple wolde haue maad Him kyng, as Iones Gospel telleb. But if it haade be a prestis office to dele aboute bus bodi(ly) almes, 270 Crist, but coude best haue do bis office, wolde haue take best temperal goodis to dele hem among poeuere men. But He wolde not do bus, but fley, and took no man of be aposteles wib him, so faste He hiede. Lord! where worldly prestis kunnen bettere don bis partinge of worldly goodis ban Iesu 275 Crist?

And sif pei seyn pat Crist fedde pe puple in desert with bodily almes, manye pousand, as pe Gospel saip: pat dide 280 Crist by miracle, to shewe His godhede, and to teche prestes hous pei schulden fede gostly Cristene men by Goddis word. For so dide Cristis aposteles, and hadde not whereof to do bodily almes, whan pei misten haue had tresour and juelis ynowe of kynggis and lordis.

Also Peter saip in Dedis of Apostlis to a pore man pat to him neiper was gold ne siluer; and 3it he performede wel pe office of a trewe prest. But oure prestis ben so bysye aboute worldly occupacioun pat pei semen bettere bailyues or reues pan gostly prestis of Iesu Crist. For what man is so bysy apoute marchaundise, and opere worldly doyngis, as ben preostes, pat shulden ben ly3t of heuenly lif to alle men abouten hem?

But certes pei shulde be as bysy aboute studyinge of Goddys lawe, and holy preyer, not of Famulorum, but of holy 295 desires, and clene meditacioun of God, and trewe techinge of pe Gospel, as ben laboreris aboute worldly labour for here sustenaunce. And muche more bysie, 3if pei mi3ten, for pey ben more holden for to lyue wel, and (3eue) ensaumple of holi lif to pe puple, and trewe techinge of Holy Writ, panne pe 300 people is holden to 3yue hem dymes or offringis or ony bodily almes. And perfore prestis shulde not leue ensaumple of good lif, and studyinge of Holi Writ, and trewe techinge perof, ne (for) bodily almes, ne for worldly goodis, ne for sauynge of here bodily lif.

And as Crist sauede he world by writynge and techinge of foure Euaungelistis, so he fend casteh to dampne he world and prestis for lettynge to preche he Gospel by hes foure: by feyned contemplacioun, by song, by Salisbury vse. and by worldly bysynes of prestis.

God for His mercy styre pes prestis to preche pe Gospel in word, in lif; and be war of Sathanas disceitis. Amen.

JOHN GOWER

D. 1408.

John Gower, a Londoner himself, came of a good Kentish family. Chaucer must have known him well, for he chose him as his attorney when leaving for the Continent in 1378, and, with the dedication of Troilus and Criseyde, labelled him for ever as 'moral Gower'. Gower's marriage with Agnes Groundolf, probably a second marriage, is recorded in 1398. Blindness came on him a few years later. His will, dated August 15, 1408, was proved on October 24, 1408, so that his death must fall between those two points. By his own wish he was buried in St. Saviour's, Southwark, the church of the canons of St. Mary Overy, to whom he was a liberal benefactor.

The Speculum Meditantis, or Mirour de l'Omme, is a handbook of sins and sinners, written in French.

The Vox Clamantis, written in Latin, covers similar ground. Opening with a vision of the Peasants' Revolt of 1381, the poet passes in review the faults of the different grades of society—clergy, nobles, labourers, traders, lawyers—and ends with an admonition to the young King Richard II.

In his English work, the Confessio Amantis, he expressly abandons the task of setting the world to rights, and promises to change his style henceforth. Now he will sing of Love. The machinery of the poem is suggested by the great source of mediaeval conventions, the Roman de la Rose. On a May morning the poet, a victim of love, wanders afield and meets the Queen of Love (cp. the beginning of Chaucer's Legend of Good Women). She bids him confess to her priest Genius. Genius hears the confession, sustaining with some incongruity the triple rôle of high priest of Love, Christian moralist, and entertainer—for it is he who tells the stories which, woven about the framework of the Seven Deadly Sins, make the real matter of the poem.

2028-10 J

The first form of the Confessio was completed in 1390. It contains a Prologue in which the suggestion for the poem is ascribed to Richard II, and an Epilogue in his praise. In this version the Queen of Love at parting gives Gower a message for Chaucer:

And gret wel Chaucer whan ye mete. As mi disciple and mi poete: For in the floures of his youthe In sondri wise, as he wel couthe, Of ditees and of songes glade, The whiche he for my sake made. The lond fulfild is overal. Wherof to him in special Above alle othre I am most holde. Forthi now, in hise daies olde. Thow schalt him telle this message, That he upon his latere age, To sette an ende of alle his werk. As he which is myn owne clerk, Do make his testament of love, As thou hast do thi schrifte above. So that mi Court it mai recorde.

In the final form, completed in 1392-3, Richard's name disappears from the Prologue; the dedication to his popular rival, Henry of Lancaster, is made prominent; the eulogy in the Epilogue is dropped; and with it the compliment to Chaucer. Whether this last omission is due to chance, or to some change in the relations between the two poets, is not clear.

In his own day Gower was ranked with Chaucer. His reputation was still high among the Elizabethans; and he has the distinction of appearing as Chorus in a Shakespearian play—Pericles —of which his story of Apollonius of Tyre, in Bk. viii of the Confessio, was the immediate source.

A selection gives a very favourable impression of his work. He has a perfect command of the octosyllabic couplet; an easy style, well suited to narrative; and a classic simplicity of expression for which the work of his predecessors in Middle English leaves us unprepared. Throughout the whole of the Confessio Amantis, more than 30,000 lines, the level of workmanship is remarkable, and almost every page shows some graceful and poetical verses.

Yet the poem as a whole suffers from the fault that Gower tried to avoid:

It dulleth ofte a mannes wit To him that schal it aldai rede.

One defect, obvious to a modern reader, would hardly be noticed by his contemporaries: he often incorporates in his poetry matter proper only to an encyclopaedia, such as the discourse on the religions of the world in Bk. v, or that on Philosophy in Bk. vii. Another is more radical: for all his wide reading, his leading ideas lack originality. It is hardly a travesty to say that the teaching of his works amounts to this: 'In the moral world, avoid the Seven Deadly Sins in the five sub-classifications of each; in the political world keep your degree without presuming'. Such a negative and conventional message cannot sustain the fabric of three long poems. Their polished and facile moralizing becomes almost exasperating if it be remembered that the poet wrote when a whole system of society was falling, and falling noisily, about him. Modern taste rejects Gower the moralist and political writer, and his claim to present as apart from historical value rests on the delightful single stories which served as embroidery to his serious themes.

The extracts are taken from the admirable edition by G. C. Macaulay: 'The Works of John Gower', 4 vols., Oxford 1899-1902.

A. CEIX AND ALCEONE.

From Bk. iv, 11. 2927 ff.

This finde I write in Poesie: Ceïx the king of Trocinie Hadde Alceone to his wif, Which as hire oghne hertes lif

Him loveth; and he hadde also A brother, which was cleped tho Dedalion, and he per cas Fro kinde of man forschape was Into a goshauk of liknesse: Wherof the king gret hevynesse 01 Hath take, and thoghte in his corage To gon upon a pelrinage Into a strange regioun, Wher he hath his devocioun To don his sacrifice and preie. 15 If that he mihte in eny weie Toward the goddes finde grace His brother hele to pourchace. So that he milite be reformed Of that he hadde be transformed. 20 To this pourpos and to this ende This king is redy for to wende, As he which wolde go be schipe: And for to don him felaschipe His wif unto the see him broghte, 25 With al hire herte and him besoghte That he the time hire wolde sein Whan that he thoghte come agein: 'Withinne,' he seith, 'tuo monthe day,' And thus in al the haste he may 30 He tok his leve, and forth he seileth, Wepende and sche hirself beweileth, And torneth hom, ther sche cam fro. B. ADRIAN AND BARDUS.

From Bk. v, ll. 4937 ff.

To speke of an unkinde man, I finde hou whilom Adrian, Of Rome which a gret lord was, Upon a day as he per cas To wode in his huntinge wente, It hapneth at a soudein wente, After his chace as he poursuieth, Thurgh happ, the which noman eschuieth, He fell unwar into a pet, Wher that it mihte noght be let. 10 The pet was dep and he fell lowe, That of his men non myhte knowe Wher he becam, for non was nyh Which of his fall the meschief syh. And thus al one ther he lay 15 Clepende and criende al the day For socour and deliverance, Til azein eve it fell per chance, A while er it began to nyhte, A povere man, which Bardus hihte. 20 Cam forth walkende with his asse, And hadde gadred him a tasse Of grene stickes and of dreie To selle, who that wolde hem beie, As he which hadde no liflode, 25 Bot whanne he myhte such a lode To toune with his asse carie. And as it fell him for to tarie That ilke time nyh the pet, And hath the trusse faste knet, 30 He herde a vois, which cride dimme, And he his ere to the brimme Hath leid, and herde it was a man, Which seide, 'Ha, help hier Adrian, And I wol given half mi good.' 35 The povere man this understod, As he that wolde gladly winne, And to this lord which was withinne He spak and seide, 'If I thee save, What sikernesse schal I have 40

ADRIAN AND BARDUS	139
Of covenant, that afterward
Thou wolt me give such reward
As thou behiltest nou tofore?'
That other hath his othes swore
Be hevene and be the goddes alle,	45
If that it myhte so befalle
That he out of the pet him broghte,
Of all the goodes whiche he oghte
He schal have evene halvendel.
This Bardus seide he wolde wel;	50
And with this word his asse anon
He let untrusse, and therupon
Doun goth the corde into the pet,
To which he hath at the ende knet
A staf, wherby, he seide, he wolde	55
That Adrian him scholde holde.
Bot it was tho per chance falle,
Into that pet was also falle
An ape, which at thilke throwe,
Whan that the corde cam down lowe,	60
Al sodeinli therto he skipte
And it in bothe hise armes clipte.
And Bardus with his asse anon
Him hath updrawe, and he is gon.
But whan he sih it was an ape,	65
He wende al hadde ben a iape
Of faierie, and sore him dradde:
And Adrian eftsone gradde
For help, and cride and preide faste,
And he eftsone his corde caste;	70
Bot whan it cam unto the grounde,
A gret serpent it hath bewounde,
The which Bardus anon up drouh.
And thanne him thoghte wel ynouh

It was fantosme, bot yit he herde 75 The vois, and he therto ansuerde, What wiht art thou in Goddes name? 'I am,' quod Adrian, 'the same, Whos good thou schalt have evene half.' Quod Bardus, 'Thanne a Goddes half 80 The thridde time assaie I schal': And caste his corde forth withal Into the pet, and whan it cam To him, this lord of Rome it nam. And therupon him hath adresced, 85 And with his hand ful ofte blessed. And thanne he bad to Bardus hale. And he, which understod his tale. Betwen him and his asse, al softe, Hath drawe and set him up alofte 90 Withouten harm, al esely. He seith noght ones 'grant merci,' Bot strauhte him forth to the cité, And let this povere Bardus be. And natheles this simple man 95 His covenant, so as he can, Hath axed: and that other seide. If so be that he him umbreide Of oght that hath be speke or do, It schal ben venged on him so, 100 That him were betre to be ded. And he can tho non other red, But on his asse agein he caste His trusse, and hieth homward faste: And whan that he cam hom to bedde. 105 He tolde his wif hou that he spedde. Bot finaly to speke oght more Unto this lord he dradde him sore.

ADRIAN AND BARDUS	141
So that a word ne dorste he sein.
And thus upon the morwe azein,	110
In the manere as I recorde,
Forth with his asse and with his corde
To gadre wode, as he dede er,
He goth; and whan that he cam ner
Unto the place where he wolde,	115
He hath his ape anon beholde,
Which hadde gadred al aboute
Of stickes hiere and there a route,
And leide hem redy to his hond,
Wherof he made his trosse and bond.	120
Fro dai to dai and in this wise
This ape profreth his servise,
So that he hadde of wode ynouh.
Upon a time and as he drouh
Toward the wode, he sih besyde	125
The grete gastli serpent glyde,	-
Til that sche cam in his presence,
And in hir kinde a reverence
Sche hath him do, and forth withal
A ston mor briht than a cristall	130
Out of hir mouth tofore his weie
Sche let doun falle, and wente aweie
For that he schal noght ben adrad.
Tho was this povere Bardus glad,
Thonkende God and to the ston	135
He goth and takth it up anon,
And hath gret wonder in his wit
Hou that the beste him hath aquit,
Wher that the mannes sone hath failed,
For whom he hadde most travailed.	140
Bot al he putte in Goddes hond,	-
And torneth hom, and what he fond

Unto his wif he hath it schewed;
And thei, that weren bothe lewed,
Acorden that he scholde it selle.	145
And he no lengere wolde duelle,
Bot forth anon upon the tale
The ston he profreth to the sale;	\ \
And riht as he himself it sette,
The iueler anon forth fette	150
The gold and made his paiement;
Therof was no delaiement.
Thus whan this ston was boght and sold,
Homward with ioie manyfold
This Bardus goth; and whan he cam	155
Hom to his hous and that he nam
His gold out of his purs, withinne
He fond his ston also therinne,
Wherof for ioie his herte pleide,
Unto his wif and thus he seide,	160
'Lo, hier my gold, lo, hier mi ston!'
His wif hath wonder therupon,
And axeth him hou that mai be.
'Nou, be mi trouthe! I not,' quod he,
'Bot I dar swere upon a bok	165
That to my marchant I it tok,
And he it hadde whan I wente:
So knowe I noght to what entente
It is nou hier, bot it be grace.
Forthi tomorwe in other place	170
I wole it fonde for to selle,
And if it wol noght with him duelle,
Bot crepe into mi purs azein,
Than dar I saufly swere and sein
It is the vertu of the ston.'	175
The morwe cam, and he is gon

ADRIAN AND BARDUS	143
To seche aboute in other stede His ston to selle, and he so dede, And lefte it with his chapman there. Bot whan that he cam elleswhere In presence of his wif at hom, Out of his purs and that he nom His gold, he fond his ston withal.	180
And thus it fell him overal, Where he it solde in sondri place, Such was the fortune and the grace. Bot so wel may nothing ben hidd, That it mys ate laste kidd:	185
This fame goth aboute Rome So ferforth that the wordes come To themperour Iustinian; And he let sende for the man,	190
And axede him hou that it was. And Bardus tolde him al the cas, Hou that the worm and ek the beste, Althogh thei maden no beheste, His travail hadden wel aquit;	195
Bot he which hadde a mannes wit, And made his covenant be mouthe, And swor therto al that he couthe, To parte and given half his good, Hath nou forgete hou that it stod, As he which wol no trouthe holde.	200
This Emperour al that he tolde Hath herd, and thilke unkindenesse He seide he wolde himself redresse. And thus in court of iuggement This Adrian was thanne assent,	205
And the querele in audience Declared was in the presence	210

Of themperour and many mo; Wherof was mochel speche tho And gret wondringe among the press.

Bot ate laste natheles
For the partie which hath pleigned
The lawe hath diemed and ordeigned
Be hem that were avised wel,
That he schal have the halvendel Thurghout of Adrianes good.

And thus of thilke unkinde blod Stant the memoire into this day, Wherof that every wys man may Ensamplen him, and take in mynde What schame it is to ben unkinde; Azein the which reson debateth, And every creature it hateth. 215

JOHN OF TREVISA'S TRANSLATION OF HIGDEN'S POLYCHRONICON

Ranulph Higden (d. 1364) was a monk of St. Werburgh's at Chester, and has been doubtfully identified with the 'Randal Higden' who is said to have travelled to Rome to get the Pope's consent to the acting of the Chester miracle plays in English.

His Polychronicon, so called because it is the chronicle of many ages, is a compilation covering the period from the Creation to 1352. In the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries it was the favourite universal history; and the First Book, which deals with general geography, has still a special interest for the light it throws on the state of knowledge in Chaucer's day.

Two English prose translations are known: Trevisa's, completed in 1387, and modernized and printed by Caxton in 1482; and an anonymous rendering made in the second quarter of the fifteenth century. Both are printed, with Higden's Latin, in the edition by Babington and Lumby, Rolls Series, 9 vols., 1865-86.

John of Trevisa was a Cornishman. He was a fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, from 1362 to 1365; and was one of those expelled from Queen's College for 'unworthiness' in 1379. He became vicar of Berkeley, and at the request of Sir Thomas Berkeley undertook the translation of the Polychronicon. In 1398 he brought to an end another long work, the translation of Bartholomaeus de Proprietatibus Rerum, the great encyclopaedia of natural science at this time. He died at Berkeley in 1402.

Trevisa was a diligent but not an accurate or graceful translator. He rarely adds anything from his own knowledge, though we have an example in the account of the reform of teaching at Oxford while he was there. The interest of his work depends chiefly on the curiosity of some passages in his originals.

POLITICAL PIECES

In the thirteenth century political poems were written chiefly in Latin or French. In the fourteenth century a steadily growing tendency to use English witnesses the increased interest of the people in politics and social questions. The fullest collections are those edited by T. Wright, Political Songs of England (John to Edward II), Camden Society, 1839; and Political Poems and Songs (Edward III to Richard III), Rolls Series, 2 vols., 1859-61.

The selections A and B are from the poems of Laurence Minot, of which the best edition is the third by J. Hall, Oxford 1914. Minot was a better patriot than a poet, and his boisterous contempt for the Scots and French reflects the spirit of England in the early days of Edward III's greatness.

The empty phrases in which the anonymous piece C abounds do not disguise a note of despair. The long war with France was becoming more and more hopeless. The plague that added to its miseries had carried off Henry, first Duke of Lancaster, in 1361. The Black Prince, to whom the nation looked for guidance, had died in 1376. The inglorious old age of Edward III ended in the following year. But there remained the hope, soon to be falsified, that the boy king Richard II would steer the ship of state to safety.

D is the earliest text of the letter which John Ball addressed to the Essex members of the Great Society of Peasants on the eve of the revolt of 1381. It shows how deep an impression the characters and allegorical form of Piers Plowman had made on the oppressed serfs and labourers, and it gives some idea of the vague and incoherent thinking that brought ruin on their enterprise. Ball, who had defied established authority all his life, was freed from prison by the rebels, became a ringleader, and preached to their assembly on Blackheath a famous sermon with the text:

When Adam dalf, and Eve span, Who was then the gentleman?

A few weeks later he was executed by sentence of Lord Chief Justice Tressilian, who had been charged by the King to take vengeance on the rebels.

The distich E sums up briefly the history of a year which turned moderate men against Richard II. A fuller contemporary picture of the events that led to his deposition is found in the alliterative poem Richard the Redeles (called Mum and the Sothsegger since the discovery of a new fragment) which Skeat attributed, probably wrongly, to the author of Piers Plowman.

MISCELLANEOUS PIECES IN VERSE

Under this head are grouped a number of short poems, representing forms of composition that survive only by fortunate chance.

A is a curious little song, which has been printed from Hale MS. 135 in Modern Language Review, vol. iv, p. 236, and reconstructed by Skeat at vol. v, p. 105. For a related French poem see H. E. Sandison, The Ghanson & Aventure in M.E., 1913, p. 47.

B and C are the best-known lyrics of the important collection edited by Böddcker, Altenglische Dichtungen des MS. Harley 2253, Berlin 1878. They are literary and rather artificial in form.

D and E are minstrels' songs found, among other popular snatches, on a fly-leat of Bodleian MS. Rawlinson D. 913, and edited by Heuser in Anglia, vol. xxx, p. 173. In E ll. 14-16 and ll. 17-19 are to be expanded on the model of ll. 7-13. For a Latin Nativity poem to this tune see R. L. Greene, Speculum, xxvii (1952), pp. 504 ff.

All these songs are early, and have a lightness and gaiety that become rare as the fourteenth century advances.

F is one of several English scraps (ed. Furnivall in Political, Religious, and Love Poems, E.E.T.S., pp. 249 ff.) that are found scattered through the Latin text of MS. Harley 7322. Most of the English pieces are without poetical merit, but in this one poem the writer has attained a perfect simplicity.

G, printed in Wright and Halliwell's Reliquiae Antiquae, 1845, vol. i, p. 144, has been recognized as the first of the English ballads. It is the only example before 1400 of the swift and dramatic movement, the sudden transitions, and the restrained expression, characteristic of the ballad style.

H, first printed in Reliquiae Antiquae, vol. i, p. 240, is the latest of the short pieces. With onomatopoeic effects it gives a vivid if unfriendly picture of a blacksmith's forge on a busy night.

I is a charm edited by Furnivall at p. 43 of the E.E.T.S. volume in which F appears.

THE YORK PLAY 'HARROWING OF HELL'

British Museum MS. Addit. 35290 (about 1430-40), f. 193 b.

The miracle play Harrowing of Hell is assigned to the craft of Saddlers in the York cycle, edited by Miss L. Toulmin-Smith, Oxford 1885, pp. 372 ff. This is the text reproduced below. It is also found, though in a less perfect form, among the Towneley Plays, ed. England and Pollard, E.E.T.S., 1897, pp. 293 ff.

All the mediaeval stories of Christ's Descent into Hell are based on the gospel of Nicodemus, which seems to date from the fourth century, though the legend is referred to nearly two centuries earlier. This apocryphal narrative was popular throughout the Middle Ages. There is a prose translation in late Anglo-Saxon, and a Middle English verse rendering supplies some of the phrases in the play.

Two points deserve notice for their bearing on the development of miracles. A trace of their origin in the services of the Church is seen in the use made of the Scriptural passage 'Attollite portas, principes, vestras, et elevamini portae aeternales, et introibit rex gloriae', the dramatic possibilities of which were recognized in ritual from an early date. And the growing taste for comic scenes is met, without prejudice to the serious characters, by the rudimentary buffoonery of the Devil and his companions.

THE TOWNELEY PLAY OF NOAH

Towneley MS. (about 1475), ff. 76 ff.

The Towneley Miracles, so called because the manuscript belonged in recent times to the library of Towneley Hall in Lancashire, are edited by England and Pollard, E.E.T.S., 1897. The cycle is a composite one—for instance it includes a later form of the York play Harrowing of Hell (No. XVI, above)—but it is distinguished by a group of plays and interpolated scenes which seem to have been specially composed for representation at Wakefield. Formally this group is marked by the use of a peculiar nine-lined stanza, riming aaaabcccb, with central rimes in the first four lines. The rough vigour of the comic scenes is still more distinctive, and there can be little doubt that all are the work of one man. The specimen of his style most often reprinted is The Second Shepberd's Play, which has an original and purely secular comic plot. The Play of Noab is more typical of the English Miracle in its later development. This subject was always popular with early playwrights, for the Ark made a spectacle, and the traditional quarrels of Noah and his wife gave scope for contests in fisticuffs and rough raillery—the stuff of primitive comedy.

1. Noe. MYGHTFULL God veray, Maker of all that is, Thre persons withoutten nay, oone God in endles blis, Thou maide both nyght and day, beest, fowle, and fysh, All creatures that lif may wroght Thou at Thi wish,

As Thou wel myght;

The son, the moyne, verament,
Thou maide, the firmament,
The sternes also full feruent
To shyne Thou maide ful bright.

2. Angels Thou maide ful euen, all orders that is,

To haue the blis in heuen; this did Thou, more and les,
Full mervelus to neuen; yit was ther vnkyndnes

More bi foldis seuen then I can well expres;

For whi?

Of all angels in brightnes
God gaf Lucifer most lightnes, Yit prowdly he flyt his des,
And set hym euen Hym by.

3. He thoght hymself as worthi as Hym that hym made,
In brightnes, in bewty, therfor He hym degrade,
Put hym in a low degré soyn after, in a brade,
Hym and all his menye, wher he may be vnglad

35

Shall thay neuer wyn away
Hence vnto Domysday, Bot burne in bayle for ay;
Shall thay neuer dysseuer.

4. Soyne after, that gracyous Lord to his liknes maide man,
That place to be restord euen as He began,
Of the Trinité bi accord, Adam and Eue that woman,
To multiplie without discord, in Paradise put He thaym,
And sithen to both

Gaf in commaundement
On the Tre of Life to lay no hend.
Bot yit the fals feynd
Made Hym with man wroth,

5. Entysyd man to glotony, styrd him to syn in pride; Bot in Paradise, securly, myght no syn abide, And therfor man full hastely was put out in that tyde, In wo and wandreth for to be, in paynes full vnrid 40 To knowe, Fyrst in erth, and sythen in hell
With feyndis for to dwell,
Bot He his mercy mell
To those that will Hym trawe.

45

6. Oyle of mercy He hus hight, as I haue hard red, To euery lifyng wight that wold luf Hym and dred; Bot now before His sight euery liffyng leyde, Most party day and nyght, syn in word and dede Full bold:

50

Som in pride, ire, and enuy, Som in coueteis and glotyny, Som in sloth and lechery, And other wise many fold.

55

7. Therfor I drede lest God on vs will take veniance, For syn is now alod, without any repentance. Sex hundreth yeris and od haue I, without distance, In erth, as any sod, liffyd with grete grevance Allway;

60

And now I wax old, Seke, sory, and cold, As muk apon mold I widder away.

8. Bot yit will I cry for mercy and call: Noe, Thi seruant, am I, Lord ouer all! Therfor me, and my fry shal with me fall, Saue from velany, and bryng to Thi hall In heuen;

And kepe me from syn
This warld within;
Comly Kyng of mankyn,

70

I pray The, here my stevyn! [God appears above.]

9.	Deus. Syn I haue maide all thyng that is liffand, Duke, emperour, and kyng, with Myne awne hand, For to haue thare likyng, bi see and bi sand,	71
	Euery man to My bydyng shuld be bowand
	Full feruent,
	That maide man sich a creatoure,
	Farest of favoure;	,
	Man must luf Me paramoure	186
	By reson, and repent.
10.	Me thoght I shewed man luf when I made hym to be	е

All angels abuf, like to the Trynyté;
And now in grete reprufe full low ligis he,
In erth hymself to stuf with syn that displeases Me
Most of all.
Veniance will I take
In erth for syn sake;

In erth for syn sake;
My grame thus will I wake
Both of grete and small.

90

Bi me he settis no store, and I am his soferan;
I will distroy therfor both beest, man and woman,
All shall perish, les and more; that bargan may thay ban
That ill has done.

In erth I se right noght
Bot syn that is vnsoght;
Of those that well has wroght
Fynd I bot a fone.

With floodis that shall flo and ryn with hidous rerd;
I haue good cause therto; for Me no man is ferd.
As I say shal I do—of veniance draw My swerd,
And make end

With floodis so stoute.

That shall ryn on a route, Shall be ouerlaide.

35. He saide all shall be slayn, bot oonely we, Oure barnes that ar bayn, and thare wifis thre.

A ship He bad me ordayn, to safe vs and oure fee:

Therfor with all oure mayn thank we that fre, Beytter of bayll.

Hy vs fast, go we thedir.

Vxor. I wote neuer whedir,

I dase and I dedir

For ferd of that tayll.

315

Noe. Be not aferd, have done, trus sam oure gere, 36. That we be ther or none, without more dere.

> Primus filius. It shall be done full sone. Brether, help to bere.

> Secundus filius. Full long shall I not hoyne to do my devere.

Brether sam.

Tercius filius. Without any yelp.

At my myght shall I help.

Vxor. Yit, for drede of a skelp, Help well thi dam.

Noe. Now ar we there as we shuld be: 37. 325 Do get in oure gere, oure catall and fe, Into this vessell here, my chylder fre. Vxor. I was neuer bard ere, as euer myght I the, In sich an oostré as this. In fath, I can not fynd 330 Which is before, which is behynd. Bot shall we here be pynd, Noe, as haue thou blis? Noe. Dame, as it is skill, here must vs abide grace; 38. Therfor, wife, with good will, com into this place. Vxor. Sir, for lak nor for Gill will I turne my face, Till I haue on this hill spon a space On my rok. Well were he myght get me! Now will I downe set me: 340 Yit reede I no man let me. For drede of a knok. Noe. Behold to the heuen the cateractes all, 39. That are open full euen, grete and small, And the planettis seuen left has there stall. 345 Thise thoners and levyn downe gar fall Full stout Both halles and bowers. Castels and towres. Full sharp ar thise showers 350 That renys aboute. 40. Therfor, wife, haue done, com into ship fast. Vxor. Yei, Noe, go cloute thi shone, the better will thai last.

Prima mulier. Good moder, com in sone, for all is

Both the son and the mone

ouercast

Secunda mulier.

And many wynd blast

Full sharp.

Thise floodis so thay ryn,

Therfor, moder, come in.

Vxor. In fayth, yit will I spyn; All in vayn ye carp.

n ye carp. 360

41. Tercia mulier. If ye like ye may spyn, moder, in the ship.

Noe. Now is this twyys com in, dame, on my frenship. Vxor. Wheder I lose or I wyn, in fayth, thi felowship Set I not at a pyn. This spyndill will I slip Apon this hill,

Or I styr oone fote.

Noe. Peter! I traw we dote.

Without any more note

Come in if ye will.

42. Vxor. Yei, water nyghys so nere that I sit not dry, 370 Into ship with a byr therfor will I hy
For drede that I drone here.

Noe. Dame, securly,

It bees boght ful dere ye abode so long by Out of ship.

Vxor. I will not, for thi bydyng,

Go from doore to mydyng.

Noe. In fayth, and for youre long taryyng Ye shal lik on the whyp.

43. Vxor. Spare me not, I pray the, bot euen as thou thynk, Thise grete wordis shall not flay me.

Noe. Abide, dame, and drynk, 380

For betyn shall thou be with this staf to thou stynk; Ar strokis good? say me.

What say ye, Wat Wynk? Vxor. Noe. Speke! Cry me mercy, I say! Vxor. Therto say I nay. Noe. Bot thou do, bi this day! Thi hede shall I breke. Vxor. Lord, I were at ese, and hertely full hoylle, Might I onys haue a measse of wedows coyll; For thi saull, without lese, shuld I dele penny doyll, 390 So wold mo, no frese, that I se on this sole Of wifis that ar here. For the life that thay leyd, Wold thare husbandis were dede. For, as euer ete I brede, 395 So wold I oure syre were. Noe. Yee men that has wifis, whyls they ar yong, 45. If ye luf youre lifts, chastice thare tong: Me thynk my hert ryfis, both levyr and long, To se sich stryfis wedmen emong. 400 Bot I. As haue I blys, Shall chastyse this. Vxor. Yit may ye mys, Nicholl Nedy 1 405 Noe. I shall make be still as stone, begynnar of 46. blunder! I shall bete the bak and bone, and breke all in sonder. [They fight.] Vxor. Out. alas, I am gone! Oute apon the, mans wonder!

Noc. Se how she can grone, and I lig vnder;

Bot, wife,

In this hast let vs ho,

For my bak is nere in two.

Vxor. And I am bet so blo

That I may not thryfe.

[They enter the Ark.]

47. Primus filius. A! whi fare ye thus, fader and moder both?

Secundus filius. Ye shuld not be so spitus, standyng in sich a woth Tercius filius. Thise (floodis) ar so hidus, with many a cold coth.

Noe. We will do as ye bid vs, we will no more be wroth, Dere barnes!

Now to the helme will I hent,

420

And to my ship tent.

Vxor. I se on the firmament, Me thynk, the seven starnes.

48. Noe. This is a grete flood, wife, take hede.

Vxor. So me thoght, as I stode; we ar in grete drede;

Thise wawghes ar so wode.

Noe. Help, God, in this nede !

As Thou art stereman good, and best, as I rede, Of all;

Thou rewle vs in this rase,

As Thou me behete hase.

430

Vxor. This is a perlous case. Help, God, when we call!

49. Noe. Wife, tent the stere-tre, and I shall asay
The depnes of the see that we bere, if I may.

Vxor. That shall I do ful wysely. Now go thi way, 435

For apon this flood haue we flett many day With pyne.

Noe. Now the water will I sownd:

A! it is far to the grownd;

This trauell I expownd

Had I to tyne.

440

50. Aboue all hillys bedeyn the water is rysen late

Cubettis fyfteyn, bot in a higher state

It may not be, I weyn, for this well I wate:

This forty dayes has rayn beyn; it will therfor abate 445
Full lele.

This water in hast

Eft will I tast.

Now am I agast,

It is wanyd a grete dele.

450

Now are the weders cest, and cateractes knyt,
 Both the most and the leest.

Vxor.

Me thynk, bi my wit,

The son shynes in the eest. Lo, is not youd it?

We shuld have a good feest, were thise floodis flyt

So spytus.

455

Noe. We have been here, all we,

Thre hundreth dayes and fyfty.

Vxor. Yei, now wanys the see; Lord, well is vs!

52. Noe. The thryd tyme will I pruse what depnes we bere.

Vxor. How long shall thou hufe? Lay in thy lyne there.

Noe. I may towch with my lufe the grownd evyn here.

495

Vxor. Then begynnys to grufe to vs mery chere; Bot, husband, What grownd may this be? 465 Noe. The hyllys of Armonye. Vxor. Now blissid be He That thus for vs can ordand! Noe. I see toppys of hyllys he, many at a syght, No thyng to let me, the wedir is so bright. 470 Vxor. Thise ar of mercy tokyns full right. Noe. Dame, thou counsell me, what fowll best myght, And cowth. With flight of wyng Bryng, without taryying, 475 Of mercy som tokynyng, Ayther bi north or southe? 54. For this is the fyrst day of the tent moyne. Vxor. The ravyn, durst I lay, will com agane sone; As fast as thou may, cast hym furth, haue done; 480 He may happyn today com agane or none With grath. Noe. I will cast out also Dowfys oone or two. 485 Go youre way, go, God send you som wathe! 55. Now ar thise fowles flone into seyr countré; Pray we fast ichon, kneland on our kne, To Hym that is alone worthiest of degré, That He wold send anone oure fowles som fee 490 To glad vs. Vxor. Thai may not fayll of land, The water is so wanand. Noe. Thank we God Allweldand, That Lord that made vs!

56 .	It is a wonder thyng, me thynk, sothlé,
	Thai ar so long taryyng, the fowles that we Cast out in the mornyng.
	Vxor.	Syr, it may be
	Thai tary to thay bryng.		ļ

Noe. Apon land here anone that we were, fayn I wold, My childer dere. Sem, Iaphet and Cam, With gle and with gam, Com go we all sam, 530 We will no longer abide here. Vxor. Here have we beyn, Noy, long enogh With tray and with teyn, and dreed mekill wogh. Noe. Behald on this greyn nowder cart ne plogh Is left, as I weyn, nowder tre then bogh, 535 Ne other thyng: Bot all is away: Many castels, I say, Grete townes of aray, Flitt has this flowyng. 540 Vxor. Thise floodis not afright all this warld so wide Has mevid with myght on se and bi side. Noe. To dede ar that dyght, prowdist of pryde, Euerich a wyght that euer was spyde With syn, 545 All ar thai slayn, And put vnto payn. Vxor. From thens agayn May thai neuer wyn? Noe. Wyn? No, iwis, bot He that myght hase Wold myn of thare mys, and admytte thaym to grace; As He in bayll is blis, I pray Hym in this space, In heven hye with His to purvaye vs a place, That we. With His santis in sight, 555

Explicit processus Noe.

And His angels bright, May com to His light: Amen, for charité.

NOTES

ı

Dialect: North-East Midland of Lincolnshire.

Inflexions:-

VERB: pres. ind. 2 sg. hast 131. 3 sg. stondeh 8.

3 pl. calle 32, seye 254; beside dos 157 (see note).

imper. pl. comeb 80, dob 82. pres. p. karoland (in rime) 117, 150, 222. strong pp. wryte 37, fal 195, gone 161.

PRONOUN 3 PERS.: fem. nom. she 48; pl. nom. hey 32;

poss. here 37; obj. hem 39.

The inflexions are very much simplified as compared with those of the Kentish Ayenbyte (III), but the verse shows that final unaccented -e was better preserved in the original than in our late MS., e.g.

And specyaly at hygh(è) tymes 13. For to see bys hard(è) dome 173. And at he hre(è) day(è)s ende 198. hat none myst(è) leye yn graue 217.

Sounds: $\bar{\varrho}$ is regular for OE. \bar{a} : lothe 9, wroth 10, &c.; but the only decisive rime is also (OE. alsw \bar{a}): to (OE. $t\bar{\varrho}$) 35-6, where $\bar{\varrho}$ after (s)w has become close $\bar{\varrho}$; see Appendix § 8. ii, note.

Syntax: the loose constructions, e. g. ll. 15 ff. (note), 134-5, 138-9, 216-19, are characteristic of the period.

The history of this legend is traced by E. Schröder, Zeitschrift für Kirchengeschichte, vol. xvii, 1896, pp. 94 ff., and, more summarily, by Gaston Paris, Les Danseurs maudits, Paris 1900. The circumstances from which it sprang appear to belong to the year 1021. Kölbigk, in Anhalt, Saxony, was the scene of the dance. In 1074 it is referred to as 'famous' by a German chronicler, who records the healing of one of the dancers in 1038 through the miraculous powers of St. Wigbert.

Mendicants who suffered from or could simulate nervous diseases like St. Vitus's dance, were quick to realize their opportunity, and two letters telling the story were circulated as credentials by pretended survivors of the band. Both are influenced in form by a sermon of St. Augustine of Hippo which embodies a similar story (Migne, Patrologia, vol. xxxviii, col. 1443). The first (Letter of Otbert), which claims to be issued by Peregrinus bishop of Cologne, spread rapidly through Western Europe. This was the version that Mannyng found in William of Wadington. The second (Letter of Theodric) makes Bruno bishop of Toul, afterwards Pope Leo IX, vouch for the facts. In its extant form it derives from the Latin 'Legend of St. Edith of Wilton' by the monk Goscelin, who wrote about the year 1080 (see A. Wilmart, Analecta Boilandiana lvi, fasc. iii and iv, 1938). This was the text that Mannyng used. A later English version is found in the dreary fifteenth-century Life of St. Editha (ed. Horstmann, ll. 4063 ff.).

Iff. games: Dances and shows in the churchyard were constantly condemned by the Church in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. In 1287 a synod at Exeter rules ne quisquam luctas, choreas, vel also ludos inhonestos in coemeteriis exercere praesumat, praecipue in vigiliis et festis sanctorum. See Chambers, The Mediaeval Stage, vol. i, pp. 90 ff.

6. or tabure bete: Note the use of bete infin. as a verbal noun = betyng; cp. X1b 184-5.

10-12. 'And he (sc. a good priest) will become angered sooner than one who has no learning, and who does not understand Holy Writ.'

nakes the negation more emphatic. Here the writer wavers between two forms of expression: (1) 'do not sing carols in holy places', and (2) 'to sing carols in holy places is sacrilege'.

25-8. yn pys londe, &c. The cure of Theodric, not the dance, took place in England. Brightgiva is said to have been abbess of Wilton at the time, and 'King Edward' is Edward the Confessor (1042-66).

34-5. The church of Kölbigk is dedicated to St. Magnus, of whom nothing certain is known. The memory of St. Bukcestre, if ever there was such a saint, appears to be preserved only in this story.

36. pat pey come to: Construe with hyt in 1. 35.

37 ff. Here names of alle: The twelve followers of Gerlew are named in the Latin text, but Mannyng gives only the principal actors. The inconsistency is still more marked in the Bodleian MS., which after 1. 40 adds:—

Pe ouher twelue here names alle
Pus were hey wrete, as y can kalle.
Otherwise the Bodleian MS. is very closely related to the Harleian sharing most of its errors and peculiarities.

44. be prestes doghtyr of he tounne, 'the priest of the town's daughter'. In early ME, the genitive inflexion is not, as in Modern English, added to the last of a group of words: cp. XIV d 10 De Kynges sone of heuene 'the King of Heaven's son'. The same construction occurs in VIII a 19 for he Lordes houe of heuene = 'for the love of the Lord of Heaven', and in VIII a 214; but in these passages the genitive is objective, and Modern English does not use the inflexion at all (note to The ME, and modern expressions have their point of agreement in the position of the genitive inflexion, which always precedes immediately the noun on which the genitive depends. Cp. notes to 11 518, VI 23, and XIV d 1.

46. Ažone: z = z here. The name is Azo in the Latin.

55. Beu(u)ne: (derived from the accusative Beuonem) = Beuo of 1. 50 and Beuolyne of 1. 62. The form is properly Boyo not Bevo. Considerable liberties were taken with proper names to adapt them to metre or rime: e.g. l. 52 Merswynde; l. 63 This habit, and frequent Merswyne; cp. note to l. 246. miscopying, make it difficult to rely on names in mediaeval stories.

61. Quid stamus? Cur non imus [hinc]?: Terence, Eunuchus,

1. 465.

65. Grysly: An error for Gerlew, Latin Gerleuus, from Low

German $G\bar{e}rl\bar{e}f = OE$. $G\bar{a}rl\bar{a}f$.

83. for Crystys awe: In Modern English a phrase like Christ's awe could mean only 'the awe felt by Christ'. But in OE. Cristes ege, or ege Cristes, meant also 'the awe of Christ (which men feel)', the genitive being objective. In ME. the word order eie Cristes is dropped, but Cristes eie (or awe, the Norse form) is still regular for '(men's) fear of Christ'. Hence formal ambiguities like pe Lordes love of heuene VIII a 19, which actually means '(men's) love of the Lord of Heaven', but grammatically might mean 'the Lord of Heaven's love (for men)'—see note to l. 44 above.

96-7. The Latin Letter of Theodric in fact has ab isto officio ex Dei nutu amodo (henceforth) non cessetis.

127. a saue: lit. 'have safe', i.e. 'rescue'. Saue is here adj.

128-9. ys: flessh: The rime requires the alternative forms es (as in 1. 7) and fles(s). Cp. note to VII 4.

132. 30w par nat aske: There is no need for you to ask;

you is dative after the impersonal har.

156-7. werynes: dos. The rime is false. Perhaps Mannyng wrote: As many body for goyng es [sc. wery], and a copyist misplaced es, writing: As many body es for goyng. If body es were read as bodyes, a new verb would then be added.

169. Note the irony of the refrain. The Letter of Othert adds the picturesque detail that they gradually sank up to their waists in the ground through dancing on the same spot.

172. De Emperoure Henry: Probably Henry II of Germany, Emperor from 1014 to 1024. A certain vagueness in points of time and place would save the bearers of the letter from awkward questions.

188-9. banned: woned. The rime (OE. bannan and wunian) is false, and the use of woned 'remained' is suspicious. Mannyng perhaps wrote bende 'put in bonds': wende (= sede l. 101) went'; or (if the form band for tanned(e) could be evidenced so early) band 'cursed': wand, pret. of winden, 'went'.

195. fal yn a swone: So MS., showing that by the second half of the fourteenth century the pp. adj. aswon had been wrongly analysed into the indef. article a and a noun swon. Mannyng may have written fallen aswone. See Glossary, s. v.

234. Wyth sundyr lepys: 'with separate leaps'; but Wyth was probably added by a scribe who found in his original sundyrlepys, adv., meaning 'separately',-

Kar suvent par les mains Des malvais escrivains Sunt livre corrumput.

240. Seynt Edyght. St. Edith (d. 984) was daughter of King Edgar, and abbess of Wilton. The rime is properly Edit: Teodric, for t and k are sufficiently like in sound to rime together in the best ME. verse; cp. note to XV g 27.

246. Brunyng . . . seynt Tolous: Latin Bruno Tullanus. Robert probably did not hesitate to provide a rime by turning Toul into Toulouse. Bruno afterwards became Pope Leo IX (1049-54).

254-5. trowed: God. Read trod, a shortened form, revealed by rimes in North Midland texts. The identical rime occurs three times in Mannyng's Chronicle (ed. Hearne, p. 339; ed. Furnivall, Il. 7357-8, 8111-12); and, again with substitution of troud for trod, in Havelok, Il. 2338-9.

H

Dialect: South-Western, with some admixture of Northern forms due to a copyist.

Inflexions:-

VERB: pres. ind. 1 sg. ichaue, &c. (see note to l. 129).

2 sg. makest 169, worst 170.

3 sg. geh (in rime) 238; contracted fint 239, last 335, sitt 443, stont 556.

2 pl. 3e bep 582.

3 pl. strikeb 252 (proved by rime with 3 sg. likeb).

imper. pl. make 216, chese 217; beside dob 218.

pres. p. berking 286 (in rime with verbal sb.); daunceing (in rime) 298. The forms kneland 250, liggeand 388, are due to a Northern copyist.

strong pp. (various forms): go (: wo) 196, ygo (: mo) 349, ydone (: -none) 76, comen 29, come 181, ycomen 203, yborn 174, bore 210.

infin. Note aski (OE, acsian) 467 (App. § 13 vii). PRONOUN 3 PERS.: fem. nom. he 408, 446, hye 337, beside sche 75, 77, &c.

pl. nom. he (in rime) 185, hye 91, beside hai 32, 69, &c.; poss. her 'their' 87, 413, 415; obj. hem 69, &c.

NOUN: Note the plurals honden 79, berien 258.

The original text preserved final -e better than the extant MSS., e. g.

And seyd(e) bus he king(e) to 119. Pat noping help(e) pe no schal 172. Al pe vt(e)mast(e) wal 357.

So, sir, as ze seyd(e) noupe 466.

Sounds: $\overline{\rho}$ for OE. $\overline{a}$ is proved in rime: biholde (OE. behåldan): gold (OE. gold) 367-8 (cp. 467-8); and whote (OE. gehaten): note (OFr. note) 601-2.

The rime frut: lite 257-8 points to original frut: lut (OE. $l\bar{y}t$), with Western \vec{u} , from OE. \vec{y} , riming with OFr. \vec{u} .

1-22. These lines, found also in Lai le Freine, would serve as preface to any of the Breton lays, with the couplet ll. 23-4 as the special connecting link. In the Auchinleck MS., Orfeo begins on a fresh leaf at 1. 25, without heading or capitals to indicate that it is a new poem. The leaf preceding has been There is good reason to suppose that it contained the lines supplied in the text from the Harleian MS.

4. frely, 'goodly': Lai le Freine has ferly 'wondrous'.

12. MS. moost to lowe: means 'most (worthy) to be praised', and there are two or three recorded examples of to lowe = to alowe in this sense. But MS. Ashmole and the corresponding lines in Lai le Freine point to most o loue 'mostly of love' as the common reading. The typical 'lay' is a poem of moderate length, telling a story of love, usually with some supernatural element, in a refined and courtly style.

13. Brytayn, 'Brittany': so Brytouns 16 = 'Bretons'. Cp.

Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, Prologue, beginning Thise olde gentil Britons in hir dayes

Of diverse aventures maden layes Rymeyed in hir firste Briton tonge, Whiche layes with hir instrumentz they songe, &c.

20. The curious use of it after the plural layes is perhaps not original. Lai le Freine has: And maked a lay and yaf it name.

26. In Ingland: an alteration of the original text to give local colour. Cp. ll. 49-50 and l. 478.

29-30. Pluto: the King of Hades came to be regarded as the King of Fairyland; cp. Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, 1. 983 Pluto that is the kyng of fairye. The blunder by which Juno is made a king is apparently peculiar to the Auchinleck copy.

33-46. These lines are not in the Auchinleck MS., but are probably authentic. Otherwise little prominence would be given to Orfeo's skill as a harper.

- 41 ff. A confused construction: In pe world was never man born should be followed by \(\rho pat\) he \(\ne\) schulde pinke; but the writer goes on as if he had begun with 'every man in the world'. And = 'if'.
- 46. ioy and overload the verse, and are probably an unskilful addition to the text.
- 49-50. These lines are peculiar to the Auchinleck MS., and are clearly interpolated; cp. l. 26 and l. 478. Winchester was the old capital of England, and therefore the conventional seat of an English king.

57. comessing: The metre points to a disyllabic form comsing here, and to comsi in 1. 247.

80. it bled wete: In early English the clause which is logically subordinate is sometimes made formally co-ordinate. More normal would be pat (it) bled wete 'until (or so that) it bled wet'; i.e. until it was wet with blood.

82. reuey(se)d or some such form of ravished is probably right. reneyd 'apostate' is a possible reading of the MS., but does not fit the sense. N. E. D. suggests remeued.

102. what is tef: 'What ails you?'; cp. l. 115. Te for he after s of is. Such modifications are due either to dissimilation of like sounds, as h:s which are difficult in juxtaposition; or to assimilation of unlike sounds, as hatow 165, for hat how.

115. 'What ails you, and how it came about?'; cp. l. 102.

129. ichil = ich wille; and so ichaue 209, icham 382, ichot XV b 23. These forms, reduced to chill, cham, &c., were still characteristic of the Southern dialect in Shakespeare's time: cp. King Lear, IV. vi. 239 Chill not let go, Zir.

131. pat noust nis: 'That cannot be'; cp. l. 457 pat noust

157-8. palays: ways. The original rime was perhaps palys: wise'.

170. 'Wherever you may be, you shall be fetched.'

201-2. barouns: renouns. Forms like renouns in rime are usually taken over from a French original.

215. The overloaded metre points to a shorter word like wite for vnderstond.

216. Make 30u han a parlement: 30u is not nom., but dat. 'for yourselves'. Observe that Orfeo acts like a constitutional English king.

241. he fowe and griis: A half translation of OFr. vair et gris. Vair (Lat. varius) was fur made of alternate pieces of the grey back and white belly of the squirrel. Hence it is rendered by fowe, OE. fag 'varicolor'. Grus is the grey back alone, and the French word is retained for the rime with bits, which was probably in the OFr. original.

258. berien: The MS. may be read berren, but it is better to assume that the i has been carelessly shaped by the scribe.

289. him se, 'see (for himself)', and similarly slep hou he XV g 13. This reflexive use of the dative pronoun, which cannot be reproduced in a modern rendering, is common in OE. and ME., especially with verbs of motion; cp. note to XV g 24. But distinguish went him 475, 501, where him is accusative, not dative (OE. wente hine), because the original sense of went is 'turned', which takes a reflexive object.

342. me no reche = I me no reche. The alternative would be the impersonal me no rechep.

343. also spac = also blive 142 = also swipe 574: 'straightway', &c.

363. MS. auowed (or anowed) is meaningless here. Anow(r)ed, or the doubtful by-form anow(r)ed 'adorned', is probably the true reading.

364. aumal, 'enamel'. Holthausen's correction for animal (Anglia, vol. xlii, p. 427) is confirmed by the MS.

382. The line is too long—a fault not uncommon where direct speech is introduced, e.g. l. 419 and 178. Usually a correct line can be obtained by dropping words like quath he, which are not as necessary in spoken verse as they are where writing alone conveys the sense. But sometimes the flaw may lie in the forms of address: l. 382 would be normal without Parjay; l. 419 may once have been:

And seyd 'Lord, 3if bi wille were'.

There is no task more slippery than the metrical reconstruction of ME. poems, particularly those of which the extant text derives from the original not simply through a line of copyists, but through a line of minstrels who passed on the verses from memory and by word of mouth.

388. The line seems to be corrupt, and, as usual, the Harleian and Ashmole MSS, give little help. Ful can hardly be a sb. meaning 'multitude' from the adj. full. Some form of fele (OE. fela) 'a great number' would give possible grammar and sense (cp. l. 401), but bad metre. Perhaps ful should be deleted as a scribe's anticipation of folk in the next line; for the construction seize... of folk cp. XVI 388; and Hous of Fame, Bk. iii, ll. 147 ff.

433. Pei we noult welcom no be: Almost contemporary with Sir Orfeo is the complaint of an English writer that the halls of the nobles stood open to a lawyer, but not to a poet:

Exclusus ad innuam poteris sidere Ipse licet venias, Musis comitatus, Homere!

'Though thou came thyself, Homer, with all the Muses, thou mightst sit at the door, shut out!', T. Wright, Political Songs (1839), p. 209.

446. hadde he, 'had she'. For he (OE. $h\bar{e}o$) = 'she' cp.

1. 408.

450. 'Now ask of me whatsoever it may be'. The plots of mediaeval romances often depend on the unlimited promises of an unwary king, whose honour compels him to keep his word. So in the story of Tristram, an Irish noble disguised as a minstrel wins Ysolde from King Mark by this same device, but is himself cheated of his prize by Tristram's skill in music.

458. 'An ill-matched pair you two would be!'

479. The halting verse may be completed by adding sum tyme before his, with the Harley and Ashmole MSS.

483. ybilt of the MS, and editors cannot well be a pp. meaning 'housed'. I prefer to take bilt as sb. = bild, build 'a building'; and to suppose that y has been miswritten for \bar{y} , the contraction for yn.

495. gan hold, 'held'; a good example of the ME. use of gan + infinitive with the sense of the simple preterite.

- 515. An unhappy suggestion home for the second come has sometimes been accepted. But a careful Southern poet could not rime home (OE. hām) and some (OE. sum). See note to VI 224.
- 518. For mi lordes love Sir Orfeo, 'for my lord Sir Orfeo's love'. Logically the genitive inflexion should be added to both of two substantives in apposition, as in OE. on Herodes dagum cyninges 'in the days of King Herod'. But in ME. the first substantive usually has the inflexion, and the second is uninflected; cp. V 207 kynge; hous Arthor 'the house of King Arthur'; and notes to 144, VI 23.

544. Allas! wreche: wreche refers to the speaker, as in 1.333. 551. hou it gep —: The sense is hard to convey without some cumbrous paraphrase like 'the inexorable law of this world —'. 552. It nis no bot of manes dep: 'There is no remedy for man's death', i.e. violent grief will do no good. Note it nis 'there is (not)'. In ME. the anticipated subject is commonly it where we use there.

565. in ynome: '(had) taken up my abode'; in 'dwelling' = NE. 'inn'. But her may be for 'her' rather than 'here'; and Ashmole MS. points to oure. See ll. 484 f.

599. herof overloads the line and is omitted in the Ashmole

MS.

Old diphthongs are preserved in greate (OE. great) 9, yeaf 22. In hyerof 1, yhyerde 49, hier 2, hieues 18, ye, ie represent diphthongs developed in Kentish rather than simple close ē.

Initial z = s in zome 'some' 2, zede 'said' 12, zuo 'so' 17; and initial u = f in uele 2, uayre 2, uram 4, bevil 41, evidence dialectical changes which occurred also in the South-West.

Syntax: The constructions are distorted by slavish following of the French original; see note to ll. 48-60.

38. This tale of Boniface, bishop of Ferentia in Etruria, is told in the Dialogues of Gregory the Great, Bk. i, chap. 9. Its first appearance in English is in the translation of the Dialogues made by Bishop Wærferth for King Alfred (ed. Hans Hecht, Leipzig 1900, pp. 67 ff.).

48-60. The French original of the passage, taken from an elegant fourteenth-century MS., Cotton Cleopatra A.V., fol. 144a, will show how slavishly Dan Michael followed his source:—

Apres il fu un poure home, sicom on dit, qui auoit une vache; e oi dire a son prestre en sarmon que Dieu disoit en leuangile que Dieu rendoit a cent doubles quanque on donast por lui. Le prodomme du conseil sa femme dona sa uache a son prestre, qui estoit riches. Le prestre la prist uolentiers, e lenuoiu pestre auoec les autres quil auoit. Cest ensample moustre bien que misericorde est bone marchande, car ele multiplie les biens temporels.

58-9. 'And they were adjudged to him before his bishop against the priest', i.e. the bishop ruled that the poor man should have all the cows.

The French fabliau 'Brunain' takes up the comic rather than the moral aspect of the story. A peasant, hearing the priest say that gifts to God are doubly repaid, thought it was a favourable opportunity to give his cow Blérain—a poor milker—to the priest. The priest ties her with his own cow Brunain. To the peasant's great joy, the unprofitable Blérain returns home, leading with her the priest's good cow.

 $\bar{\rho}$ becomes \bar{u} (\bar{u}) in gud(e) b 9, b 15; and its length is sometimes indicated by adding y, as in ruysand 'vaunting' b 80.

a. This poem is largely a translation of sentences excerpted from Rolle's Incendium Amoris, cc. xl-xli (Miss Allen in Mod. Lang. Review for 1919, p. 320). Useful commentaries are his prose Form of Perfect Living (ed. Horstmann, vol. i, pp. 3 ff.), and Commandment of Love to God (ibid. pp. 61 ff.), which supply many parallels in thought and phrasing; see, for example, the note to 1. 48 below.

a 1. feste. Not the adj. 'fast', but pp. 'fastened', and so in 1.82.
a 5. louyng, 'beloved one', here and in 1.56. This exceptional use of the verbal noun occurs again in my 3hernyng 'what a 9-12. The meaning seems to be: 'The throne of love is raised high, for it (i.e. love) ascended into heaven. It seems to me that on earth love is crafty, for it makes men pale and wan. It goes very near to the bed of bliss (i.e. the bridal bed of Christ and the soul) I assure you. Though the way may seem long to us, yet love unites God and man.'

a 24. louyng, 'praise' here and in XVI 405, from OE. lof praise'; quite distinct from louyng, lufyng, in ll. 5 and 56.

a 36. fle hat na man it maye, which no man can escape'. See Appendix § 12, Relative.

a 42. styll, 'always' rather than 'motionless'.

a 48. Cp. Form of Perfect Living, ed. Horstmann, vol. i, pp. 39-40: For luf es stalworth als he dede, hat slaes al lyuand thyng in erth; and hard als hell, hat spares noght till ham hat er dede. In The Commaniment of Love Rolle explains: For als dede slas al lyuand thyng in his worlde, sa perfite lufe slas in a mans sawle all fleschly desyres and erthly couaytise. And als hell spares noght til dede men, bot tormentes al hat commes bartill, alswa a man hat es in his [sc. the third, called 'Singular'] degré of lufe noght anly he forsakes he wretched solace of his lyf, bot alswa he couaytes to sofer pynes for Goddes lufe. (Ibid. p. 63.)

b4. scho takes erthe: From the Historia Animalium attributed to Aristotle, Bk. ix, c. 21. This is the authority referred to at l. 18, and at l. 33 (Bk. ix, c. 9); but the citations seem to be second hand, as they do not agree closely with the text of the Historia Animalium.

b 21-2. 'For there are many who never can keep the rule of love towards their friends, whether kinsmen or not.' MS. ynesche has been variously interpreted; but it must be corrected to ynence.

b 47. strucyo or storke: the ostrich, not the stork, is meant. Latin struthin has both meanings. On the whole, fourteenthcentury translators show a fair knowledge of Latin, but the average of scholarship, even among the clergy, was never high in the Middle Ages. In the magnificent Eadwine Psalter. written at Canterbury Cathedral in the twelfth century, Ps. ci. 7 similis factus sum pellicano is rendered by 'I am become like to the skin of a dog' (= pelli canis), though an ecclesiastic would recite this psalm in Latin at least once every week. The records of some thirteenth-century examinations of English clergy may be found in G. G. Coulton, A Medieval Garner (London 1910), pp. 270 ff. They include the classic answer of Simon, the curate of Sonning, who, being examined on the Canon of the Mass, and pressed to say what governed Te in Teigitur, clementissime Pater, ... supplices rogamus, replied 'Pater, for He governeth all things'. As for French, Michael of Northgate, a shaky translator, is fortunate in escaping gross blunders in the specimen chosen (III); but the English rendering of Mandeville's Travels is full of errors; see the notes to IX.

b 60. teches: better toches, according to the foot-note.

Alliterative Verse. The long lines in Gawayne, with The Destruction of Troy, Piers Plowman, and The Blacksmiths (XV k), are specimens of alliterative verse unmixed with rime, a form strictly comparable with Old English verse, from which it must derive through an unbroken oral tradition. While the detailed analysis of the Middle English alliterative line is complex and controversial, its general framework is describable in simple terms. It will be convenient to take examples from Gawayne, which shows most of the developments characteristic of Middle English.

I. The long line is divided by a caesura into two half lines, of which the second is the more strictly built so that the rhythm may be well marked. Each half line normally contains two principal stresses, e.g.

And went on his way || with his when one 6.

Pat schulde teche hym to tourne || to hat tene place 7.

But three stresses are not uncommonly found in the first half line:

Brôke? býled and brêke || bi bónkke? abóute 14; and, even for the simpler forms in Old and Middle English, the two-stress analysis has its opponents.

2. The two half lines are bound together by alliteration. In alliteration ch, st, s(c)h, sk, and usually sp, are treated as single consonants (see lines 64, 31, 15, 99, 25); any vowel may alliterate with any other vowel, e. g.

Pis oritore is $vgly \parallel with$ erbes our growen 122; and, contrary to the practice of correct OE. verse, h may alli-terate with vowels in Gawayne:

Hálde he now he hýže hóde | hat Árhur he rážt 229. The háhel héldet hym fró | and on his ax résted 263.

3. In correct OE, verse the alliteration falls on one or both of the two principal stresses of the first half line, and invariably on the first stress only of the second half line. This is the ordinary ME, type:

Pat schulde teche hym to tourne | to pat tine place 7; though verses with only one alliterating syllable in the first half line, e. g.

Bot I wyl to be chapel for chaunce but may falle 64, are less common in ME. than in OE. But in ME. the fourth stress sometimes takes the alliteration also:

Day clomben bi cloffes | per clonges pe colde 10. And when there is a third stress in the first half line, five syllables may alliterate:

Mist muged on he mor | malt on he mounter 12.

In sum, Middle English verse is richer than Old English in alliteration.

4. In all these verses the alliteration of the first stress in the second half line, which is essential in Old English, is maintained; but it is sometimes neglected, especially when the alliteration is otherwise well marked:

With he'se helme on his he'de || his launce in his honde (129; cp. 75), where the natural stress cannot fall on his.

5. So far attention has been confined to the stressed syllables, around which the unstressed syllables are grouped. Clearly the richer the alliteration, the more freedom will be possible in the treatment of the unstressed syllables without undue weakening of the verse form. In the first two lines of Beowulf—

Hwæt we Gárdéna || in géardágum | Péodcýninga || þrým gefrúnonthree of the half lines have the minimum number of syllables—four—and the other has only five. In Middle English, with more elaborate alliteration, the number of unstressed syllables is increased, so that the minimum half line of four syllables is rare, and often contains some word which may have had an additional flexional syllable in the poet's own manuscript, e. g.

he self (e) chapel 79. arzez in hert (e) 209.

The less regular first half line is found with as many as eleven syllables; e.g.

And sypen he kéueres bi a crágge 153.

6. The grouping of stressed and unstressed syllables determines the rhythm. In Old English the falling rhythm predominates, as in || Cáwayn he noble 81; and historically it is no doubt correct to trace the development of the ME. line from a predominantly falling rhythm. But in fact, owing to the frequent use of unstressed syllables before the first stress (even in the second half line where they are avoided in the OE. falling rhythm) the commonest type is:

 $\|$ and $\hat{p}e$ brode $3\hat{a}te3$ 1, $(\times \times \bot \times \bot \times)$

which from a strictly Middle English standpoint may be analysed as a falling rhythm with introductory syllables $(\times \times | \bot \times \bot \times)$, or as a rising rhythm with a weak ending $(\times \times \bot \times \bot \times)$. A careful reader, accustomed to the usage of English verse, will have no difficulty in following the movement, without entering into nice technical ties of historical analysis.

7. The Destruction of Troy is more regular than Gawayne in its versification, and better preserves the Old English tradition. Piers Plowman is looser and nearer to prose, so that the alliteration sometimes fails altogether, e.g. Extract a 95, 138. Such differences in technique may depend on date, on locality, or on the taste, training, or skill of the author.

Dialect: West Midland of Lancashire or Cheshire. (There is evidence of local knowledge in the account of Gawayne's ride in search of the Green Chapel, Il. 691 ff. of the complete text.)

lary of alliterative verse.

It is rich in number and variety of words—Norse, French, and native. Besides common words like race 8, wylle 16, kyrk 128, a3-267 (which displace native English forms res, wylde, chyrche, ete), Norse gives mug(g)ed 12, cayre3 52, scowes 99, skayned 99, wro 154, brobe 165, fyked 206, snyrt 244, &c. French are baret 47, oritore 122, fylor 157, giserne 197, kauelacion 207, frounses 238, &c. Myst-hakel 13, orpedly 164 are native words; while the rare stryhe 237 and raheled 226 are of doubtful origin.

Unless the alliteration is to be monotonous, there must be many synonyms for common words like man, knijt: e.g. burne 3, wyje 6, lede 27, gome 50, freke 57, tulk 65, knape 68, renk 138, most of which survive only by reason of their usefulness in alliterative formulae. Similarly, a number of verbs are used to express the common idea 'to move (rapidly)': bojen 9, schowuled 15, wonnen 23, ferked 105, romej 130, keuerej 153, whyrlande 154, &c. Here the group of synonyms arises from weakening of the ordinary prose meanings; and this tendency to use words in colourless or forced senses is a general defect of alliterative verse. For instance, it is hard to attach a precise meaning to note 24, gederej 92, glodes 113, wruxled 123, kest 308.

The Gawayne poet is usually artist enough to avoid the worst fault of alliterative verse—the use of words for mere sound without regard to sense, but there are signs of the danger in the empty, clattering line:

Bremly broke on a bent hat brode wat aboute 165.

Inflexions: The rime wafe: ta he 287-9 shows that organic final -e was sometimes pronounced in the poet's dialect.

VERB: pres. ind. 1 sg. haf 23; leue 60.

pres. p. normally -ande, e.g. schaterande 15; but very rarely -yng: gruchyng 58.

strong pp. born 2, wonnen 23; tone (= taken) 91.

The weak pa. t. and pp. show occasional -(e)t for -(e)d: hall 11, fondet 57, &c.

Note that present forms in -ie(n) are preserved, and the i extended to the past tense: louy (OE. lufian) 27, louies 31; spuryed 25.

PRONOUN 3 PERS.: pl. nom. pay 9; poss. hor 345, beside her 352; obj. hom, beside hem 353.

Sounds: $\bar{\rho}$ for older \bar{a} is common, and is proved for the original by rimes like more: restore (OFr. restorer) 213-15, pore: restore 286-8. But a is often written in the MS.: snaw 20, 166 (note rimes), halden 29, &c.

u for OE. y, characteristic of Western dialects, is found especially in the neighbourhood of labial consonants: spuryed (OE. spyrian) 25; muryly 268, 277; munt vb. 194 and sb. 282; beside myntes 284, lyste 78, hille 13.

u for OE. eo (normal ME. e) is another Western feature: burne

3, 21, &c., rurde 151.

aw for OE. ēow (normal ME. ew, ow) as in trawe 44, trawhe 219, rawhe 136, is still found in some Northern dialects.

Spelling: f(x) = f(x) is commonly written for final s: brede; 3, &c.; even when the final s is certainly voiceless as in for; force', 'torrent' 105, (a3-)le3' fear-less' 267. 13 is written for s in monosyllabic verbal forms, where it indicates the maintenance of voiceless final s under the stress (see rimes to hat3' has', VI 81): wat3' was' 1, got3' foos' 51, &c. In early Norman French s had the sound ts, and so could be written tz, as in Fitz-Gerald 'son (Mod. Fr. fils) of Gerald'. But later, French (t)s fell together with s in pronunciation, so that the spelling tz was transferred to original s, both in fourteenth-century Anglo-French and in English.

qu- occurs for strongly aspirated hw- in quyte 'white' 20, quat 'what' 111; but the alliteration is with w, not with k(w), e.g. And w?th quettyng awharf, er he wolde lyst 152.

The spelling goud 5, 50, &c., for god 'good' may indicate a sound change.

Notable is the carefully distinguished use of \ni in \ni e, but y in vow, e.g. at ll. 23-6.

3. blessed hym, 'crossed himself'; cp. XII b 86.

4-6. 'He gives a word of praise to the porter,—(who) kneeled before the prince (i.e. Gawayn) (and who) greeted him with "God and good day", and "May He save Gawayn!"—and went on his way, attended only by his man, who, &c.' Clumsiness in turning direct speech into reported speech is a constant source of difficulty in Middle English. For the suppressed relative cp. note to XIII a 36.

11. 'The clouds were high, but it was threatening below them.'

Halt for halet pp. 'drawn up'.

16. 'The way by which they had to go through the wood was very wild.' Note the regular omission of a verb of motion after shall, will, &c. Cp. 1. 64 I wyl to be chapel; 1. 332 3e schal... to my wones, &c.

28. 'If you would act according to my wit (i.e. by my advice)

you would fare the better.'

- 34. Hestor, oher oher, 'Hector, or any other'. Hector is quoted as the great hero of the Troy story, from which, and from the legends of Arthur, the Middle Ages drew their models of valour. The form Hestor occurs in Old French.
 - 35. 'He brings it about at the green chapel (that)', &c.

37. dynges: for MS. dynnes; Napier's suggestion.

41. He would as soon (lit. it seems to him as pleasant to) kill him, as be alive himself.'

43. 'If you reach that place you will be killed, I may warn you, knight.' Possibly I, y, has fallen out of the text after y of may (cp. v1 3), though there are clear instances in Old and Middle English where the pronominal subject must be understood from the context, e.g. 1 168, VIII a 237, 273. Note the transitions from plural 3e to singular be in 11. 42-3; and the evidence at 1. 72 f. that bou could still be used in addressing a superior.

44. Trawe de me pat: trow has here a double construction with both me and pat as direct objects.

56. 'That I shall loyally screen you, and never give out the tale that you fled for fear of any man that I knew.'

64. for chaunce pat may falle, 'in spite of anything that may happen '.

- 68-9. 'Though he be a stern lord (lit. a stern man to rule), and armed with a stave'. The short lines are built more with a view to rime than to sense.
- 72-4. 'Marry!' said the other, 'now you say so decidedly that you will take your own harm upon yourself, and it pleases you to lose your life, I have no wish to hinder you.'

76. ryde me: an instance of the rare ethic dative, which expresses some interest in the action of the verb on the part of one who is neither the doer of the action nor its object. Distinguish the uses referred to in the notes to II 289, XV g 24.

86. Lepes hym, 'gallops'. For hym, which refers to the rider, not the horse, cp. note to XV g 24.

92. Gryngolet: the name of Gawayn's horse. gedere; he rake seems to mean 'takes the path'. No similar transitive use of 'gather' is known.

95. he wayted hym aboute, 'he looked around him'. Cp.

1. 221 wayte3, and note to 1. 121.

99. 'The clouds seemed to him grazed by the crags'; i.e. the crags were so high that they seemed to him to scrape the clouds. I owe to Professor Craigie the suggestion that skayned is ON. skeina 'to graze', 'scratch'.

102-4. 'And soon, a little way off on an open space, a mound

(as it appeared) seemed to him remarkable.'

- ion. kaches his caple, 'takes control of his horse', i.e. takes up the reins again to start the horse after the halt mentioned at l. 100.
- 109. his riche: possibly 'his good steed'. The substantival use of an adjective is common in alliterative verse, e. g. l. 188 bat schyre (neck); 200 pe schene (axe); 245 pe scharp (axe); 343 pat cortays (lady). But it has been suggested that brydel has fallen out of the text after riche.

114. 'And it was all hollow within, nothing but an old

115 f. he couhe hit nost deme with spelle, 'he could not say (which it was)'. For deme 'to speak', &c., cp. vi i, xvb 29-30.

118. Wheher commonly introduces a direct question and should not be separately translated. Cp. VI 205 and note to XI a 51.

121. wysty is here, 'it is desolate here'. Note Wowayn = Wauwayn, an alternative form of Gawayn used for the alliteration. The alternation is parallel to that in guardian: warden; regard: reward XIV c 105; guarantee: warranty; (bi)gyled 359: (bi)wyled 357; werre 'war' beside French guerre; wait 'watch' (as at l. 95) beside French guetter; and is due to dialectal differences in Old French. The Anglo-Norman dialect usually preserved w in words borrowed from Germanic or Celtic, while others replaced it by gw, gu, which later became simple g in pronunciation.

125. in my frue wytte3: construe with fele.

127. pat chekke hit bytyde, 'which destruction befall!' pat...
hit = 'which'. chekke refers to the checkmate at chess.

135. Had we not Chaucer's Miller and The Reeves Tale, the vividness and intimacy of the casual allusions would show the place of the flour-mill in mediaeval life. Havelok drives out his foes

So dogges ut of milne-hous; and the Nightingale suggests as fit food for the Owl

one frogge

Pat sit at mulne under cogge.

These are records of hours spent by the village boys amid the noise of grinding and rush of water, in times when there was no rival mechanism to share the fascination of the water-driven mill.

137-43. 'This contrivance, as I believe, is prepared, sir knight, for the honour of meeting me by the way. Let God work His will, Lo! It helps me not a bit. Though I lose my life, no noise causes me to fear.' It has been suggested that well o(rw)00' weal or woe' should be read instead of the interjection we loo! But Gawayn's despair (l. 141) is not in keeping with ll. 70 f., 90 f., or with the rest of his speech. The looseness of the short lines makes emendation dangerous. Otherwise we might read Hit helppes he not a mote, i.e. whatever happens, mere noise will not help the Green Knight by making Gawayn afraid; or, alternatively, herme; 'harms' for helppes.

151. 'Yet he went on with the noise with all speed for a while, and turned away (to proceed) with his grinding, before he would come down.' The nonchalance of the Green Knight is marked throughout the poem.

155. A Dene? ax: the ordinary long-bladed battle-axe was called a 'Danish' axe, in French hache danoise, because the Scandinavians in their raids on England and France first proved its efficiency in battle.

158. bi hat lace, '(measured) by the lace'. In Gawayne (ll. 217 ff. of the full text) the axe used at the first encounter is described. It had:

A lace lapped aboute, pat louked at he hede, And so after he halme halched ful ofte, Wyth tryed tasseles perto tacched innoghe, &c.

'A lace wrapped about (the handle), which was fastened at the (axe's) head, and was wound about the handle again and again, with many choice tassels fastened to it', &c.

159. as fyrst, 'as at the first encounter', i.e. when he rode into Arthur's hall. His outlit of green is minutely described at

Il. 151 ff. of the full text.

162. Sette pe stele to pe stone: i. e. he used the handle of the axe as a support when crossing rough ground. stele = 'handle', not 'steel'.

164. hypped...stryde3: note the frequent alternation of past tense and historic present. So II. 3-4 passed... prayses; 107-8 kache3...com...liste3; 280-1 halde3...gef, &c.

169 f. 'Now, sweet sir, one can trust you to keep an appoint-

175. hat he fulled, 'what fell to your lot', i. e. the right to deal the first blow.

177. oure one, 'by ourselves'. To one 'alone' in early ME. the dative pronoun was added for emphasis, him one, us one, &c. Later and more rarely the possessive pronoun is found, as here. Al(l) was also used to strengthen one; so that there are six one; (4) ul one = alone 1. 87; (5) al him one, or him al one; (6) al his one, or his al one.

181. at a wap one, 'at a single blow'.

183. 'I shall grudge you no good-will because of any harm that befalls me.'

189-90. 'And acted as if he feared nothing: he would not tremble (dare) with terror.'

196. He (Gawayn) who was ever valiant would have been dead from his blow there.'

200. It must not be supposed that the chief incidents of Sir Gawayne were invented by the English poet. The three strokes, for example, two of them mere feints and the third harmless, can be shown to derive from the lost French source, which has Irish analogues. See pp. 71-4 of A Study of Gawain and the Green Knight (London 1916), by Professor Kittredge, a safe guide in the difficult borderland of folklore and romance.

207. 'Nor did I raise any quibble in the house of King Arthur.' On kynges hous Arthor see note to II 518.

222. ryue: the likeness of n and u in MSS. of the time makes it impossible to say whether the verb is riue 'to cleave', which is supported by l. 278, or rine, OE. hrinan, 'to touch'.

230. 'And look out for your neck at this stroke, (to see) if it may survive.'

233. I hope: here, and often in ME., hope means 'believe', 'expect'.

250. Gawayn appears to have carried his shield on his back. By a movement of his shoulders he lets it fall in front of him, so that he can use it in defence.

258. foo, 'fiercely', adv. parallel with zederly.

269. ry(n)kande, 'ringing'; Napier's suggestion for MS. rykande.

271-2. 'Nobody here has ill-treated you in an unmannerly way, nor shown you (discourtesy)': the object of kyd being understood from vnmanerly mysboden. habbes for MS. habbe is Napier's reading.

278-9. 'And cleft you with no grievous wound, (which) I rightly (merely) proffered you, because of the compact we made fast', &c. It is better to assume a suppression of the relative, than to put a strong stop after rof and treat sore as sb. object of profered. This latter punctuation gives sore the chief stress in the line, and breaks the alliteration and rhythm, which is correct as long as sore is taken with rof, so that its stress is subordinated.

286-7. 'Let a true man truly repay—then one need dread no peril.'

291. weued: perhaps not a weak pa. t. of weave-woven, but rather means 'to give', from OE. wāfan, 'to move'; weue in this sense occurs in Gawayne l. 1976.

294-5. 'And truly you seem to me the most faultless man that ever walked on foot.' The ME. construction, on he fautlest, where on 'one' strengthens the superlative, is found in Chaucer, Clerk's Tale 212:

Thanne was she oon the faireste under sonne, and still survives in Shakespeare's time, e.g. Henry VIII, II. iv. 48 f. one the wisest prince. It has been compared with Latin unus maximus, &c. In modern English the apposition has been replaced, with weakening of the sense: one of the (wisest), &c.

298. yow lakked . . . yow wonted: impersonal, since yow is dative. 'there was lacking in you'.

319. 'Let me win your good-will', 'Pardon me'.

331. I have transposed MS. of he grene chapel at cheualrous kny3te3, because such a use of at is hardly conceivable. A copyist might easily make the slip. Cp. 1. 35.

344. Bohe hat on and hat oher: Besides the Green Knight's young wife, there was a much older lady in the castle, 'yellow', with 'rugh, ronkled chekez', and so wrapped up

Dat nost wat; bare of hat burde bot he blake broses, De tweyne yen, and he nase, he naked lyphes, And hose were soure to se, and sellyly blered.

Gawayne 11. 961-3.

350-1. 'And David afterwards, who suffered much evil, was (morally) blinded by Bathsheba.

352-6. Since these were injured with their wiles, it would be a great gain to love them well, and not believe them—for a man who could do it [cp. note to XI b 209]. For these (Adam, Solomon, &c.) were of old the noblest, whom all happiness followed, surpassingly, above all the others that lived beneath the heavens. mused thought is used for the rime, and means no more than 'lived'. Il. 354-6 amount to 'above all other men'.

VI

Dialect: West Midland, like Gawayne.

The metre occasionally gives clear evidence that final flexional -e of the original has not always been preserved in the extant MS., e. g.

Pa; cortaysly ;e carp(è) con 21.

The most noteworthy verbal forms are:
pres. ind. 1 sg. byswyke; 208 (once only, in rime);

2 sg. hou quyte? 235;

3 sg. lehet 17; tott (= $t\bar{\varrho}s = t\bar{a}s = takes$) 153 (note).

I pl. we leuen 65; we calle 70;

3 pl. temen 100 (and cp. ll. 151-2); knawe 145; but pay gots 150, pykes 213 (both in rime).

imperative pl. dysplese; 62; gos, dot; 161.

pres. p. spornande 3.

pp. runne (in rime) 163, beside wroken 15, &c.

Characteristic Western forms are burne 37 (OE. beorn); wrhe 82 (OE. eorpe).

11-12. 'You, who were once the source of all my joy, made sorrow my companion.'

15. 'From the time when you were removed from every peril'.

The child died before she was two years old (l. 123).

22. 'I am but dust, and lack manners.' The MS. has

^{5. &#}x27;Like bubbling water that flows from a spring', i.e. his wild words rise from a heart that can no longer contain its affliction.

^{22. &#}x27;I am but dust, and lack manners.' The MS. has marere; mysse, which has been rendered 'botcher's waste'; but the poet is contrasting his own ill-mannered speech with the Pearl's courtesy.

^{23. &#}x27;But the mercy of Christ and of Mary and of John'. The genitive inflexion is confined to the noun immediately preceding marsy, while the two following nouns, which are logically genitives with exactly the same construction as Crystes, remain uninflected. For analogies see note to 11 518.

36. and: MS. in. The sign for and is easily mistaken for $\bar{i} = in$. Cp. note to XVII 42.

48. Pat, 'who'.

65. pat ... of, 'from whom'; the later relative form of quom occurs at 1. 93.

70. Fenyx of Arraby: the symbol of peerless perfection. Cp.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche the Duchess, 11. 980-3 Trewly she was to myn ye

The soleyn Fenix of Arabye, For ther lyveth never but oon, Ne swich as she ne knew I noon.

71. 'which was faultless in form'; flege 'flew' is used with weakened sense because a bird is normally thought of as on the wing.

74. folde up hyr face, '(with) her face upturned'; folde is pp. 01-2. And each would wish that the crowns of the others were five times as precious, if it were possible to better them.'

97. Poule: the common OFr. and ME. form, as at VIII a 25, 270, XI b 80. But the rime with naule 'nail' (ON. nagl) points to the form Paule for the original. The reference is to

I Corinthians vi. 15 and xii. 12 ff.

100. hys body, 'its body', 'the body'. t(r) yste, Morris's emendation, is supported by the frequency of the phrase trewe and tryste. MS. tyste could only be explained as = tyste 'tight', with st for ht, like myste=myste at l. 102. See Appendix § 6 (end).

106. 'Because you wear a ring on arm or finger.'

109-11. 'I (well) believe that there is great courtesy and charity among you.' The construction of the next line (which conveys an apology, cp. l. 62) is not clear owing to the following gap in the MS.; nor is it easy to guess the missing rime word, as emong can rime with OE. -ung- (e.g. with songe, ll. 114, 175), or with OE. -ang-; see the note to XVII 400

116. stronge may be adj. 'violent' with worlde, but is more likely adv. 'severely'.

124-5. Note the cumulation of negatives. cowher has a double construction: 'You never knew how to please God nor pray to Him, nor (did you know even) the Paternoster and Creed.' The Lord's Prayer and the Apostles' Creed were prescribed by the Church as the elements of faith to be taught first to a child.

137. Matthew xx. 1-16.

139. 'He represented it very aptly in a parable.'

141. My regne ... on hyst, 'My kingdom on high'

145. pys hyne: the labourers. This, these are sometimes used in early English to refer to persons or things that have not been previously mentioned, but are prominent in the writer's mind. Cp. xv b 4, 19; and the opening of Chaucer's Prologue to the Franklin's Tale quoted in the note to II 13.

150. pené: in ME. the final sound developed from OFr. -d (e) fell together with the sounds arising from OE. -ig, OFr. ie, &c. Hence pené or peny 186 (OE. penig); reprené 184 for repreny; cortaysé 120, 121, beside cortaysye 72, 84, 96. The acute accent is editorial.

153. 'At midmorning the master goes to the market.' tot? $(=t\bar{\rho}s)=t\bar{\alpha}s$, contracted form of tukes' betakes himself'; cp. tone = taken v 91. The spelling and rimes with o (which cannot develop normally from Δ lengthened in open syllables because this lengthening is everywhere later than the change $\bar{\alpha} > \bar{\rho}$) are usually explained as artificial. It is assumed that as Northern $b\bar{\alpha}n$ corresponded to Midland $t\bar{\rho}n$, so from Northern $t\bar{\alpha}$ ' take' an unhistorical Midland $t\bar{\rho}$ was deduced. But it is possible that the contraction of $t\bar{\alpha}ke(n)$, and consequent lengthening $t\bar{\alpha}(n)$, is older than the ordinary lengthening $t\bar{\alpha}ke > t\bar{\alpha}ke$, and also older than the development of $\bar{\alpha}$ to $\bar{\rho}$ in North Midland.

164. I yow pay: note the survival of the old use of the present to express future tense.

176. pat at 3e moun, 'what you can'. At as a relative appears usually to be from Old Norse at, with the same sense, and it is not uncommon in Northern English. But pat at here is more likely the normal development of bat bat > pat tat (note to II 102) > bat at.

179. sumoun is infin. not sb.: 'he had (them) summoned';

cp. note to VIII a 79.

192. 'It seems to us we ought to receive more.' Vus bynk is a remnant of the old impersonal construction of hynceh' it seems. In this phrase, probably owing to confusion with we hynk(en), the verb often has no flexional ending; cp. l. 192. vus ohe is formed by analogy, the verb being properly personal; cp. must vs XVII 292, 334.

200. And, 'If'.

205-8. More, which is necessary for the metrical form, is best taken as conj. 'moreover', 'further'; weher introduces a direct question (note to V 118). louyly is perhaps miswritten for lauly 'lawful', as the Pearl-Gawayne group often show the converse au, aw for normal ou, ow, e.g. hawe for howe, trawhe for trowhe. 'Further, is my power to do what pleases me with my own lawful?' The meaning is fixed by Matthew xx. 15 'ls it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil because I am good?'

212. myke. In the few recorded examples mik, myk seems to mean 'an intimate friend'. Here it is used for the sake of rime in an extended sense 'chosen companion of the Lord'.

221 f. Wheher, &c., 'Although I began (only) just now, coming into the vineyard in the eventide, (vet)', &c.

224. Note the rime (OE. sum) with ON. blom(i), OE. dom, com. Such rimes occur occasionally in Northern texts of the fourteenth century—never in the South.

233. Psalm lxii. 12 'Also unto Thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy;

for Thou renderest to every man according to his work."

237-40. Loosely constructed. 'Now, if you came to payment before him that stood firm through the long day, then he who did less work would be more entitled to receive pay, and the further (it is carried), the less (work), the more (claim to be paid).'

249-51. On the meaning of these lines there is no agreement. Gollancz and Osgood interpret: 'That man's privilege is great who ever stood in awe of Him (God) who rescues sinners. From such men no happiness is withheld, for,' &c. Yet it is difficult to believe that even a poet hard pressed would use dard to Hym to mean 'feared Him'. One of several rival interpretations will suffice to show the ambiguities of the text: 'His (God's) generosity, which is always inscrutable (lit. lay hidden), is abundant to the man who recovers his soul from sin. From such men no happiness is withheld', &c. The sense and construction of dard (for which the emendation fard, pret. of fere 'to go', has been suggested, the rest of the interpretation following Gollancz), and the obscurity of the argument, are the chief obstacles to a satisfactory solution.

Dialect: Irregular, but predominantly North-West Midland; cp. V and VI.

drepit 9, suet 24.

PRONOUN 3 PERS.: pl. nom. pai 45; poss. hor 8, beside pere 9, 10; obj. hom 24.

Sounds and Spelling: Northern and North Midland forms are quiles (= whiles) 39, hondqwile 117; and wysshe 4 (note). West Midland indications are buernes men' 90, 91 = OE. bern (but buerne 'sea' 159 = OE. burn- is probably miswritten owing to confusion with buern 'man'); and perhaps the spelling u in unaccented syllables: mecull 10, watur 119, wintur 124.

4. wysshe = wisse 'guide'. In the North final sh was commonly pronounced ss; cp. note to 1 128-9, and the rimes in XVII 1-4. Conversely etymological ss was sometimes spelt ssh.

7-8. strongest ... and wiscst ... to wale, 'the strongest ... and wisest ... that could be chosen' (lit. 'to choose').

15. On lusti to loke, 'pleasant to look upon'.

21 ff. A typical example of the vague and rambling constructions in which this writer indulges: apparently 'but old stories of the valiant (men) who (once) held high rank may give pleasure to some who never saw their deeds, through the writings of men who knew them at first hand (?) (in deite), (which remained) to be searched by those who followed after, in order to make known (or to know?) all the manner in which the events happened, by looking upon letters (i. e. writings) that were left behind of old'.

45. Benoît de Sainte-Maure says the Athenians rejected Homer's story of gods fighting like mortals, but charitably explains that, as Homer lived a hundred years after the siege, it is no wonder if he made mistakes:

N'est merveille s'il i faillit, Quar onc n'i fu ne rien n'en vit.

Prologue, Il. 55-6.

53-4. 'That was elegantly compiled by a wise clerk—one Guido, a man who had searched carefully, and knew all the actions from authors whom he had by him.' See Introductory note, pp. 68 f.

66-7. Cornelius Nepos was supposed to have found the Greek work of Dares at Athens when rummaging in an old cupboard (Benoît de Sainte-Maure, Prologue, Il. 77 ff.).

157. Note the slovenly repetition from L. 151. So l. 159 repeats l. 152.

168-9. I have transposed these lines, assuming that they were misplaced by a copyist. Guido's Latin favours the change, and the whole passage will illustrate the English translator's methods:

Oyleus uero Aiax qui cum 32 nauibus suis in predictam incidit tempestatem, omnibus nauibus suis exustis et submersis in mari, in suis uiribus brachiorum nando semiuiuus peruenit ad terram; et, inflatus pre nimio potu aque, uix se nudum recepit in littore, voi usque ad superuenientis diei lucem quasi mortuus iacuit in arena, [et] de morte sua sperans potius quam de uita. Sed cum quidam ex suis nando similiter a maris ingluuie iam erepti nudi peruenissent ad littus, dominum eorum querunt in littore [et] si forsitan euasisset. Quem in arena iacentem inueniunt, dulcibus uerborum fouent affatibus, cum nec in uestibus ipsum nec in alio possunt subsidio refouere. (MS. Harley 4123, fol. 117 a—the bracketed words are superfluous.)

178. Telamon was not at the siege, and his name appears here and in l. 150 as the result of a tangle which begins in the confusion of Oyleus Ajax with Ajax the son of Telamon. In classical writers after Homer it is Oyleus Ajax who, at the sack of Troy, drags Cassandra from the temple of Minerva. This is the story in Dictys. Dares, like Homer, is silent. In Benoît de Sainte-Maure's poem (ll. 26211-16), the best MSS. name Oyleus Ajax as Cassandra's captor, but others have 'Thelamon Aiax', i.e. Ajax, the son of Telamon. Guido read Benoît in a MS. of the latter class, and accordingly makes Telamonius Aiax do the sacrilege. With the English translator this becomes Telamon simply (Bk. xxix, ll. 11993-7). So when later, in Bk. xxxi, he comes to describe the shipwreck, he replaces Guido's Aiax by Telamon, and spoils the story of Minerva's vengeance on the actual violator of her sanctuary.

Infinitives in -ie (OE. -ian) are retained: erye 4, hatie 52, tilye 229 (OE. erian, hatian, tilian).

PRONOUN 3 PERS.: pl. nom. bei 126, &c., beside hii 15;

poss. her 54; obj. hem 2.

Sounds: OE. y often shows the Western development, as in huyre(d) 108, 133, &c.; abugge 75, 159; beside bigge 275. So Cornehulle b 1. But such forms were not uncommon in the London dialect of the time.

b. The second extract has a more Southern dialectal colouring. Note especially the gen. pl. forms lollarene 31, knauene 56, lordene 77, continuing or extending the OE. weak gen. pl. in -ena; and menne 29, 74, retaining the ending of the OE. gen. pl. manna.

The representation of unaccented vowels by u in hure (-'their') 50, (-'her') 53; (h)us' his' 60, 101; clerkus 65, is commonest in Western districts. h(w) is no longer appirated:

wanne I, werby 35, MS. eggen 19; and conversely hyj'if' 43, his 'is' 105.

a 9. for shedyng, 'to prevent spilling'; and so for colde 62 'as a protection against cold'; for bollyng 209 'to prevent swelling';

for chillyng 306, &c. a 11. Pat ze han silke and sendal to sowe: The construction changes as if Piers had begun: Ich praye 30w, which is the reading in the C-text. The difficulty of excluding modern ideas from the interpretation of the Middle Ages is shown by the comment of a scholar so accomplished as M. Petit-Dutaillis: 'Il attaque les riches peu miséricordieux, les dames charmantes aux doigts effilés, qui ne s'occupent pas des pauvres' (Soulèvement, p. lxii). But there is no hint of sature or reproach in the text. The poet, always conventional, assigns to high-born ladies the work which at the time was considered most fitting for them. So it is reported in praise of the sainted Isabella of France, sister of St. Louis: Quand elle fust introduicte des lettres suffisamment, elle s'estudioit à apprendre à ouurer de soye, et faisoit estolles et autres paremens à saincte Eglise-'When she was sufficiently introduced to letters, she set herself to learn how to work in silk, and made stoles and other vestments for Holy Church.' (Joinville, Histoire d. S. Louys, Paris 1668, pt. i, p. 169.) a 19. for he Lordes love of houene: cp. l. 214, and notes to a 23. on he teme, 'on this subject'; teme 'theme' is a correct form, because Latin th was pronounced t. The modern pronunciation is due to the influence of classical spelling.

a 32. affaite pe, 'tame for thyself'; cp. 1. 64 (I shal) brynge me = 'bring (for myself)', and the note to II 289.

a 40-1. 'And though you should fine them, let Mercy be the assessor, and let Meckness rule over you, in spite of Gain.' This is a warning against abuse of the lord of the manor's power to impose fines in the manorial court with the object of raising revenue rather than of administering justice. Cp. Ashley, Introduction to English Economic History, vol. i (1894), pt. ii, p. 266. For maugré Medes chekes cp. 151.

a 49. Luke xiv. 10.

a 50. yuel to knowe, 'hard to distinguish'.

- a 72-5. These clumsy lines, which are found in all versions, exemplify the chief faults in Piers Plowman: structural weakness and superfluous allegory.
- a 79. I wil . . . do wryte my biqueste, 'I will have my will written'; make(n), ger(gar), and lete(n) are commonly used like dv(n) with an active infinitive, which is most conveniently rendered by the passive; so do wryte 'cause to be written'; dyd werche 'caused to be made' 1 218; mad sumoun

'caused to be summoned' VI 179; gert dres vp' caused to be set up' X 16; leet make 'caused to be made' IX 223, &c.

a 80. In Dei nomine, amen: A regular opening phrase for wills.

a 84. 'I trust to have a release from and remission of my debts which are recorded in that book.' Rental, a book in which the sums due from a tenant were noted, here means 'record of sins'.

a 86. he: the parson, as representing the Church.

a 91. dou3tres. In 1. 73 only one daughter is named. In the B-text, Passus xviii. 426, she is called Kalote (see note to b2 below).

a 94. bi he rode of Lukes: at Lucca (French Lucques) is a Crucifix and a famous representation of the face of Christ, reputed to be the work of the disciple Nicodemus. From Eadmer and William of Malmesbury we learn that William the Conqueror's favourite oath was 'By the Face of Lucca!', and it is worth noting that the frequent and varied adjurations in Middle English are copied from the French.

a 114. 'May the Devil take him who cares!'

a 115 ff. faitoures (cp. ll. 185 ff.), who feigned some injury or disease to avoid work and win the pity of the charitable, multiplied in the disturbed years following the Black Death, Statutes were passed against them, and even against those who gave them alms (Jusserand, English Wayfaring Life, pp. 261 ff.). But the type was long lived. In the extract from Handlyng Synne (No. 1), we have already a monument of their activities.

a 141. 'And those that have cloisters and churches (i. e. monks and priests) shall have some of my goods to provide themselves with copes.

a 142. Robert Renne-aboute. The type of a wandering preacher; posteles are clearly preachers with no fixed sphere of authority, like the mendicant friars and Wiclif's 'poor priests'. Against both the regular clergy constantly complained that they preached without the authority of the bishop.

a 186. Pat seten: the MS. by confusion has pat seten to seten

a 187. pat was bake for Bayarde: i.e. 'horse-bread' (l. 208), which used to be made from beans and peas only. Bayard, properly a 'bay horse', was, according to romance, the name of the horse given by Charlemagne to Rinaldo. Hence it became the conventional name for a horse, just as Reynard was appropriated to the fox. Chaucer speaks of proude Bayard (Troilus, Bk. i. 218) and, referring to an unknown story, Bayard the blynde (Canon's Yeoman's Tale, 860).

a 221. Michi vindictam : Romans xii. 19.

a 224. Luke xvi. 9.

a 229. Genesis iii. 19.

a 231. Sapience: the Book of Wisdom, but the quotation is actually from Proverbs xx. 4.

a 234. Mathew with mannes face. Each of the evangelists had his symbol: Matthew, a man; Mark, a lion; Luke, a bull; John, an eagle; and in early Gospel books their portraits are usually accompanied by the appropriate symbols.

a 235 ff. Matthew xxv. 14 ff.; Luke xix. 12 ff.

a 245. Contemplaty flyf or actyf lyf. The merits of these two ways of life were endlessly disputed in the Middle Ages. In XI b Wiclif attacks the position of the monks and of Rolle's followers; and the author of Pearl (VI 61 ff.) takes up the related question of salvation by works or by grace.

a 246. Psalm exxviii. 1.

a 264. Jusserand gives a brief account of the old-time physicians in English Wayfaring Life, pp. 177 ff. The best were somewhat haphazard in their methods, and the mountebanks brought discredit on the profession. Here are a few fourteenth-century prescriptions:

For hym that haves the squynansy ['quinsy']:-

Tak a fatte katte, and fla hit wele and clene, and draw oute the guttes; and tak the grees of an urcheon ['hedgehog'], and the fatte of a bare, and resynes, and fernygreke ['fenugreek'], and sauge ['sage'], and gumme of wodebynde, and virgyn wax: al this mye ['grate'] smal, and farse ['stuff'] the catte within als thu farses a gos: rost hit hale, and geder the grees, and enoynt hym tharwith. (Reliquiae Antiquae, ed. Wright and Halliwell (1841), vol. i, p. 51.)

3yf a woud hund hat ybite a man :-

Take tou(n)karsyn ['towncress'], and pulyole ['pennyroyal'], and sep hit in water, and 3ef hym to drynke, and hit schal caste out pe venym: and 3if pou miste ['might'] haue of pe hundys here, ley hit perto, and hit schal hele hit. (Medical Works of the Fourteenth Century, ed. G. Henslow, London 1899, p. 19.)

A goud oynement for he goute: -

Take pe grece of a bor, and pe grece of a ratoun, and cattys grece, and voxis grece, and hors grece, and pe grece of a brok ['badger']; and take feberuoye ['feveriew'] and eysyl ['vinegar'], and stampe hem togedre; and take a litel lynnesed, and stampe hit wel, and do hit berto; and meng al togedre, and het hit in a scherd, and perwith anoynte pe goute by the fuyre. Do so ofte and hit schal be hol. (Ibid., p. 20.)

ofte and hit schal be hol. (Ibid., p. 20.)

a 284. Lammasse tyme: August 1, when the new corn (l. 294) would be in. On this day a loaf was offered as firstfruits:

whence the name, OE. hlaf-mæsse.

a 307 ff. Owing to repeated famines, the wages of manual labour rose throughout the first half of the fourteenth century. A crisis was reached when the Black Death (1349) so reduced the number of workers that the survivors were able to demand wages on a scale which seemed unconscionable to their employers. By the Statute of Labourers (1350 and 1351) an attempt was made to force wages and prices back to the level of 1346. For a day's haymaking 1d. was to be the maximum wage; for reaping 2d. or 3d. Throughout the second half of the fourteenth century vain attempts were made to enforce these maxima, and the penalties did much to fan the unrest that broke out in the Peasants' Revolt of 1381.

a 309-10. From Bk. i of the Disticha of Dionysius Cato, a collection of proverbs famous throughout the Middle Ages.

a 321. Saturn was a malevolent planet, as we see from his speech in Chaucer's Knight's Tale, 1595 ff.

a 324. Deth: the Plague.

b i. Cornehulle. Cornhill was one of the liveliest quarters of fourteenth-century London, and a haunt of idlers, beggars, and doubtful characters. Its pillory and stocks were famous. Its market where, if The London Lickpenny is to be credited, dealing in stolen clothes was a speciality, was privileged above all others in the city. See the documents in Riley's Memorials of London.

b 2. Kytte: In the B-text, Passus xviii. 425-6, Kytte is mentioned again:

and rist with pat I waked And called Kitte my wyf and Kalote my douster.

b4. lollares of London: The followers of Wiclif were called 'Lollards' by their opponents; but the word here seems to mean 'idlers' as in l. 31. lewede heremytes: 'lay hermits': hermits were not necessarily in holy orders, and so far from seeking complete solitude, they often lived in the cities or near the great highways, where many passers would have opportunity to recognize their merit by giving alms. See Cutts, Scenes and Characters of the Middle Ages, pp. 93 ff.

b5. 'For I judged those men as Reason taught me.' Skeat's interpretation—that made of means 'made verses about'—is forced. The sense is that the idlers and hermits thought little of the dreamer, and he was equally critical of them.

b6. as ich cam by Conscience: 'as I passed by Conscience', referring to a vision described in the previous Passus, in which Conscience is the principal figure.

b 10 f. In hele and in wnite, 'in health and in my full senses', and Romynge in remembraunce qualify me.

b 14. Mowe oper mowen, 'mow or stack'. For these unrelated words see the Glossary.

b 16. haywarde: by derivation 'hedge-ward'. He watched over enclosures and prevented animals from straying among the crops. Observe that ME. nouns denoting occupation usually survive in surnames:—Baxter 'baker', Bow(y)er, Chapman, Dyer, Falconer, Fletcher 'arrow-maker', Fo(re)ster, Franklin, Hayward, Lister (= litster, 'dyer'), Palmer, Reeve(s), Spicer, Sumner, Tyler 'maker or layer of tiles', Warner 'keeper of warrens', Webb, Webster, Wright, Yeoman, &c.

b 20-1. 'Or craft of any kind that is necessary to the community, to provide food for them that are bedridden.

b 24. to long, 'too tall': cp. B-text, Passus xv. 148 my name is Longe Wille. Consistency in such details in a poem full of inconsistencies makes it probable that the poet is describing himself, not an imagined dreamer.

633. Psalm lxii. 12.

b 45. I Corinthians vii. 20.

b 46 ff. Cp. the note to XI b 131f. The dreamer appears to have made his living by saying prayers for the souls of the dead, a service which, from small beginnings in the early Middle Ages, had by this time withdrawn much of the energy of the clergy from their regular duties. See note to XI b 140 f.

b 49. my Seuene Psalmes: the Penitential Psalms, normally vi, xxxii, xxxviii, li, cii, cxxx, cxliii, in the numbering of the Authorised Version. The Prymer, which contained the devotions supplementary to the regular Church service, included the Placebo, Dirige, and the Seven Psalms: see the edition by Littlehales for the Early English Text Society.

b 50. for hure soules of suche as me helpen: combines the constructions for be soules of suche as me helpen, and for hure soules bat me helpen.

b 51. vochen saf: supply me as object, 'warrant me that I shall be welcome'.

661. 1 Thessalonians v. 15; Leviticus xix. 18.

663. churches: here and in l. 110 read the Norse form kirkes for the alliteration, as in a 28, 85. But the English form also belongs to the original, for it alliterates with ch at a 12, 50.

b 64. Dominus, &c.: Psalm xvi. 5.

b 83. Symondes sone: a son of Simon Magus—one guilty of simony, or one who receives preferment merely because of his wealth.

b 90. Matthew iv. 4.

b 103-4. Simile est, &c.: Matthew xiii. 44. Mulier que, &c.: Luke xv. 8 ff.

IX

Dialect: South-East Midland.

Vocabulary: A number of French words are taken over from the original, e.g. plee 81, ryot 83, violastres 97, saphire loupe 116, gowrdes 139, clowe gylofres 157, canell 158, avaled 195, trayne (for taynere?) 222, bugles 256, gowtes artetykes 314, distreynen 315.

Inflexions: Almost modern.

VERB: pres. ind. 3 sg. schadeweth 19, turneth 23.
3 pl. ben 4, han 14, wexen 22, loue 100.
pres. p. fle(e)ynge 148, 252; recordynge 317.
strong pp. Jouen 90, begonne 171.

PRONOUN 3 PERS.: pl. pei 5; here 71; hem 20.

Sounds: OE. ā becomes ē: hoot 11, cold 31.

OE. y appears as y = i: byggynge 90, ky3n 'kine' 256; except regular left (hand) 69, 71, 72, where Modern English has also adopted the South-Eastern form of OE. lyft.

21-3. The French original says that the children have white hair when they are young, which becomes black as they grow up.

24-5. The belief that one of the Three Kings came from Ethiopia is based on Ps. lxviii. 31: 'Princes shall come out of Egypt, Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God.' In mediaeval representations one of the three is usually a negro.

27. Emlak: miswritten for Euilak, a name for India taken from Havilah of Genesis ii. 11.

28. pat is: pe more: Vnde has probably fallen out of the text after is.

34-5. 3alow cristall draweth (to) colour lyke oylle: the insertion of to is necessary to give sense, and is supported by the French: cristal iaunastre trehant a colour doile. (MS. Harley 4383, f. 34b.)

36-7. The translation is not accurate. The French has: et appelle homme les dyamantz en ceo pais 'Hamese'.

64 ff. It was supposed that the pearl-bearing shell-fish opened at low tide to receive the dew-drops from which the pearls grew.

74. 3if 3ou lyke, 'if it please you', impersonal = French si vous plest.

75 he Lapidarye, Latin Lapidarium, was a manual of precious stones, which contained a good deal of pseudo-scientific information about their natures and virtues, just as the Bestiary summed up popular knowledge of animals. A Latin poem by Marbod bishop of Rennes (d. 1123) is the chief source of the mediaeval lapidaries, and, curiously enough, there is a French prose text attributed by so intimate an authority as Jean d'Outremeuse to Mandeville himself. Several Old French texts have been edited by L Pannier, Les Lapidaires Français du Moyen Age, Paris 1882. Their high repute may be judged from the inclusion of no less than seven copies in the library of Charles V of France (d. 1380); and it is surprising that no complete ME. version is known. But much of the matter was absorbed into encyclopaedic works like the De Proprietatibus Rerum of Bartholomaeus, which Trevisa translated.

97. Mistranslated. The French has: qi sont violastre, on pluis broun qe violettes.

100-1. But in soth to me: French: Mes endroit de moy, 'but for my part'; the English translator has rendered en droit separately.

108. perfore: the context requires the sense 'because', but the translator would hardly have used perfore had he realized that ll. 108-9 correspond to a subordinate clause in the French, and do not form a complete independent sentence. He was misled by the bad punctuation of some French MSS., e. g. Royal 20 B. X and (with consequent corruption) Harley 4383.

136. Cathaye: China. See the classic work of Colonel Yule, Cathay and the Way Thither, 2 vols., London 1866. The modernization of the Catalan map of 1375 in vol. i gives a good idea of Mandeville's geography.

142. withouten welle: the story of the vegetable lamb is taken from the Voyage of Friar Odoric, which is accessible in Hakluyt's Voyages. Hakluyt's translation is reprinted, with the Eastern voyages of John de Plano Carpini (1246) and of William de Rubruquis (1253), in The Iravels of Sir John Mandeville, ed. A. W. Pollard, London 1900. The legend probably arose from vague descriptions of the cotton plant; and Mandeville makes it still more marvellous by describing as without wool the lamb which had been invented to explain the wool's existence.

143-4. Of pat frute I have eten: This assertion seems to be due to the English translator. The normal French text has simply: et cest bien grant meruaille de ceo fruit, et si est grant oure [= auvre] de nature (MS. Royal 20 B. x, f. 70 b).

147. the Bernakes: The barnacle goose-introduced here on a hint from Odoric—is a species of wild goose that visits the Northern coasts in winter. It was popularly supposed to grow from the shell-fish called 'barnacle', which attaches itself to floating timber by a stalk something like the neck and beak of a bird, and has feathery filaments not unlike plumage. As the breeding place of the barnacle goose was unknown, and logs with the shell-fish attached were often found on the coasts, it was supposed that the shell-fish was the fruit of a tree, which developed in the water into a bird. Giraldus Cambrensis, Topographia Hibernica, I. xv, reproves certain casuistical members of the Church who ate the barnacle goose on fastdays on the plea that it was not flesh; but himself vouches for the marvel. The earliest reference in English is No. 11 of the Anglo-Saxon Riddles, of which the best solution is 'barnacle goose'. For a full account see Max Muller's Lectures on the Science of Language, vol. ii, pp. 583-604.

157. grete notes of Ynde, 'coco-nuts'.

163-4. Goth and Magoth: see Ezekiel xxxviii and xxxix. The forms of the names are French.

170. God of Nature: Near the end of the Travels it is explained that all the Eastern peoples are Deists, though they have not the light of Christianity: pei beleeven in God pat formede all thing and made the world, and clepen him 'God of Nature'.

191-2. pat pei schull not gen out on no syde, but be the cost of hire lond: the general sense requires the omission of but, which has no equivalent in the original French text: quis ne(nt) issent fors deuers la coste de sa terre (MS. Sloane 1464, f. 139 b). But some MSS. like Royal 20 B. x have fors qe deuers, a faulty reading that must have stood in the copy used by the Cotton translator. Cp. note to l. 108.

199-200. a four grete myle: renders the French iiii grantz lieus. There is no great mile' among English measures.

209 ff. In the Middle Ages references to the Jews are nearly always hostile. They were hated as enemies of the Church, and prejudice was hardened by stories, like that in the text, of their vengeance to come, or of ritual murder, like Chaucer's Prioress's Tule. England had its supposed boy martyrs, William of Norwich (d. 1144), and Hugh of Lincoln (d. 1255) whom the Prioress invokes:

O yonge Hugh of Lyncoln, slayn also With cursed Jewes, as it is notable, For it is but a litel while ago, Preye eek for us, &c.

Religion was not the only cause of bitterness. The Jews, standing outside the Church and its laws against usury, at a time when financial needs had outgrown feudal revenues, became the money-lenders and bankers of Europe; and with a standard rate of interest fixed at over 40 per cent., debtors and creditors could hardly be friends. In England the Jews reached the height of their prosperity in the twelfth century, so that in 1188 nearly half the national contribution for a Crusade came from them. In the thirteenth century their privileges and operations were cut down, and they were finally expelled from the country in 1290 (see J. Jacobs, The Jews of Angevin England, 1893). The Lombards, whose consciences were not nice, took their place as financiers in fourteenth-century England.

222. trayne: read taynere, OFr. taignere 'a burrow'.

237-8. The cotton plant has already given us the vegetable lamb (1. 142). This more prosaic account is taken from the Epistola Alexandri ad Aristotelem: 'in Bactriacen... penitus ad abditos Seres, quod genus hominum foliis arborum decerpendo lanuginem ex silvestri vellere vestes detexunt' (Julius Valerius, ed. B. Kübler, p. 194). From the same text come the hippopotami, the bitter waters (Kübler, p. 195), and the griffins (Kübler, p. 217). The Letter of Alexander was translated into Anglo-

Saxon in the tenth century.

254 ff. talouns etc.: In the 1725 edition there is a reference to 'one 4 Foot long in the Cotton Library' with the inscription, Griphi Unguis Divo Cuthberto Dunclmensi sacer, 'griffin's talon, sacred to St. Cuthbert of Durham'. This specimen is now in the Mediaeval Department of the British Museum, and is really the slim, curved horn of an ibex. The inscription is late (sixteenth century), but the talon was catalogued among the treasures of Durham in the fourteenth century.

260. Prestre Iohn: Old French Prestre Jean, or 'John the Priest', was reputed to be the Christian ruler of a great kingdom in the East. A rather minatory letter professing to come from him reached most of the princes of Europe, and was replied to in all seriousness by Pope Alexander III. Its claims include the lordship over the tribes of Gog and Magog whom Alexander the Great walled within the mountains. Official missions were sent to establish relations with him; but neither in the Far East nor in Northern Africa, where the best opinion in later times located his empire, could the great king ever be found. The history of the legend is set out by Yule in the article Prester John in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

261. Yle of Pentexoire: to Mandeville most Eastern countries are 'isles'. Pentexoire in the French text of Odoric is a territory about the Yellow River (Yule, Cathay, vol. i, p. 146).

262 ff.: For comparison the French text of the Epilogue is given from MS. Royal 20 B. x, f. 83 a, the words in () being supplied from MS. Sloane 1464:

Il y a plusours autres diuers pais, et moutz dautres meruailles par de la, qe ieo nay mie tout veu, si nen saueroye proprement parler. Et meismement el pais en quel iay este, y a plusours diuersetes dont ieo ne fais point el mencioun, qar trop serroit long chose a tout deuiser. Et pur ceo qe ieo vous ay deuisez dascuns pais, vous doit suffire quant a present. Amen.'

274. blamed: The Old French verb empescher means both 'to hinder, prevent', and 'to accuse, impeach'. But here empesches should have been translated by 'prevented', not 'blamed'.

284-306. This passage, which in one form or another appears in nearly all the MSS. in English, has no equivalent in the MSS. in French so far examined: and, as it conflicts with ll. 313 ff., which—apart from the peculiarities of the Cotton rendering—indicate that the Travels were written after Mandeville's return, it must be set down as an interpolation.

The art of forging credentials was well understood in the Middle Ages, and the purpose of this addition was to silence doubters by the imprimatur of the highest authority, just as the marvel of the Dancers of Colbek is confirmed by the sponsorship of Pope Leo IX (1246-9). The different interpretation of the latest editor, Hamelius, who thinks it was intended as a sly hit at the Papacy (Quarterly Review for April 1917, pp. 349 f.) seems to rest on the erroneous assumption that the passage belonged to the French text as originally written.

The anachronism by which the author is made to seek the Pope in Rome gives a clue to the date of the interpolation. From the beginning of the fourteenth century until 1377 Avignon, and not Rome, was the scat of the Pope; and for another thirty years there was doubt as to the issue of the conflict between the popes, who had their head-quarters at Rome and were recognized by England, and the antipopes, who remained at Avignon and had the support of the French. The facts were notorious, so that the anachronism would hardly be possible to one who wrote much before the end of the century, even though he were a partisan of the Roman court.

From internal evidence it would seem that the interpolation first appeared in French. The style is the uniform style of translation, with the same tags—and zee schull vndirstonde the sanchiez; zif it lyke zou = si vous plest; and the same trick of double rendering, e.g. of dynerse secte and of beleeve; wyse and discreet; the auctour ne the persone. More decisive is an example of the syntactical compromise explained in the note to l. 329: be the whiche the Mappa Mundi was made after. With so many French MSS. of Mandeville in use in England, an interpolation in French would have more authority than one that could not be traced beyond English; and it can hardly be an insuperable objection that no such French text exists to-day, since our knowledge of the Cotton and Egerton versions themselves depends in each case on the chance survival of a single MS.

The point has a bearing on the vexed question of the relations of the English texts one to another. For brevity we may denote by D the defective text of the early prints and most MSS,, which is specially distinguished by along gap near the beginning; by C the Cotton text (ed. Halliwell, Pollard, Hamelius); by E the Egerton text (ed. Warner). Nicholson (in the Encyclopaedia Britannica) and Warner give priority to D, and consider that C and E are independent revisions and expansions of D by writers who had recourse to the French original. Their argument seems to be this: There is precise evidence just before the gap that D derives direct from a mutilated French text (see Enc. Brit.), and if it be granted that a single translation from the French is the base of C, D, and E, it follows that C and E are based on D.

A fuller study by Vogels (Handschriftliche Untersuchungen über die Englische Version Mandeville's, Crefeld 1891) brings to light a new fact: the two Bodleian MSS., E Museo 116 and Rawlinson D 99, contain an English translation (say L) made from a Latin text of the Travels. Vogels also shows that E is based on D, because the characteristic lacuna of D is filled in E by a passage which is borrowed from L and is not homogeneous with the rest of E. So far there is no conflict with the view of Nicholson and Warner. But, after adducing evidence in favour of the contention that C, D, and E are at base one translation, Vogels concludes that D derives from C, arguing thus: There is good evidence that C is a direct translation from the French, and if it be granted that a single translation from the French is the base of C and D, it follows that D derives from C.

In short, the one party maintains that C is an expansion of D, the other that D is an abridgement of C; and this flat opposition results from the acceptance of common ground: that C and D represent in the main one translation and not two translations.

To return to our interpolation:

(1) Vogels's first piece of evidence that C, D, and E are at base one translation is the appearance in all of this interpolation, which is absent from the MSS. in French. But a passage so remarkable might spread from one to the other of two independent English texts; or if the interpolation originated in England in a MS. of the French text since lost, it might be twice translated.

(2) Vogels assumes that the interpolation first appeared in type C. But C is the form in which it would be least likely to originate, because here the contradiction of statement is sharpest owing to the rendering at ll. 313-14: and now I am comen hom, which is peculiar to C (see the French).

(3) If, in order to eliminate individual peculiarities, we take two MSS. of the D type—say Harley 2386 and Royal 17 C. XXXVIII—we find that their text of the interpolation is identical with that of E. This is consistent with Vogels's finding that the body of E derives from D; and it confirms the evidence of all the defective MSS, that the interpolation in this particular form was an integral part of the D type.

(4) But between the text of the interpolation in D and that in C there are differences in matter, in sentence order, and in phrasing, which, while they do not exclude the possibility of interdependence, do not suggest such a relation. In D the passage is a naked attempt at authentication; in C it is more artfully though more shamelessly introduced by the touch of piety conventional in epilogues. And as the signs of a French original that appear in C are absent from D, it is unlikely that the text of the interpolation in C derives from D.

(5) Again, in D and E the addition follows the matter of ll. 307-20. Unfortunately, though the balance of probability is in favour of the order in C, the order intended by the interpolator is not certain enough to be made the basis of arguments. But such a difference in position is naturally explained from the stage when the interpolation stood in the margin of a MS., or on an inserted slip, so that it might be taken into the consecutive text at different points. And an examination of the possibilities will show that if the interpolation originated in French, the different placing is more simply explained on the assumption that C and D are independent translations than on the assumption that one of them derives from the other.

To sum up: the central problem for the history of the English texts is the relation of C and D. Taken by itself the evidence afforded by the text of the interpolation is against the derivation of C from D; it neither favours nor excludes the derivation of D from C; it rather favours independent translation in C and D

For the relations of the rest of the text these deductions afford no more than a clue. Against independent translation of C and D stands the evidence adduced by Vogels for basic unity. Much of this could be accounted for by the coincidences that are inevitable in literal prose translations from a language so near to English in vocabulary and word order; and a few striking agreements might be due to the use of French MSS. having abnormal variants in common, or even to reference by a second translator to the first. The remainder must be weighed against a considerable body of evidence in the contrary sense, e.g. several places where the manuscripts of the French text have divergent readings, of which C translates one, and D another.

It is unlikely that any simple formula will be found to cover the whole web of relationships: but any way of reconciling the conclusions of the authorities should be explored; and the first step is an impartial sifting of all the evidence, with the object of discovering to what extent C and D are interdependent, and to what extent independent translations. The chief obstacle is the difficulty of bringing the necessary texts together; for an investigator who wished to clear the ground would have to face the labour of preparing a six-text Mandeville, in the order,

French, C, D, E, L, Latin.

301. Mappa Mundi: OFr. and ME. Mappemounde, was the generic name for a chart of the world, and, by extension, for a descriptive geography of the world. It is not clear what particular Mappa Mundi is referred to here, or whether such a map was attached to the manuscript copy of the Travels in which this interpolation first appeared.

329. fro whom all godenesse and grace cometh fro: cp. 24-5 the lond of the whiche on of the pre Kynges... was kyng offe; 76-8 pei... of whom all science... cometh from; and 301-2 be the whiche the Mappa Mundi was made after. The pleonasm is explained by the divergence of French and ME. word order. In French, as in modern literary English, the preposition is placed at the beginning of the clause, before the relative (de qui, dont, &c.). ME. writers naturally use the relative that, and postpone the preposition to the end of the clause: e.g. pat all godenesse cometh fro. The translator compromises between his French original and his native habit by placing the preposition both at the beginning and at the end.

Book XVII of The Bruce begins with the capture of Berwick by the Scots in March 1318. Walter Stewart undertakes to hold the city, and is aided in preparing defences by a Flemish engineer, John Crab. Next year King Edward II determines to recapture the stronghold by an attack from both land and sea. He entrenches his forces and makes the first assault unsuccessfully early in September 1319. In this battle the Scotch garrison capture a clever engineer (see note to l. 71 below). King Robert Bruce meanwhile orders a raid into England as a diversion, and on 20 September 1319, an English army, led by the Archbishop of York, is disastrously defeated by the invaders at Mitton. Our extract gives the story of the second assault on Berwick, which was also fruitless. The fortress fell into English hands again as a result of the battle of Halidon Hill in 1333: see XIV a 35-6.

^{5-6. &#}x27;They made a sow of great joists, which had a stout covering over it.' The sow was essentially a roof on wheels. The occupants, under shelter of the roof, pushed up to the walls of the besieged place and tried to undermine them. For an illustration see Cutts, Scenes and Characters of the Middle Ages, Pt. VI, chap. vi, where other military engines of the time are described.

^{15.} Crabbis consale: John Crab was the engineer of the garrison. He is no doubt the same as the John Crab who in 1332 brought Flemish ships round from Berwick to attack the English vessels at Dundee. There was an important Flemish colony at Berwick from early times.

36. Schir Valter, the gude Steward: Walter Steward, whose surname denotes his office as Steward of Scotland, was the father of Robert II, the first king of the Stuart line.

71 ff. The engynour: an English engineer captured by the garrison in the previous assault and forced into their service.

80. scho, 'she', some engine of war not previously referred a 25 ff. Translations of the Bible were common in France at this time. No less than six fine copies survive from the library of John, Duke of Berry (d. 1416). About the middle of the fourteenth century King John of France ordered a new translation and commentary to be made at the expense of the Jews, but it was never finished, although several scholars were still engaged on it at the end of the century. The early French verse renderings, which incorporate a good deal of mediaeval legend, are described by J. Bonnard, Les Traductions de la Bible en Vers Français au Moyen Âge (Paris 1884); the prose by S. Berger, La Bible Française au Moyen Âge (Paris 1884). Of the surviving manuscripts mentioned in these excellent mono-graphs several were written in England.

a 28 ff. In earlier times, when most of those who could read at all were schooled in Latin, the need for English translations of the Scriptures was not so pressing, and the partial translations that were made were intended rather for the use of the clergy and their noble patrons than for the people. Bede (d. 735) completed a rendering of St. John's Gospel on his death-bed. Old English versions of the Gospels and the Psalms still survive. Abbot Aelfric (about A.D. 1000) translated the first five books of the Old Testament; and more than one Middle English version of the Psalms is known. Wichf was perhaps unaware of the Old English precedents because French renderings became fashionable in England from the twelfth century onwards, and he would probably think of the Psalter more as a separate service book than as an integral part of the Bible. But the prologue to the Wiclifite version attributed to John Purvey quotes the example of Bede and King Alfred; and the Dialogue on Translation which, in Caxton's print, serves as preface to Trevisa's translation of Higden, emphasizes the Old English precedents. Both may be read in Fifteenth Century Prose and Verse, ed. A. W. Pollard, London 1903, pp. 193 ff. The attitude of the mediaeval Church towards vernacular translations of the Bible has been studied very fully by Miss M. Deanesly, The Lollard Bible and other Medieval Biblical Versions, Cambridge 1920.

a 34. be pley of 3 ork. The York Paternoster Play has not survived, but there are records from 1389 of a Guild of the Lord's Prayer at York, whose main object was the production of the play. It seems to have been an early example of the moral play, holding up 'the vices to scorn and the virtues to praise', and it probably consisted of several scenes, each exhibiting one of the Seven Deadly Sins. The last recorded representation was in 1572. See Chambers, The Mediaeval Stage, vol. ii, p. 154. The association of the friars with the production of religious plays is confirmed by other writings of the time. They were quick to realize the value of dramatic representation as a means of gaining favour with the people, and their encouragement must be reckoned an important factor in the development of the Miracle Play.

b 131-2. placebo. Vespers of the Dead, named from the first word of the antiphon, Placebo Domino in regione vivorum (Psalm cxiv. 9).

dirige. Matins of the Dead, named from the first word of the antiphon, Dirige, Domine, Deus meus, in conspectu tuo viam meam (Psalm v. 9). Hence our word dirige.

comendacion: an office in which the souls of the dead are commended to God.

matynes of Oure Lady: one of the services in honour of the Virgin introduced in the Middle Ages.

The whole question of these accretions to the Church services is dealt with by our English master in liturgical study, the late Mr. Edmund Bishop, in his essay introductory to the Early English Text Society's edition of the Prymer, since reprinted with additional notes in his Liturgica Historica (Oxford 1918), pp. 211 ff.

b 137f. deschaunt, countre note, and orgon, and smale brekynge. The elaboration of the Church services in mediaeval times was accompanied by a corresponding enrichment of the music. To the plain chant additional parts were joined, sung in harmony either above or below the plain chant. Descant usually means the addition of a part above, organ and countre-note (= counterpoint) the addition of parts either above or below. All these could be composed note for note with the plain chant. But smale brekyng represents a further complication, whereby the single note in the plain chant was represented by two or more notes in the accompanying parts.

b 140f. The abuse is referred to in Piers I'lowman:

and by Chaucer in his description of the Parson:

He sette nat his benefice to hyre,

And leet his sheepe encombred in the myre,

And ran to Londoun, unto Seint Poules,

To seken hym a chaunterie for soules.

Prologue 11. 507-10.

b 183. Ordynalle of Salisbury. An 'ordinal' is a book showing the order of church services and ceremonies. In mediaeval times there was considerable divergence in the usage of different churches. But after the Conquest, and more especially in the thirteenth century, there was developed at Salisbury Cathedral an elaborate order and form of service which spread to most of the English churches of any pretensions. This was called 'Sarum' or 'Salisbury' use.

b 209. hei demen it dedly synne a prest to fulfille, &c. For this construction, cp. Chaucer, Prologue 502 No wonder is a lewed man to ruste; Shakespeare, Two Gentlemen of Verona, v.iv. 108 l. It is the lesser blot... Women to change their shapes, &c. The same construction, where we now insert for, is seen in Gawayne (v. 352-3) hit were a wynne huge... a leude, hat couhe, to luf hom wel. &c.

b 221-3. They say that a priest may be excused from saying mass, to be the substance of which God gave Himself, provided that he hears one.

b 228 f. newe costy portos, antifeners, graielis, and alle obere bokis. Portos, French porte hors, represents Latin portiforium, a breviary convenient for 'carrying out of doors'. The antifener contained the antiphons, responses, &c., necessary for the musical service of the canonical hours. The graiel, or gradual, was so called from the gradual responses, sung at the steps of the altar, or while the deacon ascended the steps of the pulpit: but the book actually contained all the choral service of the Mass.

b 230. makynge of biblis. Wichf in his Office of Curates (ed. Matthew, p. 145) complains of the scarcity of bibles. But fewe curatis han be Bible and exposiciouns of he Gospelis, and litel studien on hem, and lesse donne after hem. But wolde God hat every parische chirche in his lond hadde a good Bible! &c.

 $b\,234$. At this time books, especially illuminated books, were very dear. The Missal of Westminster Abbey, which is now shown in the Chapter-house, was written in 1382-4 at a cost of £34 14s. 7d.—a great sum in those days, for the scribe, Thomas Preston, who took two years to write it, received only

£4 for his labour, 20s. for his livery, and board at the rate of 21s. 8d. the half year. The inscription in British Museum MS. Royal 19 D. II, a magnificently illustrated Bible with commentary, shows that it was captured at Poitiers with King John of France, and bought by the Earl of Salisbury for 100 marks (about £66) Edward III gave the same sum to a nun of Amesbury for a rich book of romance. In France John, Duke of Berry, paid as much as £200 for a breviary, and the appraisement of his library in 1416 shows a surprisingly high level of values (L. Delisle, Le Cabinet des Manuscrits, vol. iii, pp. 171 ff.). These were luxurious books. The books from the chapel of Archbishop Bowet of York (d. 1423) sold more reasonably: £8 for a great antiphonar and £6 13s. 4d. pro uno libro vocato 'Bibill', were the highest prices paid; and from his library there were some fascinating bargains: 4s. for a small copy of Gregory's Cura Pastoralis: 5s. pro uno libro vocato 'Johannes Andrewe', vetere et debili, which would probably turn out to be a dry work on the Decretals: and 3s. 4d. for a nameless codex, vetere et cuduco, 'old and falling to pieces'. (Historians of the Church of York, ed. J. Raine, vol. iii, pp. 311, 315.)

But the failing activity of the monastic scriptoria, and the formation of libraries by the friars and by rich private collectors, made study difficult for students at the universities, where at this time a shilling per week—a third of the price of Bowet's most dilapidated volune—was reckoned enough to cover the expenses of a scholar living plainly. The college libraries were scantily supplied: books were lent only in exchange for a valuable pledge; or even pawned, in hard times, by the colleges themselves.

These conditions were not greatly improved until printing gave an easy means of duplication, and for a time caused the humble manuscripts in which most of the mediaeval vernacular literature was preserved to be treated as waste paper. As late as the eighteenth century Martène found the superb illuminated manuscripts left by John, Duke of Berry, to the Sainte Chapelle at Bourges serving as roosting places to their keeper's hens (Voyage Littéraire, Paris 1717, pt. i, p. 29).

b 261-3. The reference is to Acts vi. 2, 'It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.'

b 266. wisere pan. After these words the Corpus MS. (p. 170, col. i, l. 34 mid.), without any warning, goes on to the closing passage of an entirely unrelated 'Petition to the King and Parliament'. By way of compensation, the end of our sermon appears at the close of the Petition. Clearly the scribe (or some one of his predecessors) copied without any regard for the sense from a MS. of which the leaves had become disarranged.

b 285. Cp. Acts iii. 6.

Syntax: The elaborate machinery of sentence connexion deserves special attention; and many turns of phrase are explained by Gower's fluency in French.

a 1. Gower follows Ovid, Mctamor phoses, Bk. xi. Chaucer tells the story of Ceix and Alcyone in his Death of Blanche the Duchess, ll. 62 ff. This is presumably the early work to which the Man of Law refers:

I kan right now no thrifty tale seyn
But Chaucer, thogh he kan but lewedly
On metres and on rymyng craftily,
Hath seyd hem, as swich Englissh as he kan,
Of olde tyme, as knoweth many a man;
And if he have noght seyd hem, leve brother,
In o book, he hath seyd hem in another;
For he hath toold of loveris up and down
Mo than Ovide made of mencioun
In his Epistelles, that been ful olde.
What sholde I tellen hem, syn they ben tolde?
in youthe he made of Ceys and Alcione, &c.
(Link to Man of Law's Tule, Il. 46ff.)

Gower's rendering is the more poetical.

a 2. Trocinie. Ovid's Trachinia tellus, so called from the city of Trachis, north-west of Thermopylae.

a 23. As he which wolde go: otiose, or at best meaning po more than 'desiring to go'. Cp. b 25 As he which hadde having' simply; and similarly b 37, 203. It is an imitation of a contemporary French idiom comme celui qui.

a 26. and: the displacement of the conjunction from its natural position at the beginning of the clause is characteristic of Gower's verse. Cp. l. 152 Upon the morwe and up sche sterte = 'and in the morning she got up', and a 45, 49, b 121, 124, 135, 160, 182. See notes to ll. 32, 78 f.

a 32. Editors put a comma after wepende, and no stop after seileth: but it is Alceoun who weeps. The displacement of and is exemplified in the notes to l. 26 and ll. 78 f.

a 37. 'One had not to look for grief'; a regular formula of understatement, meaning 'her grief was great'.

a 53. Hire reyny cope, &c.: the rainbow, which was the sign or manifestation of Iris.

a 59 ff. Prope Cimmerios longo spelunca recessu, Mons cavus, ignavi domus et penetralia Somni.

(Metamorphoses xi. 592-3.)

Much of the poetry of Gower's description is due to Ovid. a 78 f. Editors put no stop alter may and a comma after hell. Hence The New English Dictionary quotes this passage as an isolated instance of noise, transitive, meaning 'disturb with noise'. But noise is intransitive, hell is governed by aboute round, and the position of bot is abnormal as in l. 105. Cp. notes to ll. 26, 32, and render 'But all round about the hill'.

a 105. For the word order see notes to ll. 26, 32, 78 f.

a 117. The lif, 'the man', cp. IV a 43.

a 118. Ithecus: for Icelos. According to Ovid 'Icelos' was the name by which he was known to the gods, but men called him 'Phobetor'.

a 123. Panthasas: Ovid's Phantasos.

a 152. See note to l. 26.

a 197. The halcyon, usually identified with the kingfisher, was supposed to build a floating nest on the sea in midwinter, and to have power to calm the winds and waves at that season, bringing 'halcyon weather'.

b2. I finde. Matthew Paris in his Chronica Maiora (ed. Luard, Rolls Series, vol. ii, pp. 413 ff.) gives a similar story, which, he says, King Richard the First often told to rebuke ingratitude. In this version, Vitalis of Venice falls into a pit dug as a trap for wild beasts. The rescued animals are a lion and a serpent; the rescuer is nameless, and the gem given to him by the serpent has not the magic virtue of returning whenever sold. Nearer to Gower is the story told in Nigel Wireker's Speculum Stultorum, a late twelfth-century satire in Latin verse, which, from the name of its principal character Burnellus the Ass, who is ambitious to have a longer tail, is sometimes called Burnellus; cp. Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, 1, 492:

I have wel rad in Daun Burnel the Asse

Among his vers, &c.

The poem is printed in T. Wright's Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets and Epigrammatists of the Twelfth Century (Rolls Series, 1872), vol. i. At the end the Ass returns disappointed to his master Bernardus (= Bardus). Bernardus, when gathering wood, hears Dryanus (= Adrian), a rich citizen of Cremona, call from a pit for help. The rescued animals are a lion, a serpent, and an ape. The gem given by the serpent in token of gratitude always returns to Bernardus, who, with more honesty than Gower's poor man shows, takes it back to the buyer. The fame of the marvellous stone reaches the king; his inquiries bring to light the whole story; and Dryanus is ordered to give half his goods to Bernardus.

Gower probably worked on a later modification of Nigel's

b 86. blessed, 'crossed (himself)'.

b89. Betwen him and his asse, i.e. pulling together with the ass. The ass is, of course, the distinguished Burnellus.

b 116. his ape: for this ape (?).

b 191. Justinian, Emperor of the Eastern Roman Empire (d. 565), was best known for his codification of the Roman Law, and so is named here as the type of a lawgiver.

a 2-3. Mayster ... Minerua ... hys: Trevisa appears to have understood 'Minerva' as the name of a god.

a 6-49. Higden took all this passage from Book i of the twelfth-century Annals of Alfred of Beverley (ed. Hearne, pp. 6-7). The Polychronicon is a patchwork of quotations from earlier writers.

a 7. Pectoun. Higden has ad Peccum, and Alfred of Beverley in monte qui vocatur Pec, i.e. The Peak of Derbyshire. cc and ct are not distinguishable in some hands of the time, and Trevisa has made Peccum into Pectoun.

a 14. Cherdhol. Hearne's text of Alfred of Beverley has Cherole; Henry of Huntingdon (about 1150), who gives the same four marvels in his Historia Anglorum, has Chederhole; and on this evidence the place has been identified with Cheddar in Somerset, where there are famous caves.

a 22. an egle hys nest: cp. b 23 a child hys brouch. This construction has two origins: (1) It is a periphrasis for the genitive, especially in the case of masculine and neuter proper names which had no regular genitive in English; (2) It is an error arising from false manuscript division of the genitive suffix -es, -is, from its stem.

a 36. (bat) here and in 1.52 is inserted on the evidence of the other MSS. Syntactically its omission is defensible, for the suppressed relative is a common source of difficulty in Middle English; see the notes to V 4-6, 278-9; X 146; XIV c 54; XVII 66.

a 50. Wynburney. Wimborne in Dorset. Here St. Cuthburga founded a nunnery, which is mentioned in one of Aldhelm's letters as early as A.D. 705. The information that it is 'not far from Bath', which is hardly accurate, was added by Higden to the account of the marvel he found in the Topographia Hibernica of Giraldus Cambrensis (vol. v, p. 86 of the Rolls Series edition of his works).

a 54-64. Higden took this passage from Giraldus, Itincrarium Cambriae, Bk. ii, c. 11 (vol. vi, p. 139 of the Rolls edition).

a 63. Pimbilmere: the English name for Lake Bala.

b 6-7. pe Flemmynges. The first settlement of Flemings in Pembrokeshire took place early in the twelfth century, and in 1154, Henry II, embarrassed alike by the turbulence of the Welsh, and of the new host of Flemish mercenaries who had come in under Stephen, encouraged a further settlement. They formed a colony still distinguishable from the surrounding Welsh population.

b 11-12. The threefold division of the English according to their Continental origin dates back to Bede's Ecclesiastical

LANGUAGES OF BRITAIN. XIII. B. 26-XIV. A. 15 253

History. But the areas settled by Bede's three tribes do not correspond to Southern, Northern, and Midland. The Jutes occupied Kent, whence the South-Eastern dialect; the Saxons occupied the rest of the South, whence the South-Western dialect; and the Angles settled in the Midlands and the North; so that the Midland and Northern dialects are both Anglian, and derive from the same Continental tribe or tribal group.

b 26. he furste moreyn: the Black Death of 1349. There were fresh outbreaks of plague in 1362, 1369, 1376,

626-42. The bracketed passage is an addition by Trevisa himself, and is of primary importance for the history of English and of English education. See the valuable article by W. H. Stevenson in An English Miscellany Presented to

Dr. Furnivall, pp. 421 ft.

b 27-8. Iohan Cornwal, a mayster of grammere. A 'master of grammar' was a licensed teacher of grammar. Mr. Stevenson points out that in 1347-8 John of Cornwall received payment from Merton College, Oxford, for teaching the boys of the founder's kin. Ilis countryman Trevisa probably had personal knowledge of his methods of teaching.

b 39-40. and a scholle passe he se, 'if they should cross the sea'.

b 47-8. The bracketed words are introduced by Trevisa.

b 50 f. and y's gret wondur: and is superfluous and should perhaps be deleted.

b 58-65. Though still often quoted as a fourteenth-century witness to the pronunciation of Northern English (e.g. by K. Luick, Historische Grammatik der englischen Sprache, 1914, pp. 40 f.), this passage, as Higden acknowledges, comes from the Prologue to Book iii of William of Malmesbury's Gesta Pontificum, completed in the year 1125: see the Rolls Series edition, p. 209.

XIV

- a 2. Bannokburn. Minot's subject is not so much the defeat of the English at Bannockburn in 1314, as the English victory at Halidon Hill on 19 July 1333, which he regards as a vengeance for Bannockburn.
- a 7. Saint Iohnes toune: Perth, so called from its church of St. John the Baptist. It was occupied by the English in 1332 after the defeat of the Scots at Dupplin Moor.

a 13. Striflin, 'Stirling'.

a 15. Hall suggests that this refers to Scotch raids on the North of England undertaken to distract Edward III from the siege of Berwick.

a 19 f. Rughfute riveling... Berebag: nicknames for the Scots, the first because they wore brogues (rivelings) of rough hide; the second because, to allow of greater mobility, each than carried his own bag of provisions instead of relying on a baggage train.

a 22. Brig = Burghes 1. 25, 'Bruges'. At this time Scots, English, and French had all close connexions with the Netherlands. Observe that John Crab, who aided the Scots in the defence of Berwick (note to X 15), was a Fleming.

a 35. at Berwik. Berwick fell as a result of the battle of Halidon Hill which the Scots fought with the object of raising the siege. For an earlier siege of Berwick, in 1319, see No. X.

a 36. gct, 'watch', 'be on the look out' (ON. gcta).

b 19. A bare: Edward III, whom Minot often refers to as 'the boar'.

b 24-6. In preparation for the long siege Edward III had built a regular camp beside Calais.

b 32. Sir Philip. Philip de Valois, Philip VI of France (1293-1350). His son, John Duke of Normandy (1319-64), who succeeded him in 1350, is of good memory as a lover of fine books. Two are mentioned in the notes to XI a 25 ff. and XI b 234. A splendid copy of the Miracles de Notre Dame, preserved until recently in the Seminary Library at Soissons, seems also to have been captured with his baggage at Poitiers, for it was bought back from the English by King Charles V. Another famous book produced by his command was the translation of Livy by Bersuire, with magnificent illuminations. The spirit of the collector was not damped by his captivity in England from 1356-60, for his account books show that he continued to employ binders and miniaturists, to encourage original composition, and to buy books, especially books of romance. See Notes et Documents relatifs à Jean, Roi de France, &c., ed. by Henry of Orleans, Duc d'Aumale (Philobiblon Soc., London 1855-6).

b40. he Cardinales. Pope Clement VI had sent cardinals Annibale Ceccano bishop of Frascati, and Etienne Aubert, who became Pope Innocent VI in 1352, to arrange a peace between France and England. But the English were suspicious of the Papal court at Avignon, and accused the cardinals of favouring the

b 82. Sir Iohn de Viene. Jean de Vienne, seigneur de Pagny

(d. 1351), a famous captain in the French wars.

c 5 f. They (friends) are so slippery when put to the test, so eager to have (for themselves), and so unwilling to give up (to others).

614. And, 'if'.

- c 47. King John of France was captured at Poitiers in 1356 and held in England as a prisoner until the Treaty of Bretigny in 1360. See note to XIV b 32.
- c 54. Note the omission of the relative: 'which recked not a cleat for all France', and cp. ll. 43-4, XIII a 36 (note).
- c 59. his helm, 'its helm'—the bar by which the rudder was moved.
- c61. 'The King sailed and rowed aright'; on him, see note to XV g 24.

c83. An ympe: Richard II.

- c 90. sarri: not in the dictionaries in this sense, is probably OFr. serre, sarre, in the developed meaning 'active', 'vigorous', seen in the adv. sarréement.
- c 103-4. 'If we are disloyal and inactive, so that what is rarely seen is straightway forgotten.'

c 108. 'Who was the fountain of all courage.'

c 111. los, 'fame'.

d I. SCHEP: here means 'shepherd', 'pastor', a name taken by Ball as appropriate to a priest.

Seynte Marie prest of 3 ork, 'priest of St. Mary's of York' (cp. note to 144), a great Benedictine abbey founded soon after the Conquest; see Dugdale, Monasticon Anglicanum, vol. iii, pp. 529 ff. Marie does not take the s inflexion, because it has already the Latin genitive form, cp. Mary-jet x 163.

d2. Iohan Nameles, 'John Nobody', for nameless has the sense 'obscure', 'lowly'.

d6. Hobbe be Robbere. Hob is a familiar form for Robert, and it has been suggested that Hobbe be Robbere may refer to Robert Hales, the Treasurer of England, who was executed by the rebels in 1381. But Robert was a conventional name for a robber, presumably owing to the similarity of sound. Already in the twelfth century, Mainerus, the Canterbury scribe of the magnificent Bible now in the library of Sainte-Geneviève at Paris, plays upon it in an etymological account of his family: Secundus (sc. frater meus) diebatur Robertus, quia a re nomen habuit: spoliator enim diu fuit et praedo. From the fourteenth century lawless men were called Roberts men. In Piers Plowman Passus v (A- and B-texts) there is a confession of 'Robert the Robber'; and the literary fame of the prince of highwaymen, 'Robin Hood', belongs to this period.

d 14. do wel and bettre: note this further evidence of the popularity of Piers Plowman, with its visions of Dowel, Dobet, and Dobest.

a 8. De clot him clingge! 'May the clay cling to him!' i.e. 'Would he were dead!'

a 12. Pider: MS. Yider, and conversely MS. Piif 23 for Viif

'if'. y and p are endlessly confused by scribes.

b 1. Lenten ys come ... to toune. In the Old English Metrical Calendar phrases like cymed ... us to tune Martius rede, 'fierce March comes to town', are regular. The meaning is 'to the dwellings of men', 'to the world'.

b3. Pat: construe with Lenten.

b 7. him pretep, chides, wrangles (ON. præta?). See the thirteenth-century debate of The Thrush and the Nightingale (Reliquiae Antiquae, vol. i, pp. 241 ff.), of which the opening lines are closely related to this poem.

bil. Ant whyteh on huere wynter wele, and look at their winter happiness (?). This conflicts with huere wynter wo above; and the explanation that the birds have forgotten the hardships of the past winter and recall only its pleasures is forced. Holthausen's emendation wynne wele wealth of joys' (cp. l. 35) is good.

b 20. Miles: a crux. It has been suggested without much probability that miles means 'animals' from Welsh mil.

b28. Deawes donkep pe dounes. Of the suggestions made to improve the halting metre the best is pise for pe. The poet is thinking of the sparkle of dew in the morning sun; cp. Sir Gawayne 519 f.:

When he donkande dewe drope; of he leve; To bide a blysful blusch of he bry; t sunne.

c 30. Wery so water in wore: the restless lover (l. 21) has tossed all night like the troubled waters in a wore; cp. I wake so water in wore in another lyric of the same MS. It has been suggested that wore = Old High German wuor 'weir'; but the rimes in both passages show that the stem is OE. war, not wor.

d2. the holy londe: because Ireland was par excellence the Land of the Saints'.

f. I am obliged to Professor Carleton Brown for the information that this poem is found, with three additional stanzas, in MS. 18. 7. 21 of the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. The complete text is now available in his Religious Poems of the Fourteenth Century, Oxford 1924.

f 4. bere (OE. byre) riming with fere (OE. (ge) fera) indicates

g 1. Scere Porsday: Maundy Thursday, the Eve of Good Friday.

g1-2. aros: Iudas: the alternative form aras may have given the rime in the original, but it is not justifiable to accept this as certain and so to assume an early date of composition for the poem. Morsbach, ME. Grammatik, § 135, n. 4, quotes a number of parallel rimes with proper names, and the best explanation is that o in aros still represented a sound intermediate between d and $\bar{\rho}$, and so served as an approximate rime to \tilde{d} in proper names.

g6. cunesmen: as c and t are hard to distinguish in some ME. hands, and are often confused by copyists, this reading is more likely than tunesmen of the editors—Wright-Halliwell, Mätzner, Child, Cook (and N. E. D. s.v. townsman). For (1) tunesman is a technical, not a poetical word. (2) In a poem remarkable for its terseness, tunesmen reduces a whole line to inanity, unless the poet thinks of Judas quite precisely as a citizen of a town other than Jerusalem; and in the absence of any Biblical tradition it is unlikely that a writer who calls Pilate be riche Ieu would gratuitously assume that Judas was not a citizen of Jerusalem, where his sister lived. (3) Christ's words are throughout vaguely prophetic, and as Judas forthwith imette wid is soster—one of his kin—cunesmen gives a pregnant sense. [I find the MS. actually has cunesmen, but leave the note, lest tunesmen might appear to be better established.]

g. The repetition of ll. 8, 25, 30 is indicated in the MS. by 'ii' at the end of each of these lines, which is the regular sign for bis.

g 16. 'He tore his hair until it was bathed in blood.' The

MS. has top, not cop.

g 24. In him com ur Lord gon. In the MS. cst = Crist has been erased after Lord. Note (1) the reflexive use of him, which is very common in OE. and ME. with verbs of motion, e.g. Up him stod 27, 29; Pau Pilatus him com 30; Als I me rode XV a 4; The Kyng him rod XIV c61; cp. the extended use ar pe coc him crowe 33, and notes to II 289, V 86: (2) the use of the infinitive (gon) following, and usually defining the sense of, a verb of motion, where Modern English always, and ME. commonly (e.g. jede karoland I 117; com daunceing II 298), uses the pres. p.: 'Our Lord came walking in'.

g 27. am 1 pat f 'Is it I?', the interrogative form of ich hit am or ich am hit. The editors who have proposed to complete the line by adding wrech, have missed the sense. The original rime was bet: spec, cp. note to 1 240.

g 30. cnistes: for cniste = cnihte representing the OE. gen. pl. cnihta. On the forms meist 6, heiste 18, eiste 20, bitaiste 21, iboust 26, miste 29, cnistes 30, fiste 31, all with st for OE. ht, see Appendix § 6 end.

h 17-18. Difficult. Perhaps 'The master smith lengthens

a little piece [sc. of hot iron], and hammers a smaller piece, twines the two together, and strikes [with his hammer] a treble note'.

h21-2. clopemerys... brenwaterys: not in the dictionaries, but both apparently nonce names for the smiths: they 'clothe horses' (for by the end of the fourteenth century a charger carried a good deal of armour and harness), and 'burn water' (when they temper the red-hot metal).

i4. Pat: dat. rel. 'to whom'; cp. VI 64. But lowte is some-

i6. This line, at first sight irrelevant, supplies both rime and doctrine. See in Chaucer's Preface to his Tale of Melibeus the passage ending:

I meene of Marke, Mathew, Luc and John— Bot doutelees hir sentence is all oon.

An erased t after Awangelys in the MS. shows that the scribe wavered between Awangelys 'Gospels' and Awangelystes.

17. Sent Geretrude: Abbess of Nivelle (d. 659), commemorated on March 17. She is appropriately invoked, for one or more rats make her emblem.

i 11. Sent Kasi. Professor Bruce Dickins kindly informs me that St. Nicasius (Dec. 12) was celebrated in Northern France as an enemy of rats. I cannot trace his acts against them, but parallels are not wanting. St. Ivor, an Irish saint, banished rats from his neighbourhood per imprecationem because they gnawed his books; and the charm-harassed life of an Irish rat was still proverbial in Shakespeare's day: 'I was never so berhymed' says Rosalind (As You Like It, III. ii) 'since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat'. In the South of France the citizens of Autun trusted more to the processes of the law, and brought a suit against the rats which ended in a victory for the defendants because the plaintiffs were unable to guarantee them safe conduct to the court (see Chambers, Book of Days, under Jan. 17). Even in such little things the Normans showed their practical genius:-A friend chancing to meet St. Lanfranc by the way inquired the cause of the strange noises that came from a bag he was carrying: "We are terribly plagued with mice and rats', explained the good man, 'and so, to put down their ravages, I am bringing along a cat' (Mures et rati valde nobis sunt infesti, et ideirco nunc affero catum ad comprimendum furorem illorum). Acta Sanctorum for May 28, p. 824.

Spelling: In fois $(=f\bar{p}s)$ 30, the spelling with i indicates vowel length.

17. were: rime requires the alternative form wore.

39. Foure thowsande and sex hundereth jere. I do not know on what calculation the writer changes 5,500, which is the figure in the Greek and Latin texts of the Gospel of Nicodemus, in the French verse renderings, and the ME. poem Harrowing of Hell. Cp. 1. 354.

40. in his stedde: the rimes hadde: gladde: sadde point to the Towneley MS. reading in darkness stad, 'set in darkness', as nearer the original, which possibly had in hister(nes) stad.

49. we: read ze (?). For what follows cp. Isaiah ix. 1-2.

59. puplisshid: the rime with Criste shows that the pronunciation was puplist. Similarly, abasshed: traste 177-9. In French these words have -ss-, which normally becomes -sh- in English. It is hard to say whether -ss- remained throughout in Northern dialects, or whether the development was OFr. -ss-> ME. -sh-> Northern -ss- (notes to 1128, VII 4).

62. pis: read His(?). frendis: here 'relatives', 'parents' (ON.

frændi); see Luke ii. 27. 65-8. Luke ii. 29-32.

113. Astrotte: cp. 2 Kings xxiii. 13 'Ashtoreth, the abomination of the Zidonians'. I cannot identify Anaball among the false gods.

115. Bele-Berit: Judges viii. 33 'the children of Israel... made Baal-Berith their god'. For Belial see 2 Cor. vi. 15.

122-4. A common misrendering for 'Be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors', Psalm xxiv. 7.

125 ff. postulate a preceding et introibit rex glorie, which the writer has not been able to work into the frame of his verse.

128. a kyng of vertues clere = dominus virtutum, rendered 'Lord of Hosts' in Psalm xxiv. 10.

154-6. ware: ferre: the rime indicates some corruption. ware probably stands for werre 'worse'. The Towneley MS. has or it be war.

162. John xi.

165. John xiii. 27.

171 ff. 'And know he won away Lazarus, who was given to us to take charge of, do you think that you can hinder him from showing the powers that he has purposed (to show)?' But it is doubtful whether what is a true relative. Rather 'from showing his powers—those he has purposed (to show)'.

188. I prophicied: MS. of prophicie breaks the rime scheme. 190. Psalm cvii. 16 'For he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.'

205 ff. The rimes saide: braide: ferde: grathed are bad. For the last two read flaide = 'terrified', and graid, a shortened form of graithed.

208. and we wer moo, 'if we were more', 'even if there were more of us'.

220. as my prisoune might be taken closely with here: 'in this place as my prison'. The Towneley MS. has in for as. Better would be prisoune(s) 'prisoners'.

240. wolle: read wille for the rime.

241. God (ys) sonne: MS. God sonne might be defended as parallel to the instances in the note to XVII 88.

256. Apparently, 'you argue his men in the mire', i.e. if Jesus is God's Son, the souls should remain in hell because God put them there. But the text may be corrupt.

267 ff. Cp. Ezekiel xxxi. 16, &c.

281 ff. Salamon saide: Proverbs ii. 18-19 taken with vii. 27 and ix. 18. It was hotly disputed in the Middle Ages whether Solomon himself was still in hell. Dante, Paradiso, x. 110, informs a world eager for tidings that he is in Paradise: but Langland declares Ich leyue he be in helle (C-text, iv. 330); and, more sweepingly, coupling him with Aristotle: Al holy chirche holden hem in helle (A-text, xi. 263).

285-8. Perhaps a gloss on Job xxxvi. 18 'Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroke: then a great ransom cannot deliver thee.'

301. menys, the reading of the Towneley MS. is better than mouys, which appears to be a copyist's error due to the similarity of n and u, e and o, in the handwriting of the time.

308. Judas hanged himself, according to Matthew xxvii. 3-5; Acts i. 18 gives a different account of his end. Archedefell: Ahithophel who hanged himself (2 Samuel xvii. 23) after the failure of his plot against David.

309. Datan and Abis on: see Numbers xvi.

- 313-16. 'And all who do not care to learn my law (which I have left in the land newly, and which is to make known my Coming), and to go to my Sacrament, and those who will not believe in my Death and my Resurrection read in order—they are not true.'
- 338. pou bus, 'you ought'; bus, a Northern contracted form of behoves, is here used as a personal verb, where pe bus, 'it behoves thee', is normal. See note to XVII 196.

360. moste: read maste to rime with taste.

371. Of his comyng: the Towneley MS. reading of Thi commyng is possible.

378-80: Corrupt. The copy from which the extant MS. was made seems to have been indistinct here. The Towneley MS. has:

Suffre thou neuer Thi sayntys to se
The sorow of thaym that won in wo, Ay full of fylth, and may not fle, which is more intelligible and nearer Psalm xvi. 10:

Nec dabis sanctum tuum videre corruptionem.

405. louyng: 'praise', cp. IV a 24 (note).

The maritime associations of the play of Noah made it a special favourite with the Trinity House guild of master mariners and pilots at Hull; and some of their records of payments for acting and equipment are preserved, although the text of their play is lost (Chambers, Mediaeval Stage, vol. ii, pp. 370-1):

52. coueteis: MS. couetous.

56. alod: 'wide-spread' (?). Apparently the same as olod in a poem ascribed to Rolle (ed. Horstman, vol. i, p. 73, l. 22) where it means 'dispersed'. But see Onions, Medium Aevum, i. 206.

57. Sex hundreth yeris and od: the od thrown in to rime, as Noah was exactly 600 years old according to Genesis vii. 6.

66. and my fry shal with me fall: 'and the children (that)

I may have '(?).

88. for syn sake: 'because of sin'. Until modern times a genitive preceding sake usually has no s, e.g. for goodness sake. The genitive of sin historically had no s (OE. synne), but the omission in a Northern text is due rather to euphony than to survival of an old genitive form. Cp. for tempest sake I 177.

108. then: 'nor', a rare Northern usage, which is treated as an error here in England and Pollard's text, though it occurs again at 1. 535. Conversely nor is used dialectally for than.

109. Hym to mekill wyn: 'to his great happiness'.

137 take: 'make', and so in 1. 272.

167-71. knowe: awe. The rime requires knawe or owe.

191. 'The worse (because) I see thee.'

196. what thou thynk: 'what seems to you best', 'what you like'; thou thynk for thee thynk-the verb being properly impersonal; see notes to XVI 338 and VI 192.

200. Stafford blew: from the context this line might mean 'you are a scaremonger', for blue is the recognized colour of fear, and it might be supposed that 'Stafford blue' represents a material like 'Lincoln green'. But Matzner is certainly right in interpreting the line 'you deserve a beating'. Stafford blew would then be the livid colour produced by blows. The reference, unless there is a play on staff, is obscure.

202. led: 'treated'.

211. sory: the rime requires sary.

220. Mary: the later marry! = 'by (the Virgin) Mary!' cp. 1. 226. So Peter! 367 = 'by St. Peter!' 246. to knaw: 'to confess'.

247-8. daw to ken: 'to be recognized as stupid', 'a manifest

272. castell: note the rime with sayll: nayll: fayll, which may be due to suffix substitution on the analogy of catail beside catel 'cattle'. For take see note to 137.

281. chambre: the rime points to a by-form chamb(o)ur, but the uninflected form is awkward. Cp. thre chese chambres 'three tiers of chambers' 129, where the construction is the same as the obsolete three pair gloves.

289-92. Read lider, hider, togider.

292. must vs: cp. l. 334 and note to VI 192.

298. 'There is other yarn on the reel', i.e. there is other business on hand.

320. brether sam: 'brothers both'. Some editors prefer to read brother Sam 'brother Shem'.

336 ff. Chaucer refers to the quarrels of Noah and his wife in the Miller's Tale (Il. 352 ff.):—

'Hastou nat herd', quod Nicholas, 'also The sorwe of Noe with his felaweshipe Er that he myghte brynge his wyf to shipe? Hym hadde be levere, I dar wel undertake, At thilke tyme, than alle his wetheres blake, That she hadde had a shipe hirself allone.'

The tradition is old. In the splendid tenth-century Bodleian MS. Junius 11, which contains the so-called Caedmon poems, a picture of the Ark shows Noah's wife standing at the foot of the gangway, and one of her sons trying to persuade her to come in.

370. Yei is defensible; cp. 1. 353. Pe 'the' has been suggested.

383. Wat Wynk: an alliterative nick-name like Nicholl Nedy in l. 405.

400. emong: OE. gemang, here rimes as in Modern English with u (OE. iung: tunge: lungen), cp. note to VI 109 ff.; but in ll. 244-7 it rimes with lang: fang: gang—all with original a.

417. (floodis). Some such word is missing in the MS. Cp.

ll. 454 f. and 426.

461. How: MS. Now. The correction is due to Professor Child. Initial capitals are peculiarly liable to be miscopied.

463. grufe: a Northern and Scottish form of the verb grow. The sb. ro 'rest' 237 sometimes has a parallel form rufe.

525. stold: for stalled 'fixed'. Note the rime words, which all have alternative forms behald: bald: wald.

APPENDIX

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN THE FOURTEENTH CENTURY

§ 1. GENERAL. Gower's work shows that at the end of the century Latin and French still shared with English the place of a literary language. But their hold was precarious.

Latin was steadily losing ground. The Wiclifite translation of the Bible threatened its hitherto unchallenged position as the language of the Church; and the Renaissance had not yet come to give it a new life among secular scholars.

French was still spoken at the court; but in 1387 Trevisa remarks (p. 149) that it was no longer considered an essential part of a gentleman's education: and he records a significant reform—the replacement of French by English as the medium of teaching in schools. After the end of the century Anglo-French, the native development of Norman, was practically confined to legal use, and French of Paris was the accepted standard French.

English gained wherever Latin and French lost ground. But though the work of Chaucer, Gower, and Wiclif fore-shadows the coming supremacy of the East Midland, or, more particularly, the London dialect, there was as yet no recognized standard of literary English. The spoken language showed a multiplicity of local varieties, and a writer adopted the particular variety that was most familiar to him. Hence it is almost true to say that every considerable text requires a special grammar.

Confusion is increased by the scribes. Nowadays a book is issued in hundreds or thousands of uniform copies, and within a few months of publication it may be read in any part of the world. In the fourteenth century a book was made known to readers only by the slow and costly multiplication of manuscripts. The copyist might work long after the date of composition, and he would then be likely to modernize the language, which in its written form was not stable as it is at present: so of Barbour's Bruce the oldest extant copies were made nearly a century after Barbour's death. Again, if the dialect of the author were unfamiliar to the copyist, he might substitute familiar words and forms. Defective rimes often bear witness to these substitutions.

Nor have we to reckon only with copyists, who are as a rule careless rather than bold innovators. While books were scarce and many could not read them, professional minstrels and amateur reciters played a great part in the transmission of popular literature; and they, whether from defective memory or from belief in their own talents, treated the exact form and words of their author with scant respect. An extreme instance is given by the MSS. of Sir Orfeo at ll. 267-8:

Auchinleck MS.: His harp, whereon was al his gle, He hidde in an holwe tre;

Harley MS.: He takeh his harpe and makeh hym gle, And lyhe al nyzt under a tre;

Ashmole MS.: In a tre pat was holow

Per was hys haule euyn and morow.

If the Ashmole MS, alone had survived we should have no hint of the degree of corruption.

And so, before the extant MSS. recorded the text, copyists and reciters may have added change to change, jumbling the speech of different men, generations, and places, and producing those 'mixed' texts which are the will-o'-the-wisps of language study.

Faced with these perplexities, beginners might well echo

the words of Langland's pilgrims in search of Truth:

This were a wikked way, but whoso hadde a gyde That wolde folwen vs eche a fote.

There is no such complete guide, for the first parts of Morsbach's Mittelenglische Grammatik, Halle 1896, Richard Jordan's Handbuch der Mittelenglischen Grammatik, Heidelberg 1925 and Luick's Historische Grammatik der englischen Sprache, Leipzig 1914-, remain unfinished. Happily two distinguished scholars—Dr. Henry Bradley in The Making of English and his chapter in The Cambridge History of English Literature, vol. i, Dr. O. Jespersen in Growth and Structure of the English Language—have given brief surveys of the whole early period which are at once elementary and authoritative. But for the details the student must rely on a mass of dissertations and articles of very unequal quality, supplemented by introductions to single texts, and, above all, by his own first-hand observations made on the texts themselves,

Some preliminary considerations will be helpful, though perhaps not altogether reassuring:

- (i) A great part of the evidence necessary to a thorough knowledge of spoken Middle English has not come down to us, a considerable part remains unprinted, and the printed materials are so extensive and scattered that it is easy to overlook points of detail. For instance, it might be assumed from rimes in Gawayne, Pearl, and the Shropshire poet Myrc. that the falling together of OE. -ang-, -ung-, which is witnessed in NE. among (OE. gemang), -monger (OE. mangere), was specifically West Midland, if the occurrence of examples in Yorkshire (xvii 397-400) escaped notice. It follows that, unless a word or form is so common as to make the risk of error negligible, positive evidence—the certainty that it occurs in a given period or district—is immeasurably more important than negative evidence—the belief that it never did occur, or even the certainty that it is not recorded, in a period or For the same reason, the statement that a word or form is found 'in the early fourteenth century' or 'in Kent' should always be understood positively, and should not be taken to imply that it is unknown 'in the thirteenth century' or 'in Essex', as to which evidence may or may not exist.
- (ii) It is necessary to clear the mind of the impression, derived from stereotyped written languages, that homogeneity and stability are natural states. Middle English texts represent a spoken language of many local varieties, all developing rapidly. So every linguistic fact should be thought of in terms of time, place, and circumstance, not because absolute precision in these points is attainable, but because the attempt to attain it helps to distinguish accurate knowledge from conclusions which are not free from doubt.

If the word or form under investigation can be proved to belong to the author's original composition, exactness is often possible. In the present book, we know nearly enough the date of composition of extracts 1, 111, v111, x, x1 a, x11, x111, x111,

But if, as commonly happens, a form cannot be proved to have stood in the original, endless difficulties arise. It will be necessary first to determine the date of the MS. copy. This is exactly known for The Bruce, and there are few Middle English MSS, which the palaeographer cannot date absolutely within a half-century, and probably within a generation. The place where the MS. copy was written is known nearly enough for $v \, b, \, c, \, xu, \, xv \, e, \, xv \, b, \, c$ (possibly Leominster), xvi, xvii; and ME. studies have still much to gain from a thorough inquiry into the provenance of MSS. Yet, when the extant copy is placed and dated, it remains to ask to what extent this MS. reproduces some lost intermediary of different date and provenance; how many such intermediaries there were between the author's original and our MS.; what each has contributed to the form of the surviving copy—questions usually unanswerable, the consideration of which will show the exceptional linguistic value of the Avenbyte, where we have the author's own transcript exactly dated and localized, so that every word and form is good evidence.

Failing such ideal conditions, it becomes necessary to limit doubt by segregating for special investigation the elements that belong to the original composition. Hence the importance of rimes, alliteration, and rhythm, which a copyist or reciter is least likely to alter without leaving a trace of his activities.

§ 2. DIALECTS. At present any marked variation from the practice of educated English speakers might, if it were common to a considerable number of persons, be described as dialectal. But as there was no such recognized standard in the fourteenth century, it is most convenient to consider as dialectal any linguistic feature which had a currency in some English-speaking districts but not in all. For example, bat as a relative is found everywhere in the fourteenth century and is not dialectal; bire 'these' is recorded only in Northern districts, and so is dialectal. Again, $\bar{\rho}$ represents OE. \bar{a} in the South and Midlands, while the North retains \tilde{a} (§ 7 b i): since neither \tilde{p} nor \tilde{a} is general, both may be called dialectal.

If a few sporadic developments be excluded because they may turn up anywhere at any time, then, provided sufficient evidence were available, it would be possible to mark the boundaries within which any given dialectal feature occurs at a particular period: we could draw the line south of which bire 'these' is not found, or the line bounding the district in which the Norse borrowing kirke occurs; just as French investigators in L'Atlas linguistique de la France have shown the distribution of single words and forms in the modern French dialects.

Of more general importance is the fixing of boundaries for sound changes or inflexions that affect a large number of words, a task to which interesting contributions have been made in recent years on the evidence of place-names (see especially A. Brandl, Zur Geographie der altenglischen Dialekte, Berlin 1915, which supplements the work of Pogatscher on the compounds of street and of Wyld on the ME. developments of OE. y). For example, on the evidence available, which does not permit of more than rough indications, OE. \bar{a} remains \bar{a} , and does not develop to \bar{p} , north of a line drawn west from the Humber (\S 7 b i); -and(e) occurs in the ending of the pres, p. as far south as a line starting west from the Wash (\S 13 ii); farther south again, a line between Norwich and Birmingham gives the northern limit for Stratton forms as against Stretton (§ 8 iv, note). The direction of all these lines is roughly east and west, yet no two coincide But if the developments of OE. y (§ 7 b ii) are mapped out, u appears below a line drawn athwart from Liverpool to London, and normal e east of a line drawn north and south from the western border of Kent. Almost every important feature has thus its own limits, and the limits of one may cross the limits of another.

What then is a ME. dialect? The accepted classification is

Southern South-Western = OF. West Saxon = OE. Kentish

Midland West Midland West Midland } = OE. Mercian

Northern = OE. Northumbrian

with the Thames as boundary between Southern and Midland, and the Humber between Midland and Northern. And yet of five actual limiting lines taken at random, only the first coincides approximately with the line of Humber or Thames.

Still the classification rests on a practical truth. Although each dialectal feature has its own boundaries, these are not set by pure chance. Their position is to some extent governed by old tribal and political divisions, by the influence of large towns which served as commercial and administrative centres, and by relative ease of communication. Consequently, linguistic features are roughly grouped, and it is a priori likely that London and Oxford would have more features in common than would London and York, or Oxford and Hull; and similarly it is likely that for a majority of phenomena York and Hull would stand together against London and Oxford. Such a grouping was recognized in the fourteenth century. Higden and his authorities distinguish Northern and Southern speech (xIII b); in the Towneley Second Shepherds' Play, Il. 201 ff., when Mak pretends to be a yeoman of the king, he adopts the appropriate accent, and is promptly told to 'take out that Sothren tothe'. In the Reeves Tale Chaucer makes the clerks speak their own Northern dialect, so we may be sure that he thought of it as a unity.

But had Chancer been asked exactly where this dialect was spoken, he would probably have replied, Fer in the North,-I kan nat telle where. A dialect has really no precise boundaries: its borders are nebulous; and throughout this book 'Southern', 'Northern', &c., are used vaguely, and not with any sharply defined limits in mind. The terms may, however, be applied to precise areas, so long as the boundaries of single dialect features are not violently made to conform. It is quite accurate to say that -and(e) is the normal ending of the pres. p. north of the Humber, and that u for OE. v is found south of the Thames and west of London, provided it is not implied that the one should not be found south of the Humber, or the other north of the Thames. Both in fact occur in Gawayne (Cheshire or Lancashire); and in general the language of the Midlands was characterized by the overlapping of features which distinguish the North from the South.

From what has been said it should be plain that the localization of a piece of Middle English on the evidence of language alone calls for an investigation of scope and delicacy. Where the facts are so complex the mechanical application of rules of thumb may give quick and specious results, but must in the end deaden the spirit of inquiry, which is the best gift a student can bring to the subject.

§ 3. VOCABULARY. The readiness of English speakers to adopt words from foreign languages becomes marked in fourteenth-century writings. But the classical element which is so pronounced in modern literary English is still unimportant. There are few direct borrowings from Latin, and these, like obitte xvi 269, are for the most part taken from the technical language of the Church. The chief sources of foreign words are Norse and French.

(a) Norse. Although many Norse words first appear in English in late texts, they must have come into the spoken language before the end of the eleventh century, because the Scandinavian settlements ceased after the Norman Conquest. The invaders spoke a dialect near enough to OE. to be intelligible to the Angles; and they had little to teach of literature or civilization. Hence the borrowings from Norse are all popular; they appear chiefly in the Midlands and North, where the invaders settled; and they witness the intimate fusion of two kindred languages. From Norse we get such common words as anger, both, call, egg, hil, husband, ill, law, loose, low, meek, take, till (prep.), want, weak, wing, wrong, and even the plural forms of the 3rd personal pronoun (§ 12).

It is not always easy to distinguish Norse from native words, because the two languages were so similar during the period of borrowing, and Norse words were adopted early enough to be affected by all ME. sound changes. But there were some dialectal differences between UN, and OE, in the ninth and tenth centuries, and these afford the best criteria of borrowing. For instance in ME, we have pouz, pof (ON. poh for *pauh) beside pei(h) (OE. pē(a)h) 11 433; ay (ON. ei) 'ever' xv1 293 beside oo (OE. ā) xv b 7; waik (ON. veik-r) viii b 23, where OE. wac would yield wok; the forms wore xvi 17 (note) and wāpin xiv b 15 are from ON. várum, vápn, whereas wêre(n) and wěppen v 154 represent OE. (Anglian) weron, wepn. So we have the pairs awe (ON. agi) 183 and ay (OE. ege) 11 571; neuen (ON. nefna) 'to name' xvII 12 and nem(p)ne (OE. nemnan) II 600; rot (ON. ról) 11 256 and wort (OE. wyrt) viii a 303; sterne, starne (ON. stjarna) xvII 8, 423 and native sterre, starre (OE. steorra); systyr (ON. systir) 1 112 and soster (OE. sweostor) xv g 10; werre, warre (ON. verri) xvi 154 (note), 334 and native werse, wars (OE. wyrsa) xvi 200, xvii 191; wylle (ON. vill-r) v 16 and native wylde (OE. wilde) xv b 19.

Note that in Norse borrowings the consonants g, k remain stops where they are palatalized in English words: garn xvII 298, giue. gete (ON. garn, gefa, geta) beside 3arn, 3iue, for-3ete (OE. gearn, giefan, for-gietan); kirke (ON. kirkja) beside chirche (OE. cirice). Similarly OE. initial sc- regularly becomes ME. sh-, so that most words beginning with sk-, like sky, skin, skyfte vi 209 (English shi/t), skirte (English shirt), are Norse; see the alliterating words in v 99.

There is an excellent monograph by E. Björkman:

Scandinavian Loan-Words in Middle English, 1900.

(b) French. Most early borrowings from French were again due to invasion and settlement. But the conditions of contact were very different. Some were unfavourable to borrowing: the Normans, who were relatively few, were dispersed throughout the country, and not, like the Scandinavians, massed in colonies; and their language had little in common with English. So the number of French words in English texts is small before the late thirteenth and the fourteenth centuries. Other conditions made borrowing inevitable: the French speakers were the governing class; they gradually introduced a new system of administration and new standards of culture; and they had an important literature to which English writers turned for their subject-matter and their models of form. Fourteenth-century translators adopt words from their French originals so freely (see note at p. 234, foot), that written Middle English must give a rather exaggerated impression of the extent of French influence on the spoken language. But a few examples will show how many common words are early borrowings from French: nouns like country, face, place, river, courtesy, honour, joy, justice, mercy, pity, reason, religion, war; adjectives like close, large, poor; and verbs cry, pay, please, save, serve, use.

Anglo-French was never completely homogeneous, and it was constantly supplemented as a result of direct political, commercial, and literary relations with France. Hence words were sometimes adopted into ME. in more than one French dialectal form. For instance, Late Latin ca- became cha- in most French dialects, but remained ca- in the North of France: hence ME. catch and (pur)chase, catel and chatel, kanel 'neck' v 230 and chanel 'channel' xiii a 57. So Northern French preserves initial w-, for which other French dialects substitute g(u): hence Wowayn v 121 beside Gawayn v 4, &c. (see note to v 121). Again, in Anglo-French, a before nasal + consonant alternates with au:—dance: daunce; channe: chaunce; chaunce; chaunge; chambre xvii 281: chaumber II 100. English still has the verbs launch and lance, which are ultimately identical.

As borrowing extended over several centuries, the ME. form sometimes depends on the date of adoption. Thus Latin fidem becomes early French feid, later fei, and later still foi. ME. has both feid and fay, and by Spenser's time foy appears.

The best study of the French element in ME. is still that of D. Behrens: Beiträge zur Geschichte der französischen Sprache in England, 1886. A valuable supplement, dealing chiefly with Anglo-French as the language of the law, is the chapter by F. W. Maitland in The Cambridge History of English Literature, vol. i.

§ 4. HANDWRITING. In the ME. period two varieties of script were in use, both developed from the Caroline minuscule which has proved to be the most permanent contribution of the schools of Charlemagne. The one, cursive and flourished, is common in charters, records, and memoranda; see C. H. Jenkinson and C. Johnson, Court Hand, 2 vols., Oxford 1915. The other, in which the letters are separately written, with few flourishes or adaptations of form in combination, is the 'book hand', so called because it is regularly used for literary texts. Between the extreme types there are many gradations; and fifteenth-century copies, such as the Cambridge MS. of Barbour's Bruce, show an increasing use of cursive forms, which facilitate rapid writing.

The shapes of letters were not always so distinct as they are in print, so that copyists of the time, and even modern editors, are liable to mistake one letter for another. Each hand has its own weaknesses, but the letters most commonly misread are:—

u:n (practically indistinguishable) e.g. menys (MS. mouys) xvi 301; skayned (edd. skayned) v 99; ryue3 or ryne3 v 222 (note). This is only a special case of the confusion of letters and combinations formed by repetition of the downstroke, e.g. u, n, m, and i (which is not always distinguished by a stroke above). Hence dim ii 285 where modern editors have dun, although i has the distinguishing stroke.

 $y: \beta$ e.g. y (MS. β) xiv d ii; see note to xv a 12. Confusion is increased by occasional transference to β of the dot which historically may stand over y. 3 for β initially, as in xvi 170, is more often due to confusion of the letters $\beta: y$ and subsequent preference of 3 for y in spelling (§ 5 i) than to direct confusion of $\beta: 3$, which are not usually very similar in late Middle English script.

b:h e.g. dob (MS. doh) xv b 22; and notes to x11 b 116,

f: f = s e.g. slang (variant flang) x 53.

l: f (= s) e.g. al (edd. as) 11 108.

1: k e. g. kypez (MS. lypez) vi 9.

§ 5. Special Letters. Two letters now obsolete are common in fourteenth-century MSS.: b and 3.

b: 'thorn', is a rune, and stands for the voiced and voiceless sounds now represented by th in this, thin. The gradual displacement of b by th, which had quite a different sound in classical Latin (note to viii a 23), may be traced in the MSS. printed (except x, xii). b remained longest in the initial position, but by the end of the fisheenth century was used chiefly in compendia like be 'the', bt 'that'.

3: called '303' or 'yogh', derives from g, the OE. script form of the letter g. It was retained in ME. after the Caroline form g had become established in vernacular texts, to represent a group of spirant sounds:

(i) The initial spirant in 30ked IX 253 (OE. geoc-), 3ere 1 151 (OE. gēar), where the sound was approximately the same as in our yoke, year. Except in texts specially influenced by the tradition of French spelling, y (which is ambiguous owing to its common use as a vowel = i) is less frequent than 3 initially. Medially the palatal spirant is represented either by 3 or y: e3e (OE. ē(a)3-) xv c 14 beside eyen vIII a 168; ise3e (OE. gesegen) xIV c 88 beside iseye xIV c 16. The medial guttural spirant more commonly develops to w in the fourteenth century: awe (ON. agi) 1 83, felawe (ON. félagi) xIV d 7, halwes (OE. halg-), beside a3- v 267, fela3- v 83, hal3- v 54.

(ii) The medial or final spirant, guttural or palatal, which is lost in standard English, but still spelt in nought, through, night, high: ME. no3t, pur3, ny3t, hy3: OE. noht, purh, niht, hih. The ME. sound was probably like that in German ich, ach. The older spelling with h is occasionally found; more often ch as in mycht x 17; but the French spelling hygains ground throughout the century. Abnormal are write for wrighte xvi 230, wytes, nytes for wyzes, nyzes xv i 19 f.

(iii) As these sounds weakened in late Southern ME., 3 was sometimes used without phonetic value, or at the most to reinforce a long i: e.g. Englissch xI a 28, 37, &c.; ky3n

'kine' 1x 256.

N.B.—Entirely distinct in origin and sound value, but identical in script form, is 3, the minuscule form of z, in Azone (= Azone) 1 105, clyffe3 'cliffs' v 10, &c. It would probably be better to print z in such words.

§ 6. Spelling. Modern English spelling, which tolerates almost any inconsistency in the representation of sounds provided the same word is always spelt in the approved way, is the creation of printers, schools, and dictionaries. A Middle English writer was bound by no such arbitrary Michael of Northgate, whose autograph MS. survives, writes diaknen III 5 and dyacne 9; vyf 22, uif 23, vif 37; bouzond 30 and bousend 34. Yet his spelling is not irrational. The comparative regularity of his own speech, which he reproduced directly, had a normalizing influence; and by natural habit he more often than not solved the same problem of representation in the same way. Scribes, too, like printers in later times, found a measure of consistency convenient, and the spelling of some transcripts, e.g. 1 and x, is very regular. If at first ME. spelling appears lawless to a modern reader, it is because of the variety of dialects represented in literature, the widely differing dates of the MSS. printed, and the tendency of copyists to mix their own spellings with those of their original.

The following points must be kept in mind:

(i) i: y as vowels are interchangeable. In some MSS. (for instance, i) y is used almost exclusively; in others $(v_{III} a)$ it is preferred for distinctness in the neighbourhood of u, n, m, so that the scribe writes hym, but his.

(ii) ie is found in later texts for long close e: chiere xii a

120, flietende XII a 157, diemed XII b 216.

(iii) ui (uy), in the South-West and West Midlands, stands for \bar{u} (sounded as in French amuser): puit XIV c 12; vnkuynde XIV c 103. The corresponding short \bar{u} is spelt u: hull 'hill', &c.

(iv) Quite distinct is the late Northern addition of $\iota(y)$, to indicate the long vowels \bar{a} , \bar{e} , \bar{o} : neid x 18, noyne 'noon' x 67.

(v) ou (ow) is the regular spelling of long \bar{u} (sounded as in too): hous, now, founden, &c.

(vi) o is the regular spelling for short u (sounded as in put) in the neighbourhood of u, m, n, because if u is written in combination with these letters an indistinct series of downstrokes results. Hence love but luf, come infin., sone 'son', dronken 'drunk'. In Ayenbyte o for \tilde{u} is general, e.g. grochinge III 10. In other texts it is common in bote 'but'.

(vii) u:v are not distinguished as consonant and vowel. v is preferred in initial position, u medially or finally: valay 'valley', vnder 'under', vuel (= uvel) 'evil', loue 'love'. (Note that in x11 the MS. distinction of v and u is not reproduced.)

(viii) So i, and its longer form j, are not distinguished as vowel and consonant. In this book i is printed throughout, and so stands initially for the sound of our j in ioy, iuggement, &c.

(ix) c: k for the sounds in kit, cot, are often interchangeable; but k is preferred before palatal vowels e, i(y); and c before o, u. See the alliterating words in v 52, 107, 128,

153, 272, 283.

(x) c: s alternate for voiceless s, especially in French words: sile'city' vII 66, resayue 'receive' v 8, vyse'vice' v 307, falce v 314; but also in race (ON. rás) v 8 beside rase xVII 429.

(xi) s: z (3) are both used for voiced s, the former predominating: kyssedes beside raztez v 283; houzond iii 30 beside housend iii 34. But 3 occasionally appears for voiceless s: (a3-)lez 'awe-less' v 267, forz 'force' 'waterfall' v 105.

(xii) sh: sch: ss are all found for modern sh, OE. sc: shuld 1 50; schert II 230; sserte III 40; but sal 'shall', suld

'should' in Northern texts represent the actual Northern pronunciation in weakly stressed words.

(xiii) v: w: In late Northern MSS. v is often found for initial w: vithall x 9. Valler x 36. The interchange is less common in medial positions: in swndir x 106.

(xiv) wh = qu(h) = w = -wh is a spelling for hw. In the South the aspiration is weakened or lost, and w is commonly written, e.g. viii b. In the North the aspiration is strong, and the sound is spelt qu(h), e.g. quhelis 'wheels' x 17. Both qu- and wh- are found in Gawayne. The development in later dialects is against the assumption that hw-became ku- in pronunciation.

See also § 5.

The whole system of ME. spelling was modelled on French, and some of the general features noted above (e.g. ii, iii, v, vi, x) are essentially French. But, particularly in early MSS., there are a number of exceptional imitations. Sometimes the spelling represents a French scribe's attempt at English pronunciation: foret in xv g 18 stands for forb, where -rp with strongly trilled r was difficult to a foreigner; and occasionally such distortions are found as knith, knit, and even kint (Layamon, Havelok) for knizt, which had two awkward consonant groups. More commonly the copyist, accustomed to write both French and English, chose a French representation for an English sound. So st for ht appears regularly in xv e: sevenist 'sennight', and xv g: iboust 'bought', &c. The explanation is that in French words like beste 'bête', gist 'gît', s became only a breathing before it disappeared; and h in ME. ht weakened to a similar sound, as is shown by the rimes with Kryste 'Christ' in vi 98-107. Hence the French spelling st is occasionally substituted for English ht. Again, in borrowings from French, an + consonant alternates with aun: dance or daunce; change or chaunge (p. 273); and by analogy we have Irlande or Irlaunde in xv d. Another exceptional French usage, -12 for final voiceless -s, is explained at p. 219, top.

§ 7. Sound Changes. (a) Vowel Quantity. No fourteenth-century writer followed the early example of Orm. Marks of quantity are not used in fourteenth-century texts; doubling of long vowels is not an established rule: and there are no strictly quantitative metres, or treatises on pronunciation. Consequently it is not easy to determine how far the quantity of the vowels in any given text has been affected by the very considerable changes that occurred in the late OE, and ME, periods.

Of these the chief are:

(i) In unstressed syllables original long vowels tend to become short. Hence $\check{u}s$ (OE. $\check{u}s$), and $b\check{o}te$ (OE. $b\check{u}tan$) but', which are usually unstressed.

(ii) All long vowels are shortened in stressed close syllables (i.e., usually, when they are followed by two consonants): e.g. kēpen, pa. t. kěple, pp. kěpl; hūsband beside hous; wimmen

(from wif-men) beside wif.

Exception. Before the groups -ld, -nd, -rd, -rd, -mb, a short vowel is lengthened in OE. unless a third consonant immediately follows. Hence, before any of these combinations, length may be retained in ME.: e.g. find 'fiend', binden, child; but children.

(iii) Short vowels \check{a} , \check{e} , \check{o} are lengthened in stressed open syllables (i.e., usually, when they are followed by a single consonant with a following vowel): $t\check{a}|ke>t\acute{a}ke$; $m\check{e}|te>$ mête 'meat'; $br\check{o}|ken>br\acute{o}ken$. To what extent \check{i} and \check{u} were subject to the same lengthening in Northern districts is still disputed. Normally they remain short in South and S. Midlands, e.g. driven pp.; $l\check{o}uen=l\check{u}ven$ 'to love'.

There are many minor rules and many exceptions due to analogy; but roughly it may be taken that ME. vowels are:

short when unstressed;

short before two consonants, except -ld, -nd, -rd, -rd, -mb; long (except i(y), u) before a single medial consonant; otherwise of the quantity shown in the Glossary for the OE, or ON, etymon.

(b) Vowel Quality. The ME. sound-changes are so many and so obscure that it will be possible to deal only with a few that contribute most to the diversity of dialects, and it happens that the particular changes noticed all took effect before the fourteenth century.

(i) OE. and ON. \bar{a} develop to long open \bar{p} (sounded as in broad), first in the South and S. Midlands, later in the N. Midlands. In the North \bar{a} (sounded approximately as in father) remains: e.g. bane 'bone' iv a 54, balde 'bold' iv a 51. The boundary seems to have been a line drawn west from the Humber, and this approximates to the dividing line in the modern dialects. There are of course instances of $\bar{\varrho}$ to the north and of \bar{a} to the south of the Humber, since border speakers would be familiar with both \bar{a} and $\bar{\varrho}$, or would have intermediate pronunciations; and poets might use convenient rimes from neighbouring dialects.

(ii) OE. \tilde{v} (deriving from Germanic \tilde{u} followed by i) appears normally in E. Midlands and the North as \tilde{i} (\tilde{y}): e.g. kyn, hill (OE. cy, hyll). In the South-East, particularly Kent, it appears as \tilde{e} : ken, hell. In the South-West, and in W. Midlands, it commonly appears as u, ui (uv), with the sound of short or long \ddot{u} . London was apparently at a meeting point of the u, i, and e boundaries, because all the forms appear in fourteenth-century London texts, though \vec{u} and \vec{e} gradually give place to \vec{i} . The extension of \vec{u} forms to the North-West is shown by Gawayne, and a line drawn from London to Liverpool would give a rough idea of the boundary. But within this area unrounding of \vec{u} to \vec{i} seems to have been progressive during the century. N.B.—It is dangerous to jump to conclusions from isolated examples. Before r + consonant e is sometimes found in all dialects. e.g. schert 11 230. Church, spelt with u, i, or e, had by etymology OE. i, not y. And in Northern texts there are a number of e-spellings in open syllables, both for OE. v and i.

(c) Consonants:

- (i) f > v (initial): this change, which dates back to OE. times, is carried through in Ayenbyte: e.g. uele uayre uarbisnen = Midland 'fele fayre forbisnes'. In some degree it extended over the whole of the South.
- (ii) s > z (initial), parallel to the change of f to v, is regularly represented in spelling in the Ayenbyle: zome 'some', &c. Otherwise s is rare in spelling, but the voiced initial sound probably extended to most of the Southern districts where it survives in modern dialect.
- § 8. Pronunciation. One of the best ways of studying ME, pronunciation is to learn by heart a few lines of verse in a consistent dialect, and to correct their repetition as more precise knowledge is gained. The spelling can be relied on as very roughly phonetic if the exceptional usages noted in § 6 are kept in mind. Supplementary and controlling information is provided by the study of rimes, of alliteration, and of the history of English and French sounds.

Consonants. Where a consonant is clearly pronounced in Modern English, its value is nearly enough the same for ME. But modern spelling preserves many consonants that have been lost in speech, and so is rather a hindrance than a help to the beginner in ME. For instance, the initial sounds in ME. knist and nist were not the same, for knist alliterates always with k- (v 43, 107) and ni3t with n-(VII 149); and initial wr- in wringe, wriste is distinct from mitial r- in ring, rist (cp. alliteration in vin a 168, v 136). Nor can wrizte rime with write in a careful fourteenthcentury poem. In words like lerne, doghter, r was pronounced with some degree of trilling. And although there are signs of confusion in late MSS. (iv a, xvi, xvii), double consonants were generally distinguished from single: sonne 'sun' was pronounced sun-ne, and so differed from sone 'son', which was pronounced su-ne (§ 6 vi).

Vowels. Short vowels \check{a} , \check{e} , \check{b} , \check{u} (§ 6 vi) were pronounced respectively as in French patte, English pet, pit, pot, put. Final unstressed -e was generally syllabic, with a sound something like the final sound in China (§ 9).

The long vowels \bar{a} , \bar{i} , \bar{u} (§ 6 v) were pronounced approximately as in father, machine, crude. But \bar{e} and \bar{o} present special difficulties, because the spelling failed to make the broad distinction between open \bar{p} and close \bar{e} , open \bar{e} and close \bar{e} —a distinction which, though relative only (depending on the greater or less opening of the mouth passage), is proved to have been considerable by ME. rimes, and by the earlier and subsequent history of the long sounds represented in ME. by e, o.

(i) Open $\bar{\varrho}$ (as in broad) derives:

(a) from OE. ā, according to § 7 b i: OE. brād, bāt, báld > ME. brēd, bēt, bēld > NE. broad, boat, bold. The characteristic modern spelling is thus oa.

(b) from OE. δ in open syllables according to § 7 a iii: OE. brŏcen > ME. brόke(n) > NE. broken. Note.—In many texts the rimes indicate a distinction in pronunciation between $\bar{\varrho}$ derived from OE. \bar{a} and $\bar{\varrho}$ derived from OE. δ , and the distinction is still made in NW. Midland dialects.

(ii) Close \(\bar{\rho}\) (pronounced rather as in French beau than as in standard English so which has developed a diphthong \(\rho u\)), derives from OE. \(\bar{\rho}\): OE. \(\gar{g\delta}s\), \(\delta\deltam\), \(g\delta\delta\delta\), NE. \(\gar{g\delta}s\), \(\delta\deltam\), \(\gar{g\delta}d\delta\). The characteristic modern spelling is \(\rho\).

Note.—(1) After consonant +w, $\bar{\varrho}$ often develops in ME. to $\bar{\varrho}$: OE. $(al)sw\bar{a}$, $tw\bar{a} > \text{ME}$. $(al)s\bar{\varrho}$, $tw\bar{\varrho} > \text{later}$ $(al)s\bar{\varrho}$, $tw\bar{\varrho}$.

(2) In Scotland and the North o becomes regularly a sound (perhaps \(\vec{u}\)) spelt \(u: \vec{god} > \vec{gud}, \(b\vec{lod} > b\vec{lod}, \vec{&c}.\)

Whereas the distribution of $\bar{\varrho}$ and $\bar{\varrho}$ is practically the same for all ME. dialects, the distinction of open $\bar{\varrho}$ and close $\bar{\varrho}$ is not so regular, chiefly because the sounds from which they derive were not uniform in OE. dialects. For simplicity, attention will be confined to the London dialect, as the forerunner of modern Standard English.

- (iii) South-East Midland open \(\bar{\epsilon} \) (pronounced as in there) derives:
 - (a) from OE. (Anglian) $\vec{x}$: Anglian $d\vec{x}l > SE. Midl. $d\vec{t}l > NE. $deal$;
 - (b) from OE. ēa: OE. bēatan > ME. bēte(n) > NE. beat;
 - (c) from OE. \(\vec{e}\) in open syllables according to \(\vec{q}\) 7 a iii: OE. m\(\vec{e}te > ME. m\(\vec{e}te > NE. meat.\)

The characteristic modern spelling is ea.

- (iv) South-East Midland close $\bar{\epsilon}$ (pronounced as in French élé) derives:
 - (a) from OE. (Anglian) ē of various origins: Anglian hēr, mēta(n), (ge)lēfa(n) > SE. Midl. hēre, mēte(n), lēue(n) > NE. here, meet, (be)lieve.

(b) from OE. ēo: OE. dēop, hēof > ME. dēp, bēf (hief) > NE. deep, thief.

The characteristic modern spellings are ee, and ie which already in ME. often distinguishes the close sound (§ 6 ii).

Note.—The distinction made above does not apply in South-Eastern (Kentish), because this dialect has ME. ea, ia, ya for OE. ēa (iii b), and OE. ē for Anglian ē (iii a). Nor does it hold for South-Western, because the West Saxon dialect of OE. had geliefan for Anglian gelēfa(n) (iv a). West Saxon also had strēt, -drēdan, where normal Anglian had strēt, -drēda(n), but the distribution of the place-names Stration beside Stretton, and of the pa. t. and pp. dradd(e) beside dredd(e) (p. 270 and n.), shows that the ē forms were common in the extreme South and the East of the Anglian area; so that in fourteenth-century London both ē and ē might occur in such words, as against regular West Midland and Northern ē.

In NE. Midland and Northern texts some \bar{e} sounds which we should expect to be distinguished as open and close rime together, especially before dental consonants, e. g. $3\bar{e}de$ (OE.

ēode): lēde (Anglian læda(n)) 1 152-3.

§ 9. INFLEXIONS. Weakening and levelling of inflexions is continuous from the earliest period of English. The strong stress falling regularly on the first or the stem syllable produced as reflex a tendency to indistinctness in the unstressed endings. The disturbing influence of foreign conquest played a secondary but not a negligible part, as may be seen from a comparison of some verbal forms in the North and the N. Midlands, where Norse influence was strongest, with those of the South, where it was inconsiderable:

	Normal	Early Sth.	Early Nth. and	d Old
	OE.	ME.	N.Midl.	Norse.
Infin	drīfa n	driue(n)	driue	drifa
Pres. p	drīfende	driuinde	drivande	drifandi
Pp. strong .	gedrifen	ydriue	driuen	drifenn

and although tangible evidence of French influence on the flexional system is wanting (for occasional borrowings like gowtes artelykes ix 314 are mere literary curiosities), every considerable settlement of foreign speakers, especially when they come as conquerors, must shake the traditions of the language of the conquered. A third cause of uncertainty was the interaction of English dialects in different stages of development.

The practical sense of the speakers controlled and balanced these disruptive factors. There is no better field than Middle English for a study of the processes of vigorous growth: the regularizing of exceptional and inconvenient forms; the choice of the most distinctive among a group of alternatives; the invention of new modes of expression; the discarding of what has become useless.

At the beginning of the fourteenth century the inflexional endings are: -e; -en; -ene (weak gen. pl.); -er (comparative); -es; -est; with -eh, -ede (-de, -te), -ed (-d, -t). -ynge (-inde, -ende, -ande), which are verbal only.

Note.—(a) Sometimes one of these inflexions may be substituted for another: e.g. when -es replaces -e as the Northern ending of the 1st sg. pres. ind. Such analogical substitutions must be distinguished from phonetic developments.

(b) In disyllabic inflexions like -ede, -ynge (-ande), final -e is lost early in the North. In polysyllables it is dropped everywhere during the century.

(c) The indistinct sound of flexional -e- covered by a consonant is shown by spellings with -i-, -y-: woundis x 51; madist xi b 214; blyndip xi b 7; fulfillid xvi 6; etin xiv b 76; brokynne xvi 195. And, especially in West Midland texts, -us, -un (-on) appear for -es, -en: mannus xi b 234; foundun xi a 47; laghlon vii 119. Complete syncope sometimes occurs: days 1 198, &c.

Otherwise all the inflexions except -e, -en, are fairly stable throughout the century.

-en: In the North-en is found chiefly in the strong pp., where it is stable. In the South (except in the strong pp.) it is better preserved, occurring rarely in the dat. sg. of adjectives, e. g. onen in 4, dat. pl. of nouns, e. g. diaknen in 5, and in the infinitive; more commonly in the weak pl. of nouns, where it is stable, and in the pa. t. pl., where it alternates with -e. In the Midlands -en, alternating with -e, is also the characteristic ending of the pres. ind. pl. As a rule (where the reduced ending -e is found side by side with -en) -e is used before words beginning with a consonant, and -en before words beginning with a vowel or h, to avoid hiatus. But that the preservation of -en does not depend purely on phonetic considerations is proved by its regular retention in the Northern strong pp., and its regular reduction to -e in the corresponding Southern form.

-o: Wherever -en was reduced, it reinforced final -e, which so became the meeting point of all the inflexions that were to disappear before Elizabethan times.

-e was the ending of several verbal forms; of the weak adjective and the adjective pl.; of the dat. sg. of nouns; and of adverbs like faste, deepe, as distinguished from the corresponding adjectives fast, deep.

That -e was pronounced is clear from the metres of Chaucer, Gower, and most other Southern and Midland writers of the time. For centuries the rhythm of their verse was lost because later generations had become so used to final -e as a mere spelling that they did not suspect that it was once syllabic.

But already in fourteenth-century manuscripts there is evidence of uncertainty. Scribes often omit the final vowel where the rhythm shows that it was syllabic in the original (see the language notes to 1, 11). Conversely, in Gawayne forms like burne (OE. beorn), race (ON. rás), hille (OE. hyll) appear in nominative and accusative, where historically there should be no ending. The explanation is that, quite apart from the workings of analogy, which now extended and now curtailed its historical functions, -e was everywhere weakly pronounced, and was dropped at different rates in the various dialects. In the North it hardly survives the middle of the century (iv a, x). In the N. Midlands its survival is irregular. In the South and S. Midlands it is fairly well preserved till the end of the century. But everywhere the proportion of flexionless forms was increasing. It may be assumed that, in speech as in verse, final -e was lost phonetically first before words beginning with a vowel or h.

§ 10. Nouns: Gender, which in standard West Saxon had been to a great extent grammatical (i. e. dependent on the forms of the noun), was by the fourteenth century natural (i. e. dependent on the meaning of the noun). This change had accompanied and in some degree facilitated the transfer of nearly all nouns to the strong masculine type, which was the commonest and best defined in late OE.:

OE. ME.
Sg. nom. acc. eniht knizt Pl. nom. acc. enihtas kniztes
gen. enihtes kniztes gen. enihta kniztes
dat. enihte knizte dat. enihtum kniztes

In the North final -e of the dat. sg. was regularly dropped early in the fourteenth century, and even in the South the dat. sg. is often uninflected, probably owing to the influence of the accusative. In the plural the inflexion of the nom. acc. spreads to all cases; but in early texts, and relatively late in the South, the historical forms are occasionally found, e.g. gen. pl. cniste (MS. cnistes) xv g 30 (note), dat. pl. diaknen III 5.

Survivals: (i) The common mutated plurals man: men, fot: fet, &c., are preserved, and in viii b a gen. pl. menne (OE. manna) occurs; ky pl. of cow forms a new double pl. kyn, see (iii) below; hend pl. of hand is Norse, cp. xvi 75

(ii) Some OE. neuters like shep 'sheep' viii b 18, zer 'year' ii 492, /ing ii 218, folk ii 389, resist the intrusion of the masculine pl. -es in nominative and accusative. Pl. hors ii 304, xiii a 34 remains beside horses xiv b 73; but deores 'wild animals' occurs at xv b 29, where Modern English preserves deer.

(iii) In the South the old weak declension with pl. -en persists, though by the fourteenth century the predominance of the strong type is assured. The weak forms occur not only where they are historically justified, e.g. eyzen (OE. ēagan) ii 111, but also by analogy in words like honden (OE. pl. honda) ii 79, tren (OE. pl. trēo) xiii a 51, platen (OFr. plate) xv g 4. The inflexion still survives in three double plural formations: children viii b 70 beside childer (OE. pl. cildru); bretheren viii a 201 beside brether xvii 320 (OE. pl. brōbor); and kyzn ix 256 for ky (cp. (i) above). The OE. weak gen. pl. in -ena leaves its traces in the South, e.g. knauene viii b 56, xv h 4, and unhistorical lordene viii b 77.

(iv) The group fader, moder, broher, doghter commonly show the historical flexionless gen. sg., e.g. doghtyr arme 1 136; moder wombe x1 b 29 f.; brother hele x11 a 18; Fadir voice XVI 79.

(v) The historical gen. sg. of old strong feminines remains in soule dede (OE. sāwle) 1 212; but Lady day (OE. hlæfdigan dæg) 1 242 is a survival of the weak fem. gen. sg.

§ 11. Adjectives. Separate flexional forms for each gender are not preserved in the fourteenth century; but until its end the distinction of strong and weak declensions remains in the South and South Midlands, and is well marked in the careful verse of Chaucer and Gower. The strong is the normal form. The weak form is used after demonstratives, the, his, &c., and in the vocative. As types god (OE. god) 'good' and grene (OE. grēne) 'green' will serve, because in OE. grēne had a vowel-ending in the strong nom. sg. masc., while god did not. The ME. paradigms are:

Singular.		Plural.
Strong	Weak	Strong and Weak
god	godë	godė
gren e	gren ë	grenė

Examples: Strong sg. a gret serpent (OE. grēat) xII b 72; an unkinde man (OE. uncynde) xII b I; a stille water (OE. stille) xII a 83. Weak sg. The grete gastli serpent xII b 126; hire oghne hertes lif xII a 4; O lef lif (where the metre indicates leue for the original) II 102. Strong pl. her wer wide wones II 365. Weak pl. the smale stones xII a 84.

Note that strong and weak forms are identical in the plural; that even in the singular there is no formal distinction when the OE. strong masc. nom. ended in a vowel (grēne); that monosyllables ending in a vowel (e.g. fre), polysyllables, and participles, are usually invariable; and that regular dropping of final -e levels all distinctions, so that the North and N. Midlands early reached the relatively flexionless stage of Modern English

Survivals. The Ayenbyte shows some living use of the adjective inflexions. Otherwise the survivals are limited to set phrases, e.g. gen. sg. nones cunnes 'of no kind', enes cunnes 'of any kind', xv g 20, 22. That the force of the inflexion was lost is shown by the early wrong analysis no skynnes, al skynnes, &c.

Definite Article. Parallel to the simplification of the adjective, the full OE. declension $s\bar{e}$, $s\bar{e}o$, pzt, &c., is reduced to invariable pe. The Ayenbyte alone of our specimens keeps some of the older distinctions. Elsewhere traces appear in set phrases, e.g. neut. sg. pat, pet in pat on 'the one', pat oper 'the other' v 344, and, with wrong division, pet ton xi b 27.

the toper 1x 4: neut. sg. dat. pen (OE. pæm), with wrong division, in atte nale (for at pen ale) viii a 109.

§ 12. Pronouns. In a brilliant study (Progress in Language, London 1894) Jespersen exemplifies the economy and resources of English from the detailed history of the Pronoun. first and second persons fourteenth-century usage does not differ greatly from that of the Authorized Version of the Bible. But the pronoun of the third person shows a variety of developments. In the singular an objective case replaces, without practical disadvantages, the older accusative and dative: him (OE. hine and him), her(e) (OE. hie and hiere), (h)it (OE. hit and him). The possessive his still serves for the neuter as well as the masculine, e.g. pat ryuer ... chaungep hys fordes xiii a 55 f.; though an uninflected neuter possessive hit occasionally appears in the fourteenth century. In the plural, where one would expect objective him from the regular OE. dat. pl. him, clearness is gained by the choice of unambiguous hem, from an OE. dat. pl. by-form heom.

But as we see from Orfco, ll. 408, 446, 185, in some dialects the nom. sg. masc. (OE. $h\bar{e}$), nom. sg. fem. (OE. $h\bar{e}o$), and nom. pl. (OE. $h\bar{e}e$), had all become ME. $h\bar{e}e$. The disadvantages of such ambiguity increased as the flexional system of nouns and adjectives collapsed, and a remedy was found in the adoption of new forms. For the nom. sg. fem., s(c)he, s(c)he, (mostly Northern), come into use, which are probably derived from $si\bar{e}$, $ss\bar{o}$, the corresponding case of the definite article. The innovation was long resisted in the South, and ho, an unambiguous development of $he\bar{o}$, remains late in W. Midland texts like Pearl.

In the nom. pl. ambiguous he was replaced by bet, the nom. pl. of the Norse definite article. This is the regular form in all except the Southern specimens II (orig.), III, XIII. And although the full series of Norse forms hei, heir, he(i)m is found in Orm at the beginning of the thirteenth century, Chaucer and other Midland writers of the fourteenth century as a rule have only hei, with native English her(e), hem in the oblique cases. (For details see the language note to each specimen.)

The poss. pl. her(e), beside hor(e), was still liable to confusion with the obj. sg. fem. her(e), cp. 11 92. Consequently this was the next point to be gained by the Norse forms, e.g. in vii 181. In the Northern texts x, xvi, xvii, all from late MSS., the Norse forms pai, pa(i)r, pa(i)me are fully established; but (h)em, which was throughout unambiguous, survived into modern dialects in the South and Midlands.

Note the reduced nominative form a 'he', 'they' in xii; and the objective $his(\epsilon)$ 'her', 'them' in iii, which has not been satisfactorily explained.

Relative: The general ME. relative is pat, representing all genders and cases (note to xv i 4). Sometimes definition is gained by adding the personal pronoun: pat...he (sche) = 'who'; pat...it = 'which'; pat...his = 'whose'; pat...him = 'whom', &c.; e.g. a well, pat in the day it is so cold Ix 5-6, cp. v 127 (note); oon That with a spere was thirled his brest-boon 'one whose breast-bone was pierced with a spear', Knight's Tale 1851. For the omission of pat see note to xiii a 36.

In later texts, which, properly an interrogative, appears commonly as a relative, both with personal and impersonal antecedents, e.g. Alceone... which... him loveth xii a 3 ff.; pat steede... fro whilke pe feende fell xvi 13 f. Under the influence of French lequel, &c., which is often compounded with the article pe, e.g. a gret serpent... the which Bardus anon up drouh xii b 72 f.; no thing of newe, in the whiche the hereres myghten hauen... solace ix 275 f. Further compounding with pat is not uncommon, e.g. the queen of Amazoine, the whiche pat maketh hem to ben kept in closs ix 190 f.

More restricted is the relative use of whos, whom, which are originally interrogatives, though both are found very early in ME. as personal relatives. Examples of the objective after prepositions are: my Lady, of quom ... v1 93; God, fro whom ... 1x 328 f.; my Sone ... in whome xv1 81 f. The possessive occurs in Seynt Magne ... yn whos wurschyp 1 90 f.; I am ... the same, whos good x11 b 78 f.; and, compounded with the article, in Morpheüs, the whos nature x11 a 113. The nominative who retains its interrogative meaning, e.g. But who ben more heretikis? x1 b 77 f.; or is used as an indefinite, e.g. a tasse of grene stickes ... to selle, who that wolde hem beie x11 b 22 ff.; but it is never used as a relative; and probably what in xv1 174 is better taken as in apposition to myghtis than as a true relative.

- § 13. Verb. Syntactically the most interesting point in the history of the ME. verb is the development of the compound tenses with have, be, will, shall, may, might, mun, can, gan. But the flexional forms of the simple tenses are most subject to local variation, and, being relatively common, afford good evidence of dialect. Throughout the period, despite the crossings and confusions that are to be expected in a time of uncertainty and experiment, the distinction between strong and weak verbs is maintained; and it will be convenient to deal first with the inflexions common to both classes, and then to notice the forms peculiar to one or the other.
- (i) The Infinitive had already in Northumbrian OF. lost final -n: $dr\bar{\imath}/a$ 'to drive'. Hence in ME, of the North and N. Midlands the ending is -e, which becomes silent at varying rates during the fourteenth century; e.g. dryue 1 171, to luf iv a 17. In the South and S. Midlands the common ending is -e, e.g. telle III 3, which usually remains syllabic to the end of the century; but -(e)n is also found, especially in verse to make a rime or to avoid hiatus: e.g. sein (: a3ein) xII a 27; to parte and 3iven half his good xII b 201.

(ii) The Present Participle (OE. drifende) in the North and N. Midlands ends in -and(e), though -yng(e), -ing(e) is beginning to appear in v, vII, xVI, xVII. In S. Midlands the historical ending -ende still prevails in Gower; but Chaucer has more commonly -yng(e); and in IX, XI, both late texts, only -yng(e) appears. In the South -yng(e) is established as early as the beginning of the century, e.g. in II.

N.B. Carefully distinguish the verbal noun which always ends in -yng(e). Early confusion resulted in the transference of this ending to the participle.

(iii) Present Indicative.

(a) Singular: OE. 1 drife, 2 drif(e)s(t), 3 drif(e)d (late Northumbrian drifes).

In ME. -e, -est, -eb are still the regular endings for the South and most of the Midlands. Shortened forms like fint = findeb II 239; stant = standeb XII a 74 are commonest in the South, where in OE. they were a feature of West Saxon and Kentish as distinguished from Anglian. Distinct are the Northern and N. Midland mas(e) 'makes', tas 'takes', with contracted infinitives ma, ta; and bus 'behoves', which Chaucer uses in his imitation of Northern English, Reeves Tale 172.

In N. Midlands the modern 3rd sg. -(e)s is common (v, vi, but not in earlier 1). Farther North it is invariable (1v, x, xvi, xvii). The distribution of -es as the ending of the 2nd sg. is the same, and it is extended even to the 1st person.

(b) Plural: OE. drifad (late Northumbrian drifas).

Only Southern ME. retains the OE. inflexion as -eb (11, 111, x111). The Midland ending, whence the modern form derives, is -e(n); though in the N. Midlands -es occasionally appears. Northern has regularly -es, unless the personal pronoun immediately precedes, when the ending is -e, as in the Midlands, e.g. bei make xv1 103.

N.B. In applying this test, care must be taken to exclude inversions, which are subject to special rules; to distinguish the subjunctive (e.g. falle XIII a 52, drawe XIII b 6) from the indicative; and, generally, to choose examples that are syntactically free from doubt, because concord of number is not always logical in ME.

SUMMARY.

	OE.	ME.
	-	South	S. Midl.	N. Midl.	North
1. sg.	drif-e	-e	-e	-(e)	(e) or (e)s
2.	drīf-es(t)	-est	-est	$-\epsilon s(t)$	-es
3.	drif-ed (Nihe.	s) -ep	-ep	-cp or -es	-es
pl.	drif-ad (Ntha	s)-ep	-e(n)	-e(n) or $-es$	-es or -(c)

- (iv) The Imperative Plural might be expected to agree with the pres. ind. pl. In fact it has the ending -eb not merely in the South, but in most of the Midlands, e.g. I, VIII, Gower and Chaucer. Northern and NW. Midland (v, vI, xIV b, xVI) have commonly -es. But Chaucer, Gower, and most late ME. texts have, beside the full inflexion, an uninflected form, e.g. vndo xVI 182.
 - (v) Past Tense.
- (a) Strong: The historical distinctions of stem-vowel were often obscured in ME. by the rise of new analogical forms, the variety of which can best be judged from the detailed evidence presented in the New English Dictionary under each verb. But, for the common verbs or classes, the South and S. Midlands preserved fairly well the OE. vowel distinction of past tense singular and plural; while North and N. Midlands usually preferred the form proper to the singular for both singular and plural, e.g. bey bygan 172; bey ne blan 173; thai slang x 53, where OE. has sg. gan: gunnon; blan: blunnon; ON. slong: slungu.

(b) Weak: In the South and Midlands the weak pa. t. 2nd sg. usually ends in -est (N. Midland also -es): hadest 11 573; cursedest 1 130; kyssedes, raztez v 283. In the North, and sometimes in N. Midland, it ends in -(c): hou hadde xv1 219. The full ending of the pa. t. pl. is fairly common in the South, S. Midlands, and NW. Midlands: wenten 11 185, hedden 111 42, maden xii b 196, sayden vi 174.

(vi) Past Participle (Strong): OE. (ge)drifen.

In the North and N. Midlands the ending -en is usually preserved, but the prefix v- is dropped. In the South the type is y-drive, with prefix and without final n. S. Midland fluctuates—for example, Gower rarely, Chaucer commonly, uses the prefix y-.

(vii) Weak Verbs with -i- suffix: In OE. weak verbs of Class II formed the infinitive in -ian, e.g. acsian, lufian, and the t appeared also in the pres. ind. and imper. pl. acsiad and pres. p. acsiende. In ME. a certain number of French verbs with an -i- suffix reinforced this class. In the South and W. Midlands the -i- of the suffix is often preserved, e.g. aski 11 467, louy v 27, and is sometimes extended to forms in which it has no historical justification, e.g. pp. spuryed v 25. In the North and the E. Midlands the forms without i are generalized.

NOTE

THIS glossary does not aim at completeness, and it is not primarily a glossary of rare or 'hard' words. A good working knowledge of Middle English depends less on the possession of an abstruse vocabulary than on familiarity with the ordinary machinery of expression—with the precise forms and meanings that common words may assume; with the uses of such innocent-looking little words as the prepositions of and for; with idiomatic phrases, some fresh-minted and some worn thin, but all likely to recur again and again in an age whose authors took no pains to avoid usual or hackneyed turns of expression. These are the features of the older language which an English reader is predisposed to pass over, satisfied with a half-recognition: and space seldom permits of their adequate treatment in a compendious general dictionary or the word-list to a single text. So in making a glossary for use with a book itself designed to be a preparation for the reading of complete texts, I have given exceptionally full treatment to what may rightly be called the backbone of the language.

Brief indications of the etymology of each word are given, with references in difficult cases to the Oxford English Dictionary (N.E.D.). Apart from their usefulness as a basis for exercises in phonology and the analysis of vocabulary, these will serve to differentiate words distinct in origin which coincide in some of their forms or spellings. The Old English or Old French forms cited are those that best illustrate the Middle English; in consequence the Old English forms frequently differ from normal West-Saxon, and the Old French forms are especially those of the French current in England (Anglo-French is rarely specified). Old Norse words have usually been cited in the normal spelling (e.g. of Zoëga's Old Icelandic Dictionary). Accordingly, long vowels in Old Norse words are marked as in $bra\bar{\delta}r$. In Old English words stable long vowels are marked as in brād; uncertain quantity or probable shortening in Old English times is marked as in adraedd; vowels that were lengthened in the Old English period (e.g. before ld, mb, nd) are marked as in cáld, climban, bindan.

For the convenience of beginners the glossary is liberally supplied with cross references, and the prefixed Table summarizes the principal variations of form or spelling. Particular attention should be given to the following points of arrangement: (i) 3 has a separate alphabetical place following G; cross-references to gh are not given: (ii) D has a separate alphabetical place following T; variation between h and th is disregarded, and initial Th is entered under D: (iii) U, V are alternative forms of the same letter; variation between them is disregarded, and initial U is entered under V: (iv) Y initially has its usual place; but medial or final Y will be found in the climbatical position of I.
